Treasury Plan May Delay Boost In Payroll Tax

Roosevelt Indorses Morgenthau Proposal Drastically Reducing Reserve Fund

Proposals for temporary reduction, in the interest of business recovery, of the automatic 1 per cent increase in the old-age pay roll tax next January 1 were presented to Congress for its consideration yesterday by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

Although he did not recommend that the tax rise be scaled down, he raised the question "whether a substantial increase in the tax rate should be allowed to occur at the present stage of business recovery." He added:

"The depressing effect of the present disturbed state of world affairs upon the American economy makes it especially urgent that at this time we do not place any avoidable burden on American productive enterprise."

Submits Four Plans

Morgenthau's statement was made before the House Ways and Means committee, which is holding hearings on President Roosevelt's program for liberalization and extension of social security benefits.

His suggestions took members of Congress by surprise. Democrats reserved comment. Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee, however, were jubilant. In a joint statement, they declared Morgenthau finally had acknowledged that Republican criticisms were justified.

A recommendation by Morgenthau that the enormous old-age benefit reserve provided for by the social security act be abandoned, and a modified "pay-as-you go" plan substituted, was the chief source of Republican gratification. This had been the Republican program. Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, a consistent critic of the large reserve plan, described Morgenthau's proposal as "the healthiest thing (from a business aid standpoint) that has happened in a long time."

Morgenthau submitted four alternative plans with regard to the old-age pay roll tax. Two of these called for a temporary leveling off of the 1 per cent rise in the tax which otherwise will go into effect automatically January 1. Under one of the proposals the increase would become effective according to schedule, and under the last plan it would be suspended temporarily.

Backed by President

Nevertheless, all four plans contemplate an increase in the tax, which now is 2 per cent—1 per cent on employe and 1 on employer—to 4 per cent on January 1, 1943, and subsequent 1 per cent increases each three years until the levy ultimately reaches the full 6 per cent— 3 on employe and 3 on employer—on January 1, 1949.

The President made clear at his press conference that Morgenthau's suggestions had his support. Similar assurance came from the Social Security Board.

In place of the huge income-producing reserve or endowment, held likely to attain $47,000,000,000 or more eventually, designed to help support the old-age benefit system, Morgenthau recommended a comparatively small reserve, simply to protect the old-age plan against possible insolvency. This contingency reserve, he suggested, should not be more than "three times the highest prospective annual benefits in the ensuing five years."

Reversal of Philosophy

The proposal involves a complete reversal of the whole philosophy on which the old-age benefit system originally was set up. It involves also, in effect, abandonment once and for all of the original idea that

Blocs Resort To Log-Rolling On Farm Bill

Urban House Group Seeks Trade; G. O. P. Delays Measure

By Robert C. Albright.

The largest farm appropriation bill in history was checked in its course toward passage last night by a riddling Republican fire of points of order that blocked leadership plans for an extended night session.

Open "log-rolling" between city and farm bloc members marked an uproarious approach to the most controversial item in the huge bill —$250,000,000 for unbudgeted parity price payments to farmers.

City Democrats bluntly demanded from farm members "assurances" of support for the President's $150,000,000 deficiency relief appropriation in return for urban aid in the parity price drive.

The $1,060,000,000 bill, burdened with $750,000,000 in direct soil conservation and parity benefits to farmers, and threatening all hopes of the counter Congressional economy movement, is expected to reach a vote late today.

Before passage, it must run the gantlet of an effort to boost it still further. Representative Ferguson (Democrat), of Oklahoma, will offer an amendment to double the parity price provision to a total of $500,000,000, completely outside the budget.

Rumania Faces Loss Of Minorities

Autonomy Sought

By the Associated Press.

Budapest, March 24.—Autonomy for Hungarian and Germanic minorities in Rumania was reported tonight to be under informal preliminary discussion among the Berlin, Budapest and Bucharest governments.

Hungarian hopes rose that, moving at Germany's side, she would achieve a peaceful penetration of Rumania and Slovakia as well.

Officials said military measures were being ended and the nation would be back on a peace-time military basis soon. Soldiers started returning from the Rumanian frontier.

The German minister to Budapest visited the Hungarian office twice tonight and was believed by diplomatic circles to have asked an explanation of fighting on the Carpatho-Ukraine-Slovak frontier.

Agreement Signed

Germany signed an agreement with Slovakia yesterday guaranteeing the integrity of the former Czecho-Slovak territory's frontiers for 25 years. The Hungarian view, however, was that the frontier of Slovakia with Hungarian-annexed Carpatho-Ukraine had not yet been determined.

Looking eastward to Rumania, Hungarian revisionists hope 1,200,000 Hungarians and 250,000 Saxons (whose ancestors came from Germany centuries ago), will win rights from Rumania to govern themselves and practice the political doctrines of their fatherlands.

Political implications of such a campaign would be far-reaching, they admitted, as such large islands of Hungarians and Saxons looking from Rumania to Berlin and Budapest for leadership might be the entering wedge for peaceful political and economic domination of Rumania by Hitler and his Hungarian friends.

Hungarian officials and press made it clear Hungary, in addition, hopes eventually to take Slovakia into her realm despite the Slovak-German treaty signed yesterday providing for German military protection for Slovakia.

Corridor to Hungary

Newspapers stressed the economic interdependence of Slovakia and Hungary and expressed hopes Slovakia soon would agree to being absorbed back into her pre-war status as a part of the Hungarian kingdom.

With Germany's support, Hungary already has gained about 8,800 square miles with 1,500,000 inhabitants in the break-up of the Czecho-Slovak republic. But she wants the remaining 14,600 square miles of Slovakia with its 2,450,000 inhabitants.

Disappointed that Transylvania, won by Rumania after the World War, remains Rumanian, Hungarian revisionists hope the Hungarian minority will win autonomy in Ru-

Butler Balks Kidnaping of Bishop's Kin

Police Guard Home of Manning Grandchild After Servant Spurns $1,000 Bribe for Her

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 24.—Police reported the 3-year-old granddaughter of Episcopal Bishop William T. Manning was saved from kidnaping tonight by the butler in her home, who frightened away two would-be kidnapers after refusing a $1,000 bribe.

The child is Elizabeth Coale, daughter of Griffith B. Coale, an artist, who lives at 125 West Eleventh street, Greenwich Village.

Bishop Manning is leader of the 5,000-square mile diocese of New York, reputedly the wealthiest in his church, and is rector of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine on Morningside Heights.

Coale is the husband of the former Elizabeth Manning, one of the bishop's two daughters.

Both parents are socially prominent, being members, respectively, of the exclusive Colonial Lords of Manor and the National Society of Colonial Dames.

Two Rang Doorbell

The butler who foiled the abduction was Thomas Wilson, colored.

Police said two men rang the doorbell of the Coale home about 7 p. m., while the Coales were out at dinner with Newbold Morris, president of the city council.

A special police guard was immediately thrown around the home.

The Coales were married in May, 1933, in the Chapel of St. John the Divine, with Bishop Manning presiding.

Coale, 48, and a prominent landscape artist, has paintings on exhibition in the city's largest bank buildings, in the Maryland Historical Society and at Johns Hopkins University. A native of Baltimore, he studied in Munich and Paris.

The little girl and her nurse were on an upper floor when the doorbell rang.

'Is Girl Asleep?'

One of the pair, who, the butler said, appeared to be dark-complexioned, asked:

"Is Mrs. Coale the daughter of Bishop Manning?"

"Yes," the butler said he replied. "She has a little girl, hasn't she?" the man asked.

"Yes."

"Is the girl asleep with the nurse?"

The man pulled a wallet out of his pocket, the butler said, and whispered:

"If you play ball with me, there's $1,000 in it if we get the child."

The stranger then pulled two $500 bills out of the wallet, the butler said, and offered them to him.

"Get away or I'll call the police," the butler said, and the two men ran to the street. A moment later, he told police, he heard the slam of an auto door and the sound of a car moving away.

Wilson immediately called police, and the Coales hurried home with Morris.

Madrid Reported Surrendered To Gen. Franco

London (Saturday), March 25 (I.N.S.).—The London Daily Mail reported today from St. Jean de Luz, France, that Madrid has surrendered to Generalissimo Franco.

The first detachment of nationalist forces were reported already in Madrid, the dispatch stated, and the insurgent main army is ready to march into the city later in the day.

The Mail added that Burgos denials of the surrender were believed to have been issued because Franco did not wish the news disclosed for the time being.

Banker, 'Glad to Be Alive,' Relates Story of Teller's Death in Hail of Bullets

By Bob Nelson.

President, Powell First National Bank.

Powell, Wyo., March 24 (AP).—The front door of our bank was open today about 1:30 p. m. when in stepped Earl Durand, the Tarzan whom all the possemen had been hunting.

I had known him for years. He said "Hello, Nelson." He looked a bit wild but his hair, that he usually wore long, had been cut some time this winter.

There were four of us bank employes there and five customers, two of whom I remember, Dr. J. C. Stahn and a farmer, Harry Hecht. The other bank employes were John Gawthrop, teller; Maurice Knudson, the cashier, and Edgar Swallow, the vice president.

"Stick up your hands," Durand said. He had a six-shooter in his holster and a 30-30 rifle in his hands and his pockets bulged with ammunition.

"I won't kill you if you do what I say, but no monkey business," said Durand.

"Get over here and line up."

He made us—the whole nine of us—line up against the wall, with our faces to it.

Then he scooped up all the cash in the cash drawers, about $2,000 or $3,000, into some money bags.

"Get over here and open the safe," he commanded next.

ROBERT NELSON

'He Raised His Gun to Shoot Me, and I Guess I Pulled Trigger First'

By Tipton Cox.

Copyright, 1939, by the United Press.

Powell, Wyo., March 24.—I shot my friend, Earl Durand, the man they called "Tarzan," because I had to.

Someone shoved a rifle into my hand as Durand backed out of the bank and he saw me. He raised his gun to shoot me and I guess I had to shoot him, but I'm sorry. He wasn't the same Earl Durand all of us kids liked. He must have gone crazy.

It all happened pretty fast. I was walking past the bank on my way back to school, when I heard a bunch of gunshots. Everyone on the street started running and someone bumped into me and shoved me into the filling station across the street from the bank. Otis Gillette, who owns the station, told me Durand was across the street robbing the bank. He got his rifle down from the wall and started loading it. We both were behind the counter and the door was open directly across from the bank door.

All of a sudden Durand came backing out of the bank dragging three men with him. Otis shoved the rifle into my hands just then, I guess. At that moment Durand turned around. He saw me. His gun was smoking, and he pointed it right at me. I don't remember pulling the trigger, but the gun jumped and Durand fell.

It was the first time I ever fired a rifle that big. I've gone hunting a lot, but only with a .22 just like all the other kids in Powell.

Rifleman, 17, Drops Slayer Herding Out 3 Captives

3 Officials Stand Bound, Helpless in Fusillade; Durand Gave Up Hope to Live

By the United Press.

Powell, Wyo., March 24.—The mad killer of the Tetons, Earl Durand, slayer of at least four men, blew out his brains today in a melodramatic bank robbery which he apparently planned with foreknowledge of its suicidal probabilities.

He eluded a posse, said farewell to his weeping parents and fired a fusillade of bullets through the bank windows, presumably to draw the attention of armed townsmen bent on killing him.

He died with a bank clerk, John Gawthrop, one of three bound men he herded out of the bank door. Officers were unable to determine immediately whether Gawthrop was killed by Durand or by a stray bullet from citizens' guns.

Tipton Cox, 17, a high school boy, dashed into a filling station across from the bank and fired a rifle bullet that felled Durand. The madman deliberately drew a pictol from his belt and fired a bullet through his head.

R. A. Nelson, bank president who knew Durand since childhood, administered a coup de grace through the neck with a revolver snatched from the crowd, but it was believed Durand had died instantly by his own hand.

Kidnaped Posse's Radioman

The killer, for whom 300 men were searching the canyons and rocky slopes of Bear Tooth Mountain, 35 miles northwest of here, had posed as a posseman earlier in the day to trap Harry Moore.

Moore, a Cody amateur radio operator relaying messages between the posse and Cody, and his two companions, John Simpson and P. O. Simpson, were forced to drive back to the Durand home two miles north of here. Durand wore a deputy's badge and seemed to enjoy his prisoners' obvious fright.

The raw-meat eater drove his hostages to an abandoned coal mine, warned them to give no alarm, and drove back to the bank.

Nelson said Durand strode to his desk and said:

"This is a stickup, Mr. Nelson. No one will be hurt if you all obey orders. Tell everyone to be quiet. I don't want to hurt anyone."

He ordered Cashier Maurice Knutson to give him the money from the vault and when Knutson told him the time lock was on, Durand laughed:

"I know you're lying, but it's all right, because I won't get out of here alive."

Bonds of Victim's Shoestrings

Then he took heavy shoestrings from his pocket and bound Nelson, Knutson and Gawthrop together. Nelson believed the boot laces were those taken from the bodies of two possemen he killed Wednesday when they tried to rush the rocky lair where he was surrounded in Clark's Canyon.

Durand grabbed up $2,000 in a sack, stuffed it in his canvas jacket, and began dragging the three men beside him. He fired through the bank windows with no more explicable purpose than to attract attention.

Young Cox was walking past the bank on his way to school.

"Everyone started running and someone shoved me into the filling

U. S. Reports Industrial Jobs Up 100,000

Plane Industry Leads February Rise; Gains Shown in Maryland

Secretary of Labor Perkins estimated yesterday that 45,000 more workers were on industrial pay rolls in February than in the previous month, and 100,000 more than in February, 1938.

The aircraft industry stood at the highest level since August, 1937, Miss Perkins said, with pay rolls reaching an all-time high. The shipbuilding industry employed more men than at any time since December, 1937, and the machine tool industry reported the largest number of workers since April last year.

Food Industry Declines

Food industries accounted for the largest declines with relatively large lay-offs in meat packing, canning and beet sugar pay rolls.

The automobile industry laid off about 4,100 workers between mid-January and mid-February, but was employing about 93,000 more men than a year ago.

"As compared with a year ago," Miss Perkins said, "factories were employing nearly 200,000 more workers. Aside from manufactur-

Heat at 82 Turns Grass Into Tinder, Starts 30 Fires

Washington skipped a season again yesterday and landed in summer. The thermometer at the Weather Bureau went to 82 to give the District its warmest day of the year.

Firemen responded to more than 30 alarms between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m., most of them for trash and brush fires. No serious damage was reported. Firemen said the sun had dried out grass and trash to the point where a spark would set them off. A few canoeists were out on the Potomac.

District residents shed overcoats, then topcoats, and talked about the heat. The peak of 82 was the highest since October 19, but fell far short of the March record of 93 degrees in 1907. Low for the day was 39 at 6 a. m.

Park employes said a couple of more days of the same weather would start the cherry trees blooming. This prospect was dimmed by the weather forecaster's prediction of increasing cloudiness and showers late today or Sunday. Continued mild temperatures were forecast.

Two Marine Corps Generals Shifted

Two Marine Corps generals, on duty at headquarters here, were ordered yesterday to important posts in the Fleet Marine Force.

Brig. Gen. William P. Upshur, now in charge of the Marine Corps Reserve, was directed to take command of the First Marine Brigade at Quantico, Va. At the same time, Brig. Gen. Clayton B. 17 Injured In Traffic; Bus, Auto Crash

1 Critically Hurt in Southeast Wreck; 5 of Family Treated

Six persons were injured, one critically, when a Capital Transit bus and an auto crashed last night in the Southeast section of the city. Six others, five from one family, were hurt in a two-car collision on Lee highway.

Louise Tavener, 33, of 768 Eleventh street southeast, was rushed to Providence Hospital with a fractured knee, face lacerations, and internal injuries after a car in which she was riding struck the bus at Fourth and G streets southeast.

Five bus passengers sustained minor injuries and were taken to Casualty Hospital. They are George McClinton, 42, of 72 F street southwest; Mrs. Ryah B. Reisley, 45, of 1758 N street northwest; Wardell Miller, 35, colored, 611 Christian court southwest; Henry Blockwell, 27, colored, 315 Fourth street southwest; Carl Pacific, 55, colored, 307 D street northwest.

Both Drivers Escape

Both Earl T. Canard, 35, of 510 Eighth street southeast, driver of the auto, and Wesley Doty, 23, of 500 Fourth street southeast, bus operator, were unhurt. The front of the bus was badly dented and the auto was wrecked.

Five members of an Upperville, Va., family were brought to Emergency Hospital after the two-car crash at National Park Cemetery, outside Falls Church, Va.

Most seriously injured were Marshall Hughes, 16, suffering from injuries to the pelvis and spine, and

Civil Air Authority Proposes 3 Plans to Develop Airports

A national system of airports, developed with Federal funds, with a choice of three possible programs, the most expensive of which would cost $435,000,000, was proposed by the Civil Aeronautics Authority yesterday in a report to Congress.

The following plans were proposed:

An expenditure of $128,000,000 to bring to a "properly high standard of quality" the airports now designated as air mail stops. There are 236 airports so designated now, but only 179 actually received service on January 1, many of them having too poor fields.

An expenditure of $230,000,000 to extend adequate development to 860 airports, together with limited provision for private flying and pilot training.

A far-reaching extension of the number of existing fields to provide 3,500 adequate airports as compared with 2,174 now. This development, costing $435,000,000, would place an airport within 30 minutes drive of every reasonably compact population area of as many as 5,000 persons. It would furnish adequate facilities also to rural areas.

The report said $125,000,000 could be used efficiently during the next

War Risk Cargo Insurance Rates to Europe Doubled

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 24.—War risk insurance rates on shipments to Europe will be doubled and tripled beginning Monday, placing them at the highest level since last September's war scare.

Immediately preceding and following the Munich conference, shippers had to pay from $2 to $5 per $100 worth of goods consigned to Europe. For the last several months, however, the basic rate has been 12½ cents per $100 value.

The newest increase was decided upon today by a group of leading American marine insurance underwriters, following information British underwriters had increased their war risk rates.

(In London marine underwriters put into effect substantial increases in war risk rates, the higher rates were applied particularly to shipments on long voyages to European waters and deferred dates.)

Until last September, the war risk premium had stood for years at 2½ cents.

But when Hitler took over Sudetenland from Czecho-Slovakia, rates jumped.

"We heard reports at that time," said one marine underwriter, that "German submarines were standing by in the Atlantic shipping lanes."

He asserted American underwriters had no specific information causing them to fear war.

State Barriers To Free Trade Called Lunacy

Bane Calls Meeting of States to Remove 'Brake on Recovery'

Increasing use of retaliatory taxes and other trade barriers between the States is "economic lunacy" Frank Bane, executive director of the Council of State Governments and former director of the Social Security Board, said yesterday.

Bane announced plans for a conference of representatives from all the States to develop a program for checking the spread of barriers to interstate trade, to be held at Chicago April 5 to 7.

Bane said the first job of the conference would be to inform the public about the effect of spreading trade barriers among the States. In the last 10 years, he said, there has been a strong tendency among the States to erect the barriers.

He declared this tendency now has become one of the major brakes on the national recovery drive, and added that nearly every State has adopted some form of taxation discriminating against the products of other States.

Bane said that among the States there is general agreement that trade barriers are economically bad, but that when discussion gets down to a specific tax that acts to bar trade, the tendency is to say "but that's different."

Recalling that the main purpose in calling the original Constitutional Convention was to eliminate trade barriers between States, Bane declared the purpose of the Chicago conference would be to seek settlement of the same problem through State co-operation.

Liquor War Settled

As example of the success of co-operation, Bane cited recent settlement of liquor war between Michigan, Indiana, Iowa, Illinois and Wisconsin.

Bane pointed out the problem had already received attention of the Conference of Governors last fall, the Department of Commerce and the Department of Agriculture. He said more than 400 delegates, representing States and 20 other organizations were expected to meet in Chicago. Among speakers will be Solicitor General Jackson, Governor Sharp of Missouri, Governor Bailey of Arkansas and Governor Townsend of Indiana.

U. S. Reports Industrial Jobs Are Up 100,000

ing, the principal gains in employment in February were on steam and electric railroads, in anthracite mines and in hotels and insurance companies. Reductions in employment in wholesale and retail trade, in metal mines and quarries, in public utilities, and in some of the service industries, were due almost wholly to seasonal influences. In private building construction employment was well sustained, the reduction being the smallest in any February in the past seven years, with the exception of 1937."

She added that "factory employment in February stood at 90.7 per cent of the 1923-25 average, a gain of 1.3 per cent, or 96,000 wage earners, since February of last year. The index of factory pay rolls, at 85.3 per cent of the 1923-1925 average, was 2.5 per cent higher than in January, and 10.9 per cent above February, 1938. The gains in weekly wage disbursements from January to February amounted to nearly $3,900,000 a week, and from a year ago to nearly $16,000,000 a week. With the exception of December, 1938, employment and pay rolls in manufacturing are at the highest levels since the last two months of 1937. The typical seasonal gains from January to February of 1.8 per cent in employment and 4.8 per cent in pay rolls are somewhat larger than the increases reported this year."

Employment Drops

Twenty-eight States reported decreases in employment. Among them were the New England and Middle Atlantic States and all of the East North Central States except Michigan.

Indiana reported a 2.3 per cent gain primarily in factories manufacturing automobiles, refrigerators, furniture, engines and railroad cars.

Maine reported a 2.2 per cent increase at factories manufacturing shoes, paper and pulp, and woolen and worsted goods.

In Wisconsin foundries and factories reported a 1.9 per cent employment increase. A similar increase was noted in Pennsylvania, principally in coal mines, steel mills, shipyards and factories.

Maryland reported a 1.8 per cent employment gain in shipyards and rayon and clothing factories.

Twenty States and the District of Columbia showed slight employment decreases. Florida led other States with a 4.5 per cent recession, largely in the canning industry.

Security Tax Cut Proposed To Congress as Recovery Aid

the old-age plan should be self-supporting.

Morgenthau told the committee that, not only would the tax have to rise to the full 6 per cent on January 1, 1949, but to keep the old age plan from going bankrupt it would have to go even higher eventually, or else part of the cost would have to be borne out of general revenues.

Since recent Treasury studies show, he said, that 80 per cent of the population eventually will qualify under the law, there is justification for drawing on general tax revenues to help support the plan. There is no longer any reason, he intimated, for trying to keep the plan self-supporting.

Abandonment of the plan to keep the system self-supporting, however, is due in large part, or at least relates to, the high cost of the increased and extended old-age benefits which the President has recommended to Congress.

Costs Stressed

Morgenthau disclosed to the committee that, as a result of the cost of the new program, the huge old-age reserve would disappear anyway. The fact that the cost would wipe out the reserve previously was revealed by The Post.

By beginning benefit payments in next January 1, instead of January 1, 1942, increasing monthly benefits in early years, and paying disability benefits to persons disabled before reaching the retirement age of 65, survivor benefits to widows and orphans, and benefits to aged wives of retired workers, the additional cost of the old age program in the next 40 years would range between $25,000,000,000 and $40,000,000,000.

Whereas the old age plan now in effect presumably would be, in large part, self-supporting on the basis of the ultimate 6 per cent tax, it would be impossible, with this added cost, to build up any substantial reserve at all. In consequence, the cost of the new program would make necessary eventual large scale support of the old age plan out of general revenues.

Plan Outlined

By permitting the old-age pay roll tax to advance according to the schedule now provided in the social security act, Morgenthau explained, the old-age reserve would rise to a maximum of only $5,064,000,000 in 1950. Thereafter, it would dwindle instead of continuing its gain, as would be the case under the prevailing plan of benefit payments. By 1955, the reserve would drop to $4,395,000,000.

Benefits, under the new program of payments, would start with $175,000,000 next year, gradually increasing until outgo in 1955 would total $2,320,000,000. Tax collection in that year—the full 6 per cent tax then would be in effect—would total $1,849,000,000, or $471,000,000 less than benefit payments.

Matter of Guesswork

By 1980, experts say, the new program of benefit payments would not cost any more than the prevailing program. The cost of more liberal immediate benefits and other proposed annuities in the next 40 years, however, will be sufficient to consume what otherwise would be put aside as a kind of endowment.

What part of the eventual total annual benefits, estimated at $4,100,000,000 a year, will have to come out of general tax receipts under the new program is a matter of guesswork, but it probably would be about half.

One of the plans for scaling down the 1 per cent rise in the tax January 1 calls for a one-half of 1 per cent increase instead. On January 1, 1941, and on January 1, 1942, there would be advances of one-half of 1 per cent. Under this plan, the tax would be the same in 1941 as under the existing schedule, and one-half of 1 per cent higher in 1942.

$5,000,000,000 Reserve

The plan, Morgenthau estimated, would produce in 1950 a reserve of $5,052,000,000. The reserve would drop to $4,381,000,0000 in 1955.

Another plan suggested by Morgenthau would advance the tax one-third of 1 per cent next January. This would mean that pay checks would be taxed 1 1-6 per cent instead of 1 per cent, as at present. Similar advances of one-third of 1 per cent would take place January 1, 1941, and on January 1, 1942. On January 1, 1943, then, the tax would rise a full 1 per cent.

This schedule, Morgenthau said, would result in an estimated $4,695,000,000 reserve in 1950. In 1955 the reserve would have slumped to $3,966,000,000.

The proposal for suspension of the tax rise next January would mean there would be no rise until January 1, 1943, when the tax would advance 2 per cent. This would result in an estimated reserve of $3,974,000,000 in 1950 and $3,131,000,000 in 1955.

Re-examination Urged

The tax schedule to be adopted, Morgenthau emphasized, should be governed by [illegible] benefit payments to be finally adopted by Congress. He said the tax structure should be re-examined before 1943.

Morgenthau declared the shifting of workers into insured occupations and general practice of taking advantage of the old-age annuties had been much greater than anticipated. This, he said, would prevent the present system of benefits and taxes from being entirely self-supporting.

He insisted that, "in period of incomplete business recovery like the present, the contributory old-age insurance system should be financed as to have the least possible deterring effect on business."

At the same time, he emphasized that the necessary concern over the effect of the old age tax onb usiness was "only one side of the picture."

He warned the committee to safeguard against the public misunderstanding a temporary scaling down of the tax, "especially if increased benefits are approved."

Money Withdrawn

Morgenthau did not believe it would be necesary "in the near future" to supplement revenue from the pay roll tax by drawing on general revenues.

The proposed contingency reserve, he said, will be larger in the first years of the operation of the system than is contemplated under the new standard, but he thought this desirable in view of the uncertainty as to total benefits payments. The chief complaint against the large reserve was that it caused money to be withdrawn from spending channels and, in effect, "sterilized," thus locking up buying power.

Morgenthau suggested creation of an "old age insurance trust fund," to be administered by the Treasury Secretary, Labor Secretary and Social Security Board chairman, as trustees, in place of the large reserve. The trustees, he said, should be required to report to Congress.

Vandenburg Comments

Vandenburg declared that Morgenthau "now admits that it is unnecessary to increase payroll taxes 50 per cent next year and that he is at last prepared to make a trust fund instead of a 'jack pot' out of the proceeds of these payroll taxes.

"I commend his courage as well as his widom," he declared, "in frankly abandoning the errors which some of us have been attacking for the last two years. It is only by this sort of candor that we can hope to help business—and nothing will help it more, in a tax sense, than to stop next year's 50 per cent payroll tax increase. I offered amendments governing all of these objectives two years ago. I offered another specific proposal to freeze payroll taxes where they are within the past month.

"Heretofore these proposals often have been bitterly resisted by Administration spokesmen."

Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee said "it is apparent that an informed and aggressive public opinion at last has forced the Administration to acknowledge an error and modify an iniquitious policy.

Called Indorsement

"The Secretary's admission that the so-caled full reserve scheme has no justification indorses the major Republican criticism of the existing law. Our Democratic colleagues now are left in the position of having attempted to defend throughout the last four years a rserve plan which the Treasury now acknowledges was was excessively burdensome to labor and industry. . . .

"It is most unfortunate that the Administration should have insisted that more than a billion dollars of excessive pay roll taxes be collected from workers and employers and spent for general Governmental purposes before acknowledgment of the unfairness and unsoundness of the full reserve plan."

The statement was signed by Representatives Treadway, Massachusetts; Crowther, New York; Knutson, Minnesota; Reed, New York; Woodruff, Michigan; Jenkins, Ohio; McLean, New Jersey; Gearhart, California; Carlson, Kansas, and Jarrett, Pennsylvania.

Tennesseeans Protest Loss Of Utility Tax

Fear 'Fiscal Disaster' Through TVA, Ask Right to Levy on It

The Tennessee Valley Authority's purchase of private utility systems in Tennessee yesterday boomeranged on Congress as Tennessee taxpayers protested loss of $3,500,000 in annual revenue from the private systems and asked power to tax TVA operations.

Deprived of tax receipts from purchased utilities, many counties near the center of TVA operations are faced with "outright fiscal disaster" and even forced closing of schools, members of Congress were informed yesterday in letters from the Tennessee Taxpayers Association.

Congress was asked to enact legislation securing from the Tennessee Valley Authority a continuation of the tax payments which have heretofore been made by the privately owned utilities."

Rider Prepared

One member of the Tennessee House delegation was known to be preparing such an amendment as a rider on the recently reported Norris bill giving the TVA greater leeway in the use of proceeds from a $100,000,000 bond issue.

C. W. Bailey, president, and William R. Pouder, executive secretary of the Tennessee Taxpayers Association, told members of Congress they were not projecting a controversy over Government ownership of utilities, but were seeking a solution for a serious tax dilemma.

As taxation of private utilities has been the revenue mainstay of 93 of Tennessee's 95 counties, they said either TVA operations and municipally-owned systems must be taxed or taxed disproportionately applied to other sources that cannot bear the burden.

The only alternative, their report said, would be increasing heavily the taxes levied upon homes, farms, and other taxable property of rural and urban people "in order to present consumers of electric current with a second and in this case artificially created reduction in electric rates."

Loss Estimated

When TVA purchase of private electric systems now agreed upon are placed in effect, they estimate the State revenue loss from taxes heretofore levied on private systems at $1,080,000; municipal taxes, at $1,027,348; county and school district taxes at $727,794 and county and municipal taxes on generating systems and transmission lines at $676,953, or a total of $3,512,095.

An analysis of Tennessee utility tax sources forwarded to Tennessee members of Congress by the association showed the burden of finding new revenue will fall most heavily upon county school district and municipal governments, which would be left "to shift for themselves, "and whose only recourse would be "further increase in the already excessive property tax."

Polk County would lose 40 per cent of its property tax, the report showed. Marion County would lose $72,575 a year in revenue, or 36.4 per cent of its property tax, while McMinn, Warren, White, Bradley and other counties would be almost as seriously affected.

Bailey and Pouder suggested amendment of the Norris bill to insert "mandatory provisions for continuing to State, county and municipal governments all the present tax payments on those electric utilities sold to the Tennessee Valley Authority" as the only "equitable solution."

The State under existing statutes is receiving 5 per cent of the gross proceeds from the sale of TVA current produced at Norris Dam, and 2½ per cent from that produced at Muscle Shoals Dam from Norris Dam overflow, which amounts to only $10,000 a year, the letter said. After all TVA dams are completed, the eventual top revenue from these sources would amount to but $625,000 in 1945, the letter asserted.

Manton Indicted For Third Time

New York, March 24 (AP).—Former United States Circuit Judge Martin T. Manton was indicted today, for the third time in less than a month, for conspiracy to obstruct justice, to defraud the Government of its right to his own unbiased services, and to accept bribes.

Indicted with him as an accused co-conspirator was John L. Lotsch, former president of the Flatbush (Brooklyn) Republican Club and one-time director of the Fort Greene National Bank in Brooklyn.

Senate Group Is Unanimous For Douglas

High Court Nominee Appears Himself But Isn't Questioned

William O. Douglas, named by President Roosevelt as associate justice of the Supreme Court, was unanimously indorsed by a Senate Judiciary sub-committee yesterday.

Douglas himself, accompanied by Attorney General Murphy and two friends, made a surprise appearance, but he was not subjected to questioning by the sub-committee.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, chairman of the subcommittee, announced that no witnesses to support or oppose Douglas' nomination were present. The subcommittee then went into executive session, which was concluded within 10 minutes. The full committee will act on the nomination Monday.

Smilingly informing Douglas of his indorsement, Hatch said that two absent members of the subcommittee, Senators McCarran, of Nevada, and Burke, of Nebraska (Democrats), wished to be recorded as approving the sub-committee action. The motion to confirm Douglas was made by Senator King (Democrat), of Utah.

CAA Backs 3 Plans To Better Airports

year. These recommendations in the three programs compare with the expenditure of $140,000,000 of Federal funds on airports in the last six years, through Works Progress and Public Works Administration programs.

"Private expenditure has substantially stopped," the report declared, pointing out that in this six-year period private airport investments amounted to only 4 per cent of total expenditures. The report says there is no hope of its resumption on a substantial scale. Outside of Federal funds a total of $40,000,000 was contributed in the six-year period, most of it by municipalities, with some State aid.

None of Biggest Fields

If the 3,500 airport program should be approved, the authority contemplates 300 fields with 3,500 foot runways or better, 1,250 fields with runways of 2,500 feet and the remainder of the fields with 1,500 feet runways at least.

The survey separates airports into four classes involving 1,500-foot, 2,500-foot, 3,500-foot and 4,500-foot runways and points out that there is not a single airport in the United States containing the longest mentioned. Seven-eighths of all existing airports are either in the lowest class or not able to meet these modest specifications.

On Capitol Hill

Roanoke, Va., March 24 (AP).—The real fight over relief is yet to come in a Congress which probably will be in session 90 days longer, Representative Woodrum, of the Sixth Virginia District, indicated today in his home city.

WOODRUM

Woodrum said that after President Roosevelt's request for $150,000,000 additional relief appropriation is settled, he expects to call up a bill he recently introduced providing that State agencies handle direct and work relief with Federal "supervision" of expenditures.

Woodrum, deposed as acting chairman of the deficiency subcommittee, said the hearings "have developed many places where substantial savings can be made without curtailing the amount necessary to help persons in need."

Charges of fraudulent practices the election of Senator Stewart (Democrat), of Tennessee, were dismissed yesterday by the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee. Dr. John R. Neal, of Nashville, filed a petition alleging violation of election laws which the committee dismissed as "not warranting further consideration of the case."

War Department opposition appeared certain to a drastic tax measure submitted by 50 Senators with the announced aim of "taking the profits out of war."

The proposal, officials indicated, was considered as conflicting with the Army's own industrial mobilization plans, to be put into effect immediately in the event of war.

Some Army officials who declined to be quoted directly in advance of a formal expression of War Department opinion, argued that the proposed taxes were confiscatory.

The levies would run up to 98.9 per cent on individual incomes. Rates on corporations were designated to capture all income above a 6 per cent return on value. Combined with State and other Federal taxes, critics have contended, they would take more than 100 per cent of some incomes.

Representative Bland (Democrat), Virginia, sought yesterday to label foreign gambling ships operating off American coasts as "pirates" so that the Coast Guard could drive them out to sea. He said he intended to ask Attorney General Murphy to consider legislation for such procedure. He said the floating gambling palaces were most numerous off California.

Arnold Refuses To Let Bar Pass On U. S. Ethics

Rejects Proposal for Lawyers to Submit Opinion on Policy

By the Associated Press.

Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General, declared last night that the Justice Department cannot be "governed" by the American Bar Association.

A special committee of the St. Louis Bar Association recently had reported that Arnold's policy of issuing public statements concerning anti-trust suits before those suits are filed in court should be submitted to the American Bar Association for an opinion as to whether the policy was ethical.

In a letter to Forrest M. Henker, chairman of the St. Louis committee, Arnold said:

"Whether the policy is right or wrong is, of course, open to debate. Nevertheless the administration of the law by the Attorney General cannot be authoritatively governed by a canon of ethics passed and interpreted by a group of private citizens, however public spirited they may be."

Explaining his policy of issuing statements, he said:

"The public and the press insist upon news concerning the activities of the Government; and important investigations and prosecutions are news.

"In consequence, interviews with the press concerning departmental prosecutions and investigations have been the rule for years. As a practical matter, it could not have been otherwise.

"In our public statements we have been seeking to reduce the necessity for such interviews to a minimum; to assure uniformity in response to all persons interested; to maintain a standard of careful accuracy in statements; and to take complete and express responsibilities for statements originating with us."

Upholstery Department Kann's Third Floor

More Reserve Officers Voted In Committee

Fund Would Provide Addition of 20,000, Enlarge ROTC

The Administration's efforts to bolster America's defenses reached into another field yesterday as an extensive expansion of the Reserves met approval.

A War Department plan to build up the Officer Reserve from 100,000 to 120,000 was indorsed by the Senate Appropriations Committee in providing funds in the Army supply bill for enlargement of the ROTC. Under the expansion program the annual output of the schools will be immediately increased from 6,500 to 7,500 and ultimately to 9,500, officials said.

When the plan becomes effective and assuming regular training is provided, it was said, the Army will have a Corps of Reserve officers adequate for any emergency.

The Senate committee added $13,330,946 to the supply bill and sent the $513,188,882 measure to the floor for action early next week. Besides the Reserve increase, the group approved War Department requests for modernizing 75 mm. field guns, replacing old machinery in arsenals and construction at various posts and camps.

The Day's Developments

Other developments were:

A plan greatly to strengthen American air power was recommended to Congress by the Civil Aeronautics Authority. The agency proposed that Federal aid be provided to develop and maintain "an adequate system of airports and seaplane bases," and said it would cost $435,000,000 to complete such a plan.

American defenses in the Caribbean will be strengthened by the construction of a graving dock at San Juan, Puerto Rico, was announced yesterday by the Navy Department. While the dock will be built by the island government, plans for it were drawn by the Navy. To cost $1,124,236, the dock will accommodate cruisers and destroyers.

The Administration's proposal to build a large graving dock in New York capable of repairing the largest battleships built abroad in case of a European war met with support and opposition on Capitol Hill. Chairman Walsh of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee endorsed the project, while Senator Bone (Democrat) of Washington, contended it would be contrary to international law for a neutral nation to repair warships of a nation at war.

Chairman Lea (Democrat), of California, of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, said the group will meet Monday to report out legislation authorizing the training of 20,000 civil pilots as a "backlog of national defense."

784 Planes Provided

The Army appropriation bill, $52,987,628 above the current year's appropriations, provides funds for 784 new war planes. Of this number 219 are to complete the old strength of 2,320, while the other 565 will enable the Army to start immediately to build up to the new maximum of 6,000 first line planes. The only change made by the senate committee in this item was to allow $1,000,000 for research, under the authority of the new Army expansion act, whereby unsuccessful bidders in design competitions may be partially compensated for their work.

In allowing $332,480 for modernizing forty 75 mm. guns, the committee followed the advice of Army officials who testified that with the changes contemplated the field pieces would be the equal of any abroad. The House had turned down the project because of the development of heavier field guns in Germany.

A lump sum of $1,375,000 was added for construction at National Guard camps, distribution being left to the War Department. This was exclusive of $610,000 provided for the concurrent National Guard reserve camp at Fort Sill, Okla. With the National Guard reaching its planned strength of 210,000 next year, the committee struck out that limiting figure to permit expansion should the War Department allot it any additional air or antiaircraft units under the expansion program.

Surgeon Unit Expanded

Under another Senate amendment the Army will give up France Field, near the Atlantic end of the Panama Canal, and concentrate its air forces at Albrook Field, on the Pacific side. Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff, told the committee that excessive rainfall at France Field made the base a "floating crust." The committee allowed $1,500,000 for construction at Albrook.

Expansion of the Army's flight surgeon unit was provided by the committee, boosting the number from 5 to 36 to care for the new pilot training program. The flight pay of such officers was limited to $720 a year. Another amendment increases the number of medical officers by 50 and dental officers, 25.

In providing for the reserve officer expansion program, the Senate group added 37 senior and 17 junior R. O. T. C units, increased the regular Army officer strength by 315 and the enlisted strength by 346 to care for the new organizations and to fill vacancies among the instructors at existing schools, and raised the number of advanced course students in senior units to about 16,500.

Officials said that the War Department desires to ultimately maintain 20,000 men in the advanced courses of the R. O. T. C. which will provide about 9,500 lieutenants each year for the reserve.

Tanker Explodes In Brooklyn Dock

New York, March 24 (AP).—With a roar heard 5 miles, the 6,500-ton Texico oil tanker Reaper exploded today in the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation drydock, in Brooklyn, seriously injuring three men.

The ship burst into flames immediately after the explosion, which police said apparently was caused by ignition of gasses in the hold. The vessel arrived in New York Tuesday from Port Arthur, Tex. Most of her oil cargo had been removed.

Philadelphian to Show Robert Cornelius Daguerreotype Exhibited Year Before Pioneer Cameraman Photographed Sister

The heretofore unchallenged belief that John W. Draper's picture of his sister, Dorothy Catherine, was the first portrait photograph ever made in this country ran up against a demurrer yesterday by Mrs. M. S. Hornor, of Philadelphia.

"That picture," said Mrs. Hornor, a young woman whose hobbies are outdoor sports and early picture colecting, "was made in 1840, but on December 6, 1839, a daguerreotype portrait was exhibited before the American Philosophical Society in Philadelphia, and here it is."

Whereupon she displayed a self-portrait by Robert Cornelius, one of the 155 items in her collection of all-American photographs made between 1839 and 1859, which wil be exhibited at the National Museum, April 4 to 15.

Beaumont Newhall, of the Museum of Modern Art, told Mrs. Horner that the Cornelius picture "is the earliest documented daguerreotyped portrait that I have been able to discover." In historical value, he said, it is second only to the first picture made by Daguerre, a view of his own studio.

The "Gutenbergs of Photography," as Mrs. Honor calls the primitive pictures in her collection, include:

A view of the Philadelphia water works of 1851, one of the first pictures ever printed on paper and which was exhibited a few months later at the Crystal Palace in London.

The first picture to be made by artificial light, a portrait which William G. Mason took by the illumination of a gas jet.

Two photographs taken by Rembrandt Peale, famous American painter whom few ever knew to be a photographer as well.

The 1839 self-portrait by Cornelius was exhibited at the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia in 1876 and disappeared soon afterward. It was rediscovered in 1893 and displayed at the Franklin Institute. It has never been shown publicly since.

While Mrs. Hornor has displayed her miniatures in other cities, this will be her debut as an exhibitor of her collection, Washington having the distinction of being the first city to see the pictures.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the Pro Arte String Quartet (Alphonse Onnou, Laurent Halleux, Germain Prevost and Robert Maas) in Coolidge Auditorium Thursday night. Program: Quartet in B flat major, Op. 130 (Beethoven), Quartet No. 3 (Honegger), Quartet in E flat major, K 428 (Mozart).

Continuing the series of concerts which constituted the festival celebration of their twenty-fifth anniversary last May in Brussels, Alphone Onnou and his associates of the Pro Arte String Quartet devoted their program in Coolidge Auditorium last evening to masterpieces by Beethoven and Mozart and a contemporary work of as yet undecided value by Arthur Honegger. It was in a way unfair to Honeggar to place his third quartet in juxtaposition to Beethoven's majestic Opus 130, for it inevitably sounded thin in comparison, and its interesting qualities had to disclose themselves in the shadow of a Titan.

Holz once said to Beethoven that his B flat major was the greatest of his quartets. Beethoven replied: "Each in its way. At demands of us that we shall not stand still. You will find a new manner of voice-treatment, and, thank God, there is less lack of fancy than ever before." This was a remarkable understatement concerning a composition awe-inspiring in its intense vitality and towering grandeur.

In this quartet, as in its triptych companions in A minor and C sharp minor, Beethoven expressed himself with a metaphysical subtlety which still eludes our complete understanding. The noble first movement, for example, seems to be contradicted by the mysteriously hushed and serpentine presto which follows it, but the two are integral parts of the logical argument. Again, the fourth movement "like an Italian dance" is a strange preparation for the great cavatina in the fifth movement, of which the composer said: "Never did music of mine make so deep an impression upon me, even the remembrance of the emotions it aroused always costs me a tear."

After the performance of the Beethoven work, the players fortunately allowed quite an interval to elapse before returning to the stage with music of an entirely disparate style. Honegger has a Gallic terseness in his phrasing and a directness of statement that is epigrammatic. The first and last movements of his third quartet are for that reason a little dry because emotion has been intellectualized to a fine point. The central adagio, however, is warmer and suffused with a markedly romantic poesy.

The Mozart quartet, third of the set dedicated to Hadyn, foreshadows in the first two movements the whole romantic tendency that expanded into a school of later composers. The last two movements are light-hearted and gay, but also prophetic of things to come. The brusque opening of the minuet, up to that time treated as merely a graceful dance, points directly to the way in which the scherzo was to be developed by Beethoven. The trio section, with its long undulant melody over a drone bass, was to have its originality copied many times.

Fatal-Crash Driver Testifies At Arlington

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, Clarendon, Va., Tel. OXford 0569

At a hearing before Assistant Attorney General S. W. Shelton yesterday at Arlington Courthouse to determine if he should be reissued a driver's permit, Frederick Holland, 22, of the 2200 hundred block of North Illinois street, Arlington, said he has worn glasses four years. Holland, who was involved in two fatal accidents in the past year, testified he was wearing glasses when he obtained his current permit.

In answer to questions by Shelton regarding the accident March 20, 1938, which resulted in the death of Elzie Thomas, Holland said four men were walking along Lee highway and his car struck Thomas who was on the extreme left. He said he was driving about 20 miles an hour but did not see the men until about 6 feet when he attempted to swerve.

Regarding the second accident, resulting in death of Charles Thomas Jarboe January 28, 1939, on Lee boulevard, Holland said he was driving about 55 miles an hour when going over a hill. As he approached North Lexington street a man appeared about 15 feet in front of his car, Holland said.

It developed that he turned his driver's permit over to Commonwealth's attorney February 23.

Detective Hugh Jones said he had been called to scene of the accident on Lee boulevard and found the right headlight of the car broken off. He said that after viewing the scene of the accident he could not say how it happened.

Shelton said that he would render a decision in about ten days.

Holland was cleared in both accidents.

Cleanup Campaign

Arlington—County Manager Frank C. Hanrah announced yesterday that following a public hearing on the budget effective July 1 Monday night at the courthouse, he will begin to formulate plans for a county-wide cleanup campaign.

The campaign, he said, will be carried on in co-operation with department heads and the citizens of the county.

Membership Drive

Arlington—The Boys' Republic will launch a house-to-house canvass for boy, girl and adult members, beginning April 18, it was announced yesterday by Arthur C. Stickley, president of the advisory council.

The committee in charge of the drive includes Arthur C. Stickley, president; Mrs. William N. Doak, first vice president; Mrs. Virginia Harrow, second vice president; Elmer F. Newell, treasurer; Lawrence W. Douglas, William P. Ames, Maj. Earl Hamilton Smith, M. A. Mace, T. S. Wilcher, Mrs. Ruby G. Simpson, James Needham and Charles R. Fenwick.

The campaign will be directed from the county headquarters at Wilson boulevard and North Hudson street. The drive will be to enlist 10,000 members, of whom 6,500 would be boys and girls.

"Our plans do not conflict with any other organization's plans," President Stickney said, "and our only desire is to provide competent leaders for boys and girls and recreational facilities for the adults as well.

A large staff of leaders has been recruited who are giving their time to the development of the movement. Ruby G. Simpson, well-known civic worker, will head the Women's Division. Stickney added: "The Boys Republic and Girls Republic is not an under-privileged children's organization. We believe that all boys and girls of America are privileged if given the opportunity to develop themselves. Our organization provides that method, and no boy or girl will be denied membership because of his unfortunate circumstances or his religion."

T. S. Wilcher, national executive director, stated that there will be religious programs of interdenominational nature. These open-air services will be held every Sunday evening at the Boys Republic stadium. The committee of clergymen who will have charge of the program will be headed by the Rev. K. K. Haddaway, of the Mount Olivet Methodist Church, national chaplain.

Methodist Lenten Services

Aurora Heights.—Dr. Jacob Simpson Payton, editor of the National Methodist Press, will conduct the fifth of a series of special Lenten services tomorrow night at 7:45 at the Community Methodist Church. Music will be furnished by The Virginians, a male quartet from the Metropolitan Baptist Church, of Washington.

The Rev. Makosky to Talk

Cherrydale.—The ninth of a series of special sermons on "The Decisions of Jesus" will be given by the Rev. E. C. Makosky, pastor of Cherrydale Methodist Church, at the 11 a. m. service tomorrow. At the 8 p. m. service, his subject will be "The True Idea of a Christian Life."

Junior High Honor Roll

Many Fires Threaten Dry Va. Forests

All Except One in Wythe County Believed Under Control

By the Associated Press.

Scattered forest fires were reported last night in Virginia as March winds and dry weather heightened the danger to the State's rich forest lands.

F. C. Pederson, State forester of the conservation commission, said 244 fires had been reported since the first of the year burning over 3,372 acres of privately owned timberland.

All but one of the present fires was believed under control last night. Pederson said a fire was burning on Sand Mountain in Wythe County, but since the county was not organized for fire control, the State could offer no help.

In Chesterfield and Henrico counties a score of blazes, two of them serious, burned forests during the week.

Burned 150 Acres

A fire near the Southern Railway at Robious in Chesterfield County, burned over 150 acres in six hours Thursday before being brought under control by County Fire Warden A. L. Smith and 25 helpers.

Ten or 12 other smaller blazes were reported during the week in the sam earea.

Henrico Warden R. A. Pemberton and eight helpers saved two houses threatened by a fire between River road and Ridge road, near Westhampton, yesterday. The blaze spread over 75 acres before being brought under control. Pemberton said eight or ten other acres had been checked.

Brought Under Control

S.G. Hobart, district forester, said a fire burning on Buckhorn Mountain in Bland County had been brought under control. The fire was checked with the help of wardens and civilians, assisted by 50 CCC enrollees from the Bastian camp.

A small blaze was reported in Scott County, near the Washington County line, but it was believed to be under control.

A fire spreading over 25 acres near the Roanoke-Montgomery County line started yesterday afternoon. It was battled by railroad workers, CCC enrollees and deputy fire wardens. Another fire on Mill Mountain in Roanoke was reported yesterday afternoon. It raised to nine the number of fires in the county within three days. The largest area to be burned was about 40 acres.

In the valley area, a fire was reported burning in the mountains about 15 miles from Strasburg.

Forest Fire Destroys Summer Home in Fairfax

Only the chimney of a large log house at Fairfax, Va., remained standing yesterday after it was razed by a forest fire. Volunteer firemen fought the blaze for two hours to keep it from spreading from the woods to nearby farmhouses

House, 200 Acres of Land Ruined by Flames In Biggest of Series of Field Fires in Fairfax

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST, P. O. BOX 245, Fairfax, Va. Phone Falls Church 3088-M.

A house was destroyed and several hundred acres of forest burned over yesterday in a series of fires in Fairfax County.

A large unoccupied log house and outbuildings near Waples Mill on the Vale road was destroyed, and about 200 acres of land burned over as the resut of a field fire, discovered by Maurice Fox. The flames had made such progress Fairfax firemen could do nothing. Neighbors said the house was owned by a Washingtonian, who used it as a summer residence. Los was estimated at about $3,000.

Several hundred acres of valuable timber land were burned yesterday afternoon between Fairfax Station and Clifton, in Centervile District. The area was over 2 miles long and almost a mile wide. Vounteer firefighters saved several buildings in the path of the flames.

Volunteer fire departments at Fairfax, Falls Church, Vienna, McLean, Franconia and Herndon were kept busy all day answering calls for small field fires threatening houses. They reported very little damage.

Library Change Studied

Vienna—The Vienna Library Board last night voted to consider plans to reorganize the board and management of the Library Association. In the past the board has been self-perpetuating, electing citizens to fill vacancies. Paul Stenger, who presided, proposed that the library set up associate memberships who would choose the governing board. Stenger, Craig Hunter and Dr. Herbert Moody were named to study a tentative draft of the amendment to the constitution and by laws and report at the next meeting.

It was decided to offer prizes in the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh grades of Vienna School for the best list of five favorite books with essay and book review of one of the five. Mrs. Gilman Hall, Mrs. Randall Shoemaker and Mrs. Frank Wilcox were named judges.

The library will be open Friday nights from 7 to 8.

Rev. L. M. Atkinson to Speak

Vienna—The fourth in a series of Lenten sermons, "The Influence of Christ in the Ancient World," will be delivered tomorrow by the Rev. Lowell M. Atkinson in the Vienna and Oakton Methodist churches. The Oakton service will be at 10:30 a. m. and the united Methodist and Presbyterian services in the Vienna Presbyterian Church at 11:30 a. m.

The Epworth League will meet in the Oakton Church at 7 p. m. New officers of the league, who will be installed, are Wessel Staalman, president; Virginia Staalman, first vice president; James Harry Roles, second vice president; Mary Staalman, third vice president; Jack Pherson, fourth vice president; Edith Winslow, secretary, and Dorothy Denison, treasurer. Mrs. Gilbert Winslow will serve as advisor.

Rev. R. C. Maxwell to Preach

Fairfax.—The Rev. R. Carl Maxwell, pastor of the churches of the Fairfax Methodist Circuit, will deliver the last in a series of sermons, "The Component Elements of True Religion," tomorrow at Fairfax at 11 a. m.; Centreville, 2:45 p. m., and Pender, 7:30 p. m.

Mrs. Lewis' Rites Held

Floris—Funeral services were held yesterday for Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Lewis, 87, who died Thursday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Allan Bradley at Floris. The services were conducted by the Rev. W. Boyd Bryant, pastor of the Floris Methodist Church. The body was sent to Springfield, Ill., where she formerly lived.

She had lived in Floris for the past 13 years and was a member of the Herndon Chapter Order of Eastern Star. She is survived by three sons, Harry W. Lewis and James A. Lewis, both of Chicago, and Warren Lewis, of Springfield, and two daughters, Mrs. Bradley and Miss Maude E. Lewis, both of Floris.

Mrs. Harry Lowe Funeral Is Held

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Lowe, wife of Harry Earle Lowe, were held yesterday at her home, 2700 Rodman road northwest. Burial was in Oak Hill Cemetery.

A native of Hartford, Va., Mrs. Lowe had lived in Washington 18 years. She was a member of the Second Primitive Church, of Nobelsville, Ind., and active in the unshine Club of Washington.

Besides her rusband, she leaves a sister, Lucy Hubbard Halburt, of Worcester, Mass four nieces. Mrs. Mabel Lewis Sevoir, of Silver Spring, Md.; Mrs. Gertrude Hubbard Powers and Mrs. Lou Hubbard Bryant, of Worcester, and Mrs. R. J. Reid, of Birmingham, Ala., and two nephews, Harold H. Lewis, of Chester, Vt., and Edward Hubbard, of Quincy, Mass.

Prince Georges Bar Seeks Post For Merrick

30 Sign Petition for His Reappointment As County Judge

PRINCE GEORGES COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, 42 University rd., Calvert Hills, Md. Telephone GReenwood 3539.

Reappointment of George B. Merrick as police court judge is asked in a petition signed by 30 members of the Prince Georges County Bar Association and submitted to Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor, it was revealed yesterday.

The request is contingent on passage of legislation creating two judgeships in the county. Alan Bowie, former State's attorney, has already been named police justice under the present set-up and will succeed Judge Merrick if the pending legislation is not passed.

The petition lauds Judge Merrick's outstanding service since he was appointed by Gov. Nice in 1934. It also points out that appointment of Merrick, a Republican, will divide the honors equally between Democrats and Republicans and serve to keep the court system out of politics.

School Contract Let

Upper Marlboro.—A contract for a new elementary school at Meadows was awarded by the Prince Georges Board of Education yesterday to Robert L. Blalock & Co., of Washington, on the firm's low bid of $28,358. The contract is subject to approval of the PWA. The new school will contain three classrooms. The project is part of a $400,000 school building program, financed in part by the Public Works Administration.

Inn Fined $300

Upper Marlboro—Police Court Judge George B. Merrick yesterday found the Oxon Run Inn guilty of selling liquor on Sunday, and levied a fine of $300. Edward Getzdianner, Martin Keough and Cecil Buchanan appeared in court as officers of the corporation.

Democrats Dance Tonight

Landover—The Young Men's Democratic Club of Prince Georges County will hold a benefit dance tonight from 10 to 2 at the Beaver Dam Country Club, with Dave McWilliams' Glen Echo Orchestra providing the music. R. Earl Sheriff is in charge of arrangements.

23,825 Autos a Day

Hyattsville—Automobile traffic here is heavier than anywhere in Maryland, it was disclosed yesterday in a report by the highway planning survey. The number of automobiles passing through this town daily is 23,825, and the Washington-Baltimore boulevard is the most heavily traveled highway in the State, the report states.

Election Set Today

Upper Marlboro—Officers will be elected at the annual meeting of the Prince Georges County Farm Loan Association to be held in the courthouse here today. The meeting will start at 10 a. m.

Pay-Hour Act Extended to Bank Staffs

Labor Bureau Rules Institutions Deal in Interstate Commerce

Elmer F. Andrews, wage and hour administrator, yesterday pushed into the spotlight again the question whether the Federal Government can regulate all banks by telling banks to consider all their employes subject to the wage-and-hour act.

The Labor Department's Wage and Hour Division, it was learned, has concluded definitely that banks are to be considered as operating in interstate commerce, at least so far as clearance of checks and similar interstate transactions are concerned.

This conclusion is of considerable import to banks. It means that, if the Federal courts should agree with Andrews, the way would be paved for a uniform banking system under Federal regulation.

Divided Responsibilities

At present, banking regulation is a divided responsibility. National banks are anwswerable solely to the Federal Government, since they are operating under charters granted by the Office of Comptroller of the Currency.

State-chartered banks, although primarily subject to State regulation, come under the jurisdiction of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, if their deposits are insured, as is the case with most, or of the Federal Reserve System, if they happen to be Federal Reserve members. All State banks which are Federal Reserve members also are FDIC members.

Matter of Sufferance.

Federal regulation of State banks, however, is by sufferance. A State bank always can escape Federal supervision by withdrawing from the Federal Reserve or FDIC. In practice, State banws submit to Federal supervision because of the advantages to be gained, such as the privilege of deposit in surance.

Many Workers Covered

Andrews made public a letter by Calvert Magruder, general counsel of the wage and hour division, to bankers informing them that "it is the opinion of this office that the type of work performed by many employes of banks brings them within the coverage of the act."

Magruder said that, although a study was being made to determine whether all employes of banks were to be regarded as engaged in interstate commerce, in view of the privilege accorded employes of suing for double unpaid minimum wages or overtime compensation he would advise banks to consider all employes as covered.

No Clear Ruling

In view of the time-honored issue of "states' rights," Congress has shown no inclination to regulate all banks under authority of the interstate commerce power of the Constitution.

But there likewise has been no clear-cut ruling by the courts as to whether banks are in interstate commerce. A court ruling favorable to the contention advanced by Andrews admittedly would furnish some incentive for possible future efforts in Congress to bring all banks under strict Federal control.

The decision of the Wage and Hour Division, it is emphasized, is merely "interpretative." A Supreme Court decision is necessary to clearly define the scope of the wage-and-hour act. In addition the act applies only to employes.

Direct Bus Line From Greenbelt To D.C. Abandoned

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday ordered the abandonment of direct bus service between Greenbelt and downtown Washington at the request of the Capital Transit Co.

The ction followed a recent decision by the Comptroller's Office forbidding renewal of the contract betwen the company and the Farm Credit Administration, for a subsidy.

However, the transit company will operate a shuttle bus between Greenbelt and the Berwyn station on the Maryland line of the street car service.

Company officials said the change, effective April 8, will require 15 to 20 minutes more for the trip downtown.

Lambda Phi Mu To Dance Tonight

Lambda Phi Mu, medical fraternity of Georgetown University, will hold its anual dance tonight at the Wardman Park Hotel. Patrons and patronnesses wil include:

Killer Durand Robs Bank and Is Shot By Boy; Escape Cut Off, He Slays Himself

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS.

station," said young Cox. "Otis Gillett, who runs the station, handed me his rifle. We were lying on the floor behind the counter. Durand looked around and saw me. He raised his gun to shoot but I guess i pulled the trigger first. He had been my friend—but I'm not sorry I did it. He must have gone crazy."

Durand seemed to enjoy his preparations for the climax to his eight days of terrorizing northwest Wyoming since he broke jail at Cody. He killed two officers who tried to arrest him shortly after the break, and with his keen knowledge of the wilderness had escaped a growing posse, bloodhounds and National guardsmen sent with artillery to blast him out of the mountains.

The posse discovered only yesterday that he had outwitted them, and picked men were trailing him westward when he reappeared in Powell, 5 miles east of them.

Vaunted Sheriff

During the hunt Durand sardonically mailed a letter to Sheriff Frank Blackbrun, suggesting that when he was caught his head be mounted and hung in the Park County Courthouse "for the sake of law and order." The letter was signed by "Your beloved enemy, Earl Durand," with the return address: "Undertaker's office, Powell, Wyo."

Durand, shaggy-haired and bearded, wore a cap, a deputy's badge, and was seated on a rock near Clark's Canyon when Moore and his two friends drove up today.

Moore then told this story of what took place:

"How about taking me up to the camp?" he (Durand) shouted. I nodded and he added: "I've got a bed roll—would you mind waiting until I get it?" He turned to walk into th ethicket, but seemed to change his mind and called to me:

"That guy may be around here—I'd better guard you while you carry my bedroll to the car."

Young Simpson didn't like this and called back, "carry your own damned bedroll."

The man just grinned, "all right—if that's the way you feel about it."

He brought the bedroll to the car and I started driving again toward the camp, but he told me to turn around.

"I've got to go to the camp with this messag efor Sheriff Blackburn," I protested. Then he sort of growled:

"I guess you'd better turn around and driv ethe other way—I'm the bandit."

He Didn't Argue

"Well, I was surprised all right, and I certainly didn't ragué."

Moore drove him to Beaver, where Durand warned the Simpsons to stay in the car, and forced Moore to accompany him into a railway station to get a package of rifle cartridges he had ordered under a fictitious name. They returned to the car and drove to the Durand farm house.

"I'm not going to hurt you fellows—but i twas getting too hot up there on Bear Tooth for me and I have to clear out," Durand said.

When he burst in on his startled parents, the killer said:

"Aren't you surprised to see me? I've come to get some things. "Do I get them—or do I have to take them at the point of a gun?"

His father said:

"You get them."

His sobbing mother followed him about, repeating:

"Earl, I hardly know you! You've changed so."

He waved goodbye to them, and when he put the Simpsons and Moore uot at the mine, shouted back to them:

"Don't forget to come to my funeral, boys."

Acquaintances said Durand, since he turned killer, had no intention of being captured alive. That, they said, was why he cheated the law by taking his own life.

City Treasurer Clyde Ellidge telephoned the news to County Attorney Ray Steadman, in the sheriff's office at Cody. Steadman turned to Undersheriff Noah Riley, who was slugged by Durand in the jail break and who had been constantly on duty despite a severe brain concussion.

Glad He's Dead

When Riley heard the news, he wept hysterically.

Steadman hurried here and formally identified the body, recognized by dozens of Powell citizens as the swaggering, powerful young hunter who frequently strode down the main street with a slain deer over his shoulder, giving cuts to friends.

"I'm glad he's dead," said Steadman. "It's hard to say that about any one, but in this case I can't help it."

"We're mighty glad he is killed," added Ellidge, a friend of Durand's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Durand, respected farmers living 2 miles north of Powell. They had been distraught over the sudden turn of madness their only son developed, and, knowing the methods of the frontier country, knew he would be brought to justice.

Durand was able to ride a horse and shoot a small rifle from the time he was 7. He developed amazing skill in hunting and trapping, and was so deadly with his rifle that he took to bow and arrow. He said it was not fun to use a rifle "when I can't miss." People admired his powers, but kept their distance.

From the time he left Sunday school in his early 'teens, Durand spent little time on education or his father's farming. He had nothing to do with girls; said boys who did were "sissies." His feats in the wilderness became legend.

He was reported to have crossed the Mojave Desert alone, killing a bobcat, and eating it as his only food. When a game warden arrested him for killing a neighbor rancher's cow, Durand was eating a chunk of raw meat.

"Why didn't you cook it?" the incredulous warden asked.

"Didn't have time," said Durand, gulping the remainder.

When Durand slugged Jailer Riley in the Cody jail March 16, he took him as hostage on a flight to the Durand home, where he armed himself with rifles and provisions.

Before he got away, Undersheriff D. M. Baker and Powell Town Marshal Charles Lewis arrived. Durand fatally shot them both, cracked Riley again over the head and disappeared into a blizzard. A few miles away he demanded a rifle and ammunition of a rancher, then struck out for the Tetons just east of Yellowstone National Park.

Scores of possemen spread over the steep, rocky slopes, searching for him without success. Last Wednesday at daybreak he aroused Art Thornburg and his wife, forced them to drive him 30 miles from their ranch up a winding trail to the headwaters of Clarks Fork of the Yellowstone. There he disappeared.

Sheriff Frank Blackburn called for bloodhounds, gathered 300 men and started after Durand. They found his lair in the rocks late Wednesday. Orville Linabary, a posseman, crept within 50 feet of Durand, then tried to maneuver for a shot. Durand's rifle cracked and Linabury fell dead. Infuriated, his friend, Arthur Argento, cried: "I'm going up there, jerk off his arm and beat him with the bloody end of it."

He ignored the pleas of his fellow riflemen, moved into the clearing and likewise was shot dead.

Wednesday night Durand crept down and looted the bodies of boots and rifles. Thursday night, when irate riflemen built up a cross fire to recover the bodies, they found Durand had escaped.

his brother, Mansfield, 18, who may have a fractured jaw. Also hurt were their father, John, 42, who was driving; their mother, Hazel, 40, and another brother, Milton, 16. The operator of the second car, B. M. Satterfield, 50, of Vienna, Va., sustained minor lacerations.

Two women were injured when their auto struck a light pole in the 2600 block of Rhode Island avenue northeast. Mrs. Elizabeth Klein, 54, of 817 Taylor street northwest, and Mrs. Pauline Long, 49, of 1424 Chapin street northwest, both were taken to Casualty Hospital. Both suffered rib injuries. Mrs. Long also lost several teeth.

Mrs. Elizabeth P. Leonard, 65, of 1755 Euclid street, sustained a hip injury when she walked into the side of a machine at Fifteenth and H streets northwest. She was treated at home by a private physician. Knocked down at Virginia and New Hampshire avenues northwest, Louis Pasis, 65, of Philadelphia, visiting at 646 B street southeast, was being treated at Emergency Hospital for head lacerations and a fractured left leg.

John Connellan Dies at 90; Alien PropertyCustodian

John H. Connellan, former attorney in the Department of Justice and custodian of alien property in the World War, died Wednesday at his home, 2133 California street northwest, in his ninety-first year.

A native of Philadelphia, Mr. Connellan read law and was admitted to the bar in 1870. For a brief period he practiced in Denver, but he returned to Philadelphia in 1889, and in the following year became assistant trust and title officer of the newly formed Equitable Trust Co. there. From 1893 to 1912 he was trust and title officer of the company. He delivered numerous lectures before literary societies at the Wharton Schol of Finance and at Temple University.

In December, 1918, he came to Washington to serve as custodian of alien property. Afterward he became an attorney in the Department of Justice, in which capacity he served until he resigned because of ill-health on September 1, 1937.

Funeral services will be held at St. Thomas Catholic Church at 10 a. m. tomorrow, with burial in the Holy Sepulchre Cemetery in Philadelphia.

Centralization Dooms Counties, Educator Warns

Richmond, Va., March 24 (AP).—Dr. Raymond B. Pinchbeck, Virginia educator, warned today that within 10 years the Virginia county "as we know it today" will exist in name only "if the present rapid trends to 'State centralization' continue."

Dr. Pinchbeck, chairman of the Virginia Commission on County Government, embodied the prediction in a discussion of county problems at a meeting of the commission with a committee from the League of Virginia Counties and the General Assembly House and Senate committees on counties, cities and towns.

At the conclusion of the meeting Dr. Pinchbeck said members of the commission were convinced that return of local functions and flexible changes could be accomplished in a way that efficient government could be maintained.

Raw Meat Eater Betrayed Self By Shooting Up Bank in Raid

Nelson

"Open it up," Durand said again, and he started shooting with his rifle.

He never shot any of us, just kept on shooting around the building. He knocked out the windows and fired into the walls.

While he was in the bank I guess he shot at least 40 to 50 times.

Well, when Knudson was having trouble with the vault he said:

"Open that up or I'll plug you."

Knudson said he couldn't.

"What the hell," said Durand. "They'll plug me anyway before I get out of here."

He brought Knudson back out of the vault and then he got out a rawhide thong out of his pocket and tied three of us together, Gawthrop, Knudson and myself.

"Come on boys, we're going out," he said, tugging on the thong.

Gawthrop was sort of in front of us and Knudson and myself were by his sides. He pushed us over toward the front door, for protection. It was kind of exciting. All the windows had been broken with bullets.

He pushed us right along and gathered up the money bags. Then he came out with me and Knudson, his rifle and the money in his hands.

"I'll plug you if you try to get away," he told the three of us and he tugged on the thongs.

All of sudden bullets started flying, hitting the window and walls behind us.

All Durand's shooting had attracted the citizens of Powell and they ran for their guns. When he came out of the bank they were hiding around the corners, waiting for Durand.

Durand started shooting around Gawthrop. Gawthrop dropped, apparently hit by a wild bullet. Durand fired wildly but there was nobody in sight to shoot at.

All Knudson and I could do was stand there, tied with the thongs.

Then Durand fell, wounded. He went down with a grunt. Then he started crawling back into the bank. He got back several feet then he tugged at his holster and pulled out his revolver. He shot himself dead.

In a couple of minutes there were a couple of hundred people around us. Everybody was excited and talking.

It sure was a relief to be alive and feeling good again.

Robbery Victim Found Dead of Gas

Despondent after being robbed of $90 Thursday night, George Markham, 44, of 1314 Fourteenth street northwest, was found dead yesterday in his home, a gas jet of the stove open.

On returning home yesterday, Mrs. Markham found the door chained and detected gas fumes. The Fire Department rescue squad failed to revive him.

Mrs. Markham told police her husband appeared despondent after the robbery.

Labor Parley Halts After Due 'Consideration'

Secretary Perkins Wins Only Promise To Continue Thursday

A seven-hour conference between peace negotiators for the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations brought forth an announcement last night that each faction "gave consideration to the position of the other."

The meeting produced no evidence, however, of a break in the deadlock arising from the C. I. O.'s insistence upon an autonomous status in a united labor movement and the A. F. L.'s counter-demand that the position of C. I. O. unions be determined after fusion.

Will Meet Again

Secretary of Labor Perkins, who spent three hours in the conference room, won only a promise by both sides not to break off the precarious negotiations without "thorough explorations."

Accordingly, the conferees agreed to meet again at the Biltmore Hotel, New York, at 8 p. m. next Thursday. Conferences with coal operators on behalf of the United Mine Workers will engage C. I. O. Chairman John L. Lewis in the interval.

Harry C. Bates, chairman of the A. F. L.'s four-man committee, summed up the day's developments in the purposely vague statement both sides previously agreed upon. Bates, president of the Bricklayers' Union, said:

Lewis Only Shrugs

"The committee, in a session lasting several hours, discussed the situation and the problems confronting us at some length. The discussions disclosed that both sides have endeavored to explore the situation thoroughly and each has given consideration to the propositions submitted by the other."

Lewis, asked if he would add anything to Bates' remarks, mutely shrugged his shoulders in what some newsmen regarded as an effort to show he considered the session close to futile.

Dr. Robbins to Visit The Cathedral

Experts Back Upper Potomac Flood Control

$2,000,000 Project Indorsed at Rivers And Harbors Session

A $2,000,000 flood control project for the upper Potomac River was indorsed yesterday at final sessions of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress at the Mayflower Hotel.

The project, one of 51 approved by the Congress, would embrace the river valley in the vicinity of Cumberland, Md., and would include Wills Creek in Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

The Army Engineers Office, however, said studies on the program have not been completed. Total cost of all projects indorsed for various sections of the country was estimated at $696,689,946.

Representative Short President

In closing minutes of the thirty-fourth annual convention, Representative Short (Republican), of Missouri, was elected president of the congress. Other officers were re-elected. They included William H. Webb, of Washington, executive vice president; Fred B. Beneke, Memphis, Tenn., secretary, and Seymour Weiss, New Orleans, treasurer.

W. J. Driver, former Representative from Arkansas, was named chairman of the board. James H. Sinclair, North Dakota, was appointed vice chairman. Board members, elected for three year terms, were Beneke, Weiss, Harry Jacobs, New Orleans; Gov. Richard W. Leche, Louisiana; Senator Miller, Arkansas; Frank Reid, Illinois; Bill Rodgers, Pittsburgh, and N. R. Graham, Tulsa.

The group also adopted 14 resolutions ranging from legislative matters to plans for navigable waterways. To meet the "growing demands" of commerce and industry and "in order that our waterway development program be kept in pace with our rapidly expanding business requirements," the convention urged passage of a new river and harbor bill at the present session of Congress.

Defense Needs Cited

The meeting cited national defense as an argument in favor of river and harbor improvements throughout the country.

Earlier in the day, John Nolen, jr., director of planning of the National Park and Planning Commission, told of developments in Washington's water resources.

Representative Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, read a paper stressing necessity for tributary stream control.

Cornelius H. Callaghan, manager of the Maritime Association of the Port of New York, called the St. Lawrence waterway project "unnecessary and unsound at this time."

In addition to several other members of Congress, speakers included Elizabeth M. Herlihy, chairman of the Massachusetts State Planning Board; Chairman Wade O. Martin, of the Louisiana Flood Control and Water Conservation; O. S. Darett, president of the Ohio Valley Improvement Association, and Walter F. Coachman, jr., chairman of the Florida Waterway Congress.

Travelers Back From Tahiti, Fond of Raw Fish, Native Girls

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 24.—Bronzed, broke but happy, three young Bostonians who sailed the 89-foot brigantine Florence C. Robinson on a 7,000-mile voyage to the South Seas returned today aboard the Japanese liner Kinka Maru.

Bringing tales of hurricane, fire and near-death at sea—counterpointed by memories of girls in Tahiti "so beautiful you couldn't believe it"—the happy-go-lucky trio had just one idea:

"We can't wait to go back!"

"I ate raw fish and loved it," said Lawrence O'Toole, 30, an artist.

"I'd be a cannibal if I ever settled down there. And the girls with their long jet-black hair, beautiful teeth and——"

"And umph!" interrupted Arthur Hansen, a Boston Herald photographer, who grew a full-flowing beard, radiantly red, on the four-months expedition.

The third member of the group was Eddie Ruggles, a cartoonist, with eight others, all bachelors, under the command of Capt. Sterling Hayden, of Montclair, N. J., 22-year-old skipper of the Florence C. Robinson, they set sail last November 22 from Gloucester, Mass., and rode through "50 hours of nightmare" when a hurricane struck their cumbersome little windjammer in the Gulf Stream.

Then fire broke out in the galley, midway on a 3,300-mile stretch in which they sighted neither land nor sail. Hansen was credited with saving the brigantine by crawling under the sink in the flaming galley—the only place not on fire—and smothering the blaze with a fire extinguisher.

"Then our pet parrot, Loleeta, who was swearing at the foul weather something fierce high up in the rigging, got blown overboard," O'Toole recounted.

Kenneth Butler, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., one of the party, jumped overboard in the high seas to rescue Loleeta and was nearly drowned before the brig could be brought about to pick him up.

"The parrot was still alive and still cussing feebly, but she died and we buried her with full ceremony," O'Toole said.

It was a bad trip for livestock. They started out with a 750-pound pig for provisions. The porker grew leaner and leaner in the buffeting weather, however, and soon went the way of the parrot.

O'Toole said the Tahitians did nothing but sing and dance. "They don't like the radio, but they go dance crazy over phonograph records—the latest American swing music.

"Even better than swing, they like hillbilly music or hymns. They step up the tempo, play it fast and hot, and swing it like nothing you ever saw."

Hansen said the island was "a paradise" for cheap living. "We found a former waiter from the Bronx living there with his wife for $20 a month. They had a big grass house, a couple of servants and all they could eat and drink."

House Kills Bill to Impeach Miss Perkins

Unanimous Verdict For Dropping Charges Comes From Committee

The Thomas resolution paving the way for impeachment proceedings against Secretary of Labor Perkins was killed yesterday in the House of Representatives.

House action in "tabling" the resolution quickly followed presentation of a unanimous report by the Judiciary Committee, recommending that charges be dropped.

Although all Republican members of the committee said they were "in general agreement" with the report, they maintained that Secretary Perkins and other Labor Department officials had been "lenient and indulgent to Harry Bridges in the conduct of his deportation case to an unprecedented extent."

Two Others Named

The impeachment resolution, which named Gerard D. Reilly, solicitor of the Labor Department, and James L. Houghteling, commissioner of immigration and naturalization, in addition to the Secretary, was based on failure of the Department to deport Harry Bridges, West Coast labor leader, on the grounds he is a Communist.

Representative Thomas (Republican), New Jersey, author of the resolution, said he was "naturally disappointed," but added that "we have not yet heard the end of the Perkins case." He said he would make a radio address next week giving "all of the facts."

The 26-man Judiciary Committee, headed by Representative Sumners, of Texas, stated in a lengthy document that there is no competent evidence to support the charge that the Labor Department officials had conspired "to defer and defeat" Bridges' deportation.

No Weak Case Shown

The committee denied Thomas' allegation that the Department was not acting in good faith in carrying the Joseph Strecker deportation case to the Supreme Court. (The Department has deferred action on Bridges pending final decision of the Strecker case.) There is no evidence, said the committee, that the accused officials had purposely appealed a weak case.

The committee declared that it was clear there was no intention on the part of the Labor Department officials to abandon prosecution of Bridges.

Use of Boys' Clubs Doubles In Year, Director Reports

Twice as many boys used facilities of the four clubhouses of the Boys Club of Washington in February as in the same month last year, Charles M. Fyfe, director, told the board of directors at a monthly meeting last night at the University Club.

The organization, a member agency of the Community Chest, served 65,488 boys in the month. Its director reported plans to complete roof play space at the new Southeast Club branch and told of a gift from the Washington Optimist Club for use in renovating the library in the Georgetown branch, buying equipment for the Southeast club and special books for the Central and Southeast branches. He also told of a gift from employes of Frank R. Jelleff, Inc., for the health clinic of the Georgetown branch.

Fyfe said the boys' club groups are becoming recognized as substitutes for the gang.

"The gang," he said, "contains the grass roots of a democracy; a Boys Club gives these roots a chance to grow and bloom into honorable citizenship." He showed a film, procured from the Boys Clubs of America, on "Building of Boys." The same picture will be shown at a meeting of the Optimist Club April 4.

Walter Johnson, former baseball player, was elected to the board of directors at last night's meeting, as was W. F. Stephens, personnel director, Farm Security Administration. Other directors who have been elected recently include: R. J. A. Kaemmerer, Richard C. Dean, Charles B. Lister, William R. Winslow, William O. Tufts, William L. Bush, W. W. Wheeler, Frank Luchs, Herbert J. Rich, Col. Robert H. Fletcher, Richard H. Hutchinson, Francis G. Addison, jr., Leo C. May and Robert B. Swope. Frank R. Jelleff is president of the board.

Church of the Week

'Rough Going' Past, Chevy Chase Presbyterians Will Spend $4,000 This Year on Youth Center

Encouraged by the first year success of the Temple Recreation Center, the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church plans to spend $4,000 in 1939 for continuance and expansion of the project, to give city-bound youngsters here a new deal.

LaRoe (welfare head)

Dr. Hollister (minister)

Included in the $4,000 is a sum to employ an additional full-time worker at the Center, located at the Temple Baptist Church, Tenth and N streets northwest, of which the Rev. Randolph Gregory is pastor.

There, in a traffic-free, healthful environment, scores of youngsters daily enjoy sports, games, cooking and sewing classes, trips to nearby swimming pools, reading and other activities—because a prosperous suburban congregation realized its responsibility toward less fortunate churches and individuals, and did something about it.

Dr. J. Hillman Hollister, Chevy Chase pastor, and a vice president of the Washington Federation of Churches, pointed out that "rough going" characterized the venture's beginning last June, for, while quarters were available and social agencies and others had offered assistance, a request for funds in the church budget was rejected.

However, interested church individuals came through with donations of $1,500, to cover salaries of two workers for the summer months and other expenses.

By last fall, the idea "caught" and, despite the availability of only one paid worker, the project was continued through an anonymous donation of $1,000 and thru volunteer help, principally from membership of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church.

Furnishing leadership for the nursery, classes and various other groups; transportation of families to hospital clinics every Wednesday; visitation of homes in the neighborhood, and in many other ways volunteers have helped make Temple Center succeed. It is supervised by the social service committee of the Chevy Chase Church, led by Wilbur La Roe, jr., Emory Ireland and Harold Merrill. Faye J. Espenshied is leader of the young people's committee for the project.

Youth activities at Chevy Chase, promoted under a young people's committee led by Edgar B. Young consist of the Hearthstones headed by Miss Barbara Winkler and Dr. W. Bradford Bayliss, the latter director of religious education; Alpha Omegas, C. E. Loomis; Firesides, Dr. Hollister; Collegians, Dr. Donnell B. Young, and the Young People's Society, Ralph L. Hill, jr. E. Austin Davis is president of the Youth Council.

Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Cooley and Mr. and Mrs. Vincent D. Grentzenberg are in charge, respectively, of the Circle and Semi-Circle married couples' organizations. Mrs. George R. Davis is church secretary.

The Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church school today has one of the largest enrollments in the city—1,200 members. The work is conducted under the supervision of the educational board of the church, with Dr. Theodore D. Martin as chairman. Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, Mrs. William H. Bristow, Dr. Howard A. Dawson and Dr. F. C. Breckenridge are on the committee.

Bayliss (educator)

Among the departmental leaders of the church school, of which Roland M. Rice is superintendent, are A. E. Gottschall, Merritt Smith, Mrs. O'Neal M. Johnson, Mrs. Andrew J. Walker, Mrs. Albert D. Dietrich, Mrs. Albert M. Dixon, Mrs. Robert B. Tyler, Mrs. Elmer A. Harrington, A. W. Starret and Emory Ireland the latter head of the adult unit. The present school structure was erected in 1932 at a cost of $65,000.

Women's activities at Chevy Chase revolve around the Woman's Missionary Society, of which Mrs. Mason B. Leming is president, and the Woman's Guild, led by Mrs. Ben Temple Webster. Divided into 15 sections, the guild units meet in members' homes once monthly, and sponsor a joint meeting at the church the first of each month.

"It Lives" will be Dr. Hollister's theme for tomorrow's 11 a. m. service, when a stained glass window will be dedicated in memory of the late J. Frank Kelly.

[Temple Baptist Church's contribution listed in the "Church of the Week" for to the success of the Center will be out-April 1.]

Dr. Buschmeyer will speak on "Christian Radiance" following the church night supper Thursday at 6:15.

Christian Science Topic Is 'Reality;' Lecture Monday

"Reality," is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Philippians 4:8: Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."

A free lecture on Christian Science entitled "Christian Science and the Kingdom of God" will be delivered by Paul Stark Seeley, C. B. S., of Portland, Oreg., at 8 p. m. Monday, in First Church of Christ, Scientist, Columbia road and Euclid street northwest, under the auspices of that church.

Mr. Seeley is a member of the board of lectureship of the Mother Church in Boston. He will be introduced by Mrs. Helen G. McNeill, second reader of First Church.

Holy Rosary to Start Mission Tomorrow

The Rev. Odorico Rasselle, Franciscan missionary from Troy, N. Y., will conduct the annual mission at Holy Rosary Church, Third and F streets northwest, beginning tomorrow at 8 a. m. mass and continuing through Palm Sunday evening.

St. John's To Present Fifth Concert

The men and boys choir of St. John's Episcopal Church, directed by Arthur Howes, organist, will present the fifth of a series of six sacred music concerts Monday at 8:30 p. m. at the church, featuring exclusively works of 16th century masters.

The continental school will be represented by compositions of Palestrina, Vittoria, Anerio and Ingefneri and the English polyphonic school by Farrant, Tallis Weelkes and Gibbons.

Tomorrow Dr. Oliver J. Hart, rector, who has just returned from a speaking engagement at St. Michael's Church, Charleston, S. C., will preach on "Forgiveness" at both 9:30 and 11 a. m. services. There will be Holy Communion at 8 a. m., and the Rev. W. C. White, curate, will preach on "Light" at evening prayer.

Rock Creek Parish. The Rev. William Murray Bradner, canon precentor of the Cathedral, will be guest speaker at the 11 a. m. church service, discussing "Redeeming the Time." He will first address the church school at 9:30 a. m. on "Missions," and the Bible class at 10 a. m. on "Sacrifice Contrast—the Old Testament with the New."

The Rev. James Valliant, rector of Epiphany Church at Forestville, Md., will be guest preacher at the service Wednesday at 8 p. m.

St. Agnes. Two Lenten retreats will be held in this church next week, one on Tuesday for men and older boys, led by the Rev. Arlington McCallum, rector of St. Paul's Church; the other on Thursday, for women, led by Father Paul, O. S. B., one of a group who went to England several years ago to enter the Benedictine Order.

Epiphany. The special noon-day preacher from Monday to Friday, inclusive this week, will be the Rev. Hulbert A. Woolfall, D. D., rector of St. Peter's Church, St. Louis, formerly rector of St. Mark's Church of this city, considered one of the ablest younger Episcopal ministers.

Tomorrow, Passion Sunday, Dr. ZeBarney Phillips, Epiphany rector, will conduct special services and preach at morning prayer. There will be Holy Communion at 8 a. m. and evening prayer at 8 p. m., conducted by the Rev. Duncan Fraser.

Chapel of the Redeemer. The Rev. Richard Aselford, rector of Grace Church, Woodside, Md., will be the guest preacher at the 9:30 a. m. service. Wednesday at 8 p. m. Dr. Hulbert Woolfall, rector of St. Peter's Church, St. Louis, will speak.

Transfiguration. Canon Anson Phelps Stokes, of the Cathedral, will be guest preacher at the 11 a. m. service, at which Dr. J. J. Queally, rector, will officiate. Jesse Heitmuller, organist, will direct the choir's presentation of the sacred cantata "Olivet to Calvary," Wednesday at 8 p. m.

All Saints'. The Rev. Henry Teller Cocke will speak on "The Meaning of Christ's Passion" at the 11 a. m. service. There will be Holy Communion at the early service at 7:30. Maj. Louis J. Compton, U. S. Army, will teach the Men's Bible class meeting at 9:45 a. m.

Universalist Forum to Hear Senora James

"The Conservation of Real Values" will be the subject of Dr. Seth R. Brooks' sermon tomorrow in Universalist National Memorial Church at 11 a. m.

At the adult forum at 10 a. m., Senora Concha Romero James, chief of the division of intellectual cooperation, Pan-American Union, will discuss "Inter-American Cultural Relations" in the third forum of the current series on "The Americas."

Wednesday at 7 p. m. there will be a special parish meeting. At 7:45 there will be a short period of organ meditations and at 8:05 a brief service of worship. The subject will be "The Church: The Past," Dr. van Schaick and "The Future," Dr. Brooks.

All Souls' Unitarian. Dr. Eric England, assistant chief, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Agriculture, will speak on "Democracy and the Land" before the adult class in current problems of All Souls' Church school tomorrow at 10 a. m.

At the same hour, Dr. Paul A. Goettleman of the school of architecture, Catholic University, will address the comparative religion class on "Jesus in Art." The other departments of the school will have "open house."

The Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D. D., will preach at the 11 a. m. service on "The Unwitting Splendor." At 5 p. m., Lewis Corning Atwater will play his final organ recital of the year, assisted by Katherine Sale English, contralto.

Dr. Robin Gould To Discuss 'Yeast That Destroys'

The pastor of Francis Asbury M. E. Church, South, Dr. Robin Gould, will preach at both services tomorrow. At 11 a. m. he will speak on "More Than Conqueror." At 8 p. m. his theme will be, "Yeast That Destroys." At the evening service the music will be supplied by the Francis Asbury Choral Club.

Emory. The Rev. Horace E. Cromer will preach at 11 a. m. on "They Have Taken Away My Lord," and at 8 p. m. on "Honor Among Thieves."

Mrs. David W. Lum, for many years a missionary in China, will address the Woman's Missionary Society Wednesday evening.

Capital Church Activities

Two Congressmen will lend their oratory to religion here tomorrow. In chronological order they are Representative Sam Hobbs, of Alabama, and Representative Lewis Rockefeller, of New York. The former will address a joint session of the F. I. Green class and the Young People's class in the West Washington Baptist Sunday School House at 10 a. m. Representative Rockefeller will speak at the evening service at Eastern Presbyterian Church, which will be conducted by the George H. Winslow Bible class of that church.

Last Monday the aforementioned Greene Class elected officers, who include Mrs. Sarah T. Craig, president; Mrs. F. L. Ormsbee, vice president; Mrs. Evelyn B. Torreyson, recording secretary; Mrs. Ralph Stair, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Carl P. Conrad, treasurer. Miss Emma Stevens is teacher

Tomorrow at 7 p. m. Page McKetchison will present his illustrated lecture on "The Passion Play" to the three youth groups of Fifteenth Street Christian Church, while at 6 p. m. the young people of another Christian Church, National City, will be hosts to the Young People's League of Luther Place Memorial Church and will hear yet a third Congressman, Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia.

Last Christian Note: His congregation and most of the other ministers of the Disciples of Christ Churches of the vicinity last Wednesday tendered a reception to the Rev. J. Lloyd Black, recently appointed pastor of Park View Christian Church, his wife and their son, J. Lloyd, jr. Present were Dr. R. H. Miller, the Rev. and Mrs. Ivan Dugan, the Rev. A. P. Wilson, the Rev. and Mrs. C. N. Williams, the Rev. Fred Miller, the Rev. and Mrs. E. R. Bryan, the Rev. C. H. Jope, the Rev. W. G. Orem, the Rev and Mrs. O. F. Sherwood and the Rev. and Mrs. Kenneth Buker.

Sign of spring: "We (the Luther League of Atonement Church) have a business meeting tonight at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Nalley, 2419 First street northwest. At this business meeting we will have tryouts for our spring play. Tomorrow is missionary Sunday and Mrs. Roger Mills will speak about "India." I will have the rest of the meeting in my charge . . ." Yes, the most unquenchable young publicizer in the local churches, Doris Hinsch, is back again. Undoubtedly, as she says, "You will hear more about the play later-on" . . .

Another play. To be given by the Senior B. Y. P. U. of Metropolitan Baptist Church, tomorrow at 6:30 p. m., will be "Silver Trumpet," their entry in the annual stewardship play contest.

"Engagement" is the title of the third lecture in the series being delivered by Lillian Fink to the Takoma Luther League on the subject of "Courtship and Marriage" tomorrow evening.

Rush item: Today, from 11 a. m. to 3 p. m., the Junior Bible Class of Rock Creek Episcopal Parish is having a bake sale, proceeds to be used toward the school's Lenten offering . . .

Pilgrimage. Members of the congregation of the Augustana Lutheran Church have been invited to participate in commemoration services Wednesday at 3:30 p. m. in Wilmington, Del. The occasion is a tribute to the first Swedish settlers in America. Services will be at the Kalmar Nyckel Monument in Fort Christina Park, Wilmington, and Senator Johnson, of Colorado, will speak, while Dr. Arthur Hjelm, Augustana pastor, will conduct the devotional ceremonies.

Spring returns. Friday, from 4 to 6 and at 7:30 p. m., the Congregational women of the District of Columbia area, are to hold a spring rally at First Congregational Church, with exhibits, booths, movies and skits depicting the world-wide activities of the Congregational - Christian Churches. M

Hitler Reported Allying Poland By Danzig Deal

Would Renounce City if Poles Shun Anti-Nazi Bloc

By Michael Wilson.

Copyright, 1939, by International News Service.

Paris, March 24.—Germany was authoritatively declared tonight to have given Poland secret assurances Adolf Hitler would renounce all claims to the Free City of Danzig in exchange for Polish refusal to join France, Britain and Soviet Russia in an anti-German front.

This was believed to explain the failure of Paris, London and Moscow to bring Warsaw into participation in an international declaration of opposition to further Nazi expansion.

From an unimpeachable source it was learned the French government was informed of the German assurances to Poland which were said to have been given this afternoon. The assurances, which involve the safety not only of Danzig, but also of the vital Polish corridor which provides Poland with her only outlet to the sea, were secretly conveyed to Warsaw but were of a formal character nevertheless.

This was ascertained reliably, despite denials of such reports in Warsaw.

Thwarts Maneuver

Thus, it appeared that by a lightning diplomatic maneuver Adolf Hitler himself is making a strong bid to stop the "Stop Hitler" movement fostered by the democratic powers and the Soviet Union.

Germany was understood to have promised Poland in precise and concrete terms the Reich will accord the same standing to Danzig in official Nazi eyes as she already has given to France's Alsace-Lorraine. Hitler has often publicly announced he does not wish Alsace-Lorraine to return to Germany.

From the highest source it was furthermore learned Poland last night and this morning quietly mobilized two entire classes of army reserves under the pretext of "military exercises," as well as calling to the colors by individual summonses the members of the famed Polish "Society of Sharpshooters."

This mobilization was evidently intended to prepare for any sudden "surprise" that might endanger Poland's frontiers, especially those of the Polish corridor which is hemmed in by East Prussia and Germany proper.

Would Refuse Danzig Troops

Apparently the German assurances arrived following these Polish military measures.

Germany was said to have informed Poland that if the Poles stay out of the Anglo-French-Soviet coalition, the Germans would undertake military as well as civilian commitments with regard to Danzig.

That is to say, in the event the Nazi-dominated Danzig Senate should vote to reincorporate the free city into the Reich, Hitler would repudiate such an action and would refuse to send his troops into the Danzig area.

The importance of this lies in the fact that German occupation of Danzig, nominally governed by the League of Nations, but actually under Nazi political control, would render extremely untenable Poland's position in the whole corridor, which would thereby be at Hitler's command.

Rumania May Lose 2 Minority Groups

Hungary

mania and establish a corridor to Hungary.

The main body of 1,200,000 Hungarians in Rumania live in eastern Transylvania, not contiguous with the Hungarian frontier.

The Saxons, who have maintained German customs and language, live south and southwest of the Hungarian island. Most of their leaders are educated in Berlin and are strong supporters of Hitler.

Hungarian revisionists asserted signature of the new German-Rumanian trade treaty did not solve the "Rumanian question." Although admitting it had put off, at least temporarily, the possibility of armed conflict over the matter, they said Germany would back Hungary in demanding peaceful satisfaction from the Bucharest government.

Hungarians Retreat

By the Associated Press.

Bratislava, Slovakia, March 24.—Continued fighting along the Hungarian-Slovak frontier was reported today by the Slovak defense ministry which announced Slovak planes had bombed Hungarian troops near the town of Sobrance.

(Sobrance is in eastern Slovakia, about seven miles north of the east-west boundary between Hungary and Slovakia and the same distance west of the Slovak boundary with Carpatho-Ukraine, now a part of Hungary.

(Budapest dispatches made no mention of fighting and said Hungarian troops controlled the Ung Valley along a "rectified" frontier with Slovakia.

(It also was announced a mixed commission would meet Sunday to fix definitely the frontier between the two nations.)

One of two communiques issued by the defense ministry said Hungarian troops were "slowly retreating under pressure of our air forces. Our fliers are very active and have had impotant successes. The Hungarians are putting up heavy resistance."

The second asserted "Three of our planes bombed Sobrance, where a motorized column of 25 units was hit" at 7:55 a. m. (1:55 a. m. E. S. T.).

"On the outskirts of Sobrance," it added, "tanks and another motorized column were bombed. Near the village of Tibava (about one mile south of Sobrance) Hungarian positions were bombed."

The communique asserted that near Lucky, four miles west of Sobrance, a Magyar (Hungarian) plane was shot down and its pilot, who landed by parachute, captured.

Philadelphia Colored Mother to Be Asked To Repay $4,000 State Aid Money; Professional Ticket Buyer Makes $50,000

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, March 24.—A Philadelphia colored woman—on relief for six years—won $150,000 today in the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes.

"I guess I'll take things easy now," beamed Mrs. Pearl Mason, 38, while two children pulled her skirts and friends trucked through the house.

"I knew I was going to win. I had a dream two nights ago."

Her husband, Benjamin, works in a garage when "there's any work to do."

State officials said they would demand $4,000 out of the winnings as recompense for the relief money—$11.80 a week—the family had collected.

Ticket Buyer Makes $50,000

New York, March 24 (AP).—A Sweepstakes winner nearly every time—that's Sidney (Duggy) Freeman, brisk, pleasant Englishman, who is engaged in the not-so-risky-as-it-sounds business of buying Sweepstakes tickets and shares in tickets from lucky persons who have drawn horses in the pay-off races.

"Duggy" looked up from a sheaf of telegrams, computation sheets and charts today after the Grand National had been run and estimated his profit at $50,000.

"Duggy" arrived last Thursday with $1,000,000 to spend on sweepstakes tickets. By 2 o'clock this morning he had spent $700,000.

"Duggy" comes overy every time there's a sweepstakes drawing. He made 120 "deals," as he calls them, in the metropolitan area alone, and nearly 200 more throughout the country.

$300,000 on Workman

"Duggy" had four half-shares on Workman, the winning horse. Return, $300,000. He had two half-shares on Mac Moffat, the second horse. The return, $75,000. He had three half-shares on Kilstar, and that gave him $75,000 a total of $450,000 on the first three horses.

In fact, he had tickets on all but three of the 37 starting horses—Deslys, Drim and Tuckmill, all 100-to-1 shots.

In addition to his return on the first three horses, "Duggy" also will get $1,200 on every ticket held on every horse that started.

Rumania Fears Halter on Trade Outside Reich

Shortage of Exchange Expected to Curtail Dealings Elsewhere

By the Associated Press.

Bucharest, March 24.—A prospective shortage of foreign exchange as a result of Rumania's new five-year trade agreement with Germany troubled Rumanian experts today.

The country was expecting to be much busier as a result of the pact, but it was concerned about how it was going to handle the increased business without foreign funds other than the controlled exchange expected from Germany.

In some quarters it was hoped the shortage would be met by new trade deals with England and other countries.

Although Rumania's exports to Germany are expected to be more than doubled within a short time as a result of the trade pact, little, if any, increase in receipts of free foreign exchange is looked for.

In return for exports to Germany, Rumania will get armaments, highways and railroad materials, and German help in development of Rumanian oil fields, quarries and plantations. The dealing will be on a "balanced exchange" basis.

Previously a purchaser of a little more than a quarter of Rumanian exports, Germany, conservative economists estimated today, should within a few months be absorbing more than half of them.

Rumania's exports in 1938 were valued at 21,500,000,000 lei ($150,500,000). Germany absorbed 5,700,000,000 lei ($39,900,000) and Czecho-Slovakia, the most important part of which is now German, took 2,000,057,000 lei ($14,000,399). England's share was only 2,400,000,000 lei ($16,800,000).

In that year Germany bought $450,000 tons of Rumanian grain and Czecho-Slovakia took another 148,000 tons.

Germany in 1938 bought 425,000 tons of Rumanian petroleum products, about one-tenth of Germany's total petroleum import that year.

Grain exports are certain to rise sharply. There even were predictions that reclamation of the bogged and swampy delta of the Danube River, which German engineers are expected to undertake, would increase wheat production so much Germany might disappear as a purchaser in markets other than Rumania.

Hull Declares Hitler Coups Imperil Peace

Back From Vacation, Calls for Law, Order And Sound Economics

Secretary of State Hull, returning yesterday from Florida, declared Germany's extension of her power in Czecho-Slovakia and Memel threatened the peace of the world and called for support of all nations for "law and order and sound economic relations."

Recovered from a cold which had caused him to take a brief rest, the Secretary, as if emphasizing the gravity with which this Government regards European developments, issued a statement at his press conference, saying:

"Having closely followed international developments at home and abroad during my temporary absence, I have in common with the general public here been profoundly shocked by the recent developments in Europe. They have been of a nature seriously to threatend the peace of the world.

Calls for Law and Order

"These new evidences of international lawlessness make it all the more clear that never before has the support of all nations for law and order and sound economic relations been more urgently needed than at present.

"We in this country have striven, particularly during recent years, and we shall continue to strive, to strengthen the threatened structure of world peace by fostering in every possible way the rule of law and the building of sound economic relationships upon which along peace can rest. Every citizen and every group in this country will, I am sure, co-operate loyally and wholeheartedly in this great and urgent task."

A short time after Hull spoke, the Treasury formally applied higher tariff rates to products from Memel, which has been acquired by the Reich. By formally designating these products as German, the order deprived them of favorable tariff treatment accorded to other countries and made them subject, in addition, to a 25 per cent countervailing duty which will go into effect against German goods April 23.

France Seeking Pact With Italy, London Hears

Envoy Held Secretly Contacting Duce and Former Premier Laval

By William Hillman.

Copyright, 1939, by International News Service.

London, March 24.—Secret efforts were under way tonight to dissolve the menace of war over Italy's claim against France by bringing those two quarreling nations into a new Mediterranean agreement.

Unknown to the world, an envoy has been traveling between former French Premier Laval and Italian Premier Mussolini, carrying on discussions on the possibility of erecting a "Mediterranean Locarno," it was learned.

Such a pact would embrace as signatories not only Italy and France, but also Great Britain and Gen. Franco's nationalist Spain.

"Neutralized" Gibraltar

Of wide scope, the suggested agreement would involve:

A permanent settlement of the Spanish question.

The "neutralization" and independence of Gibraltar.

Arrangements for certain uses to be made by the powers of the Spanish Balearic Isilands of Mallorca and Minorca.

Extended citizenship rights, demanded by the Fascists, for Italians in French colonial territories, such as Tunisia, and increased shipping facilities for Italians in French colonial ports.

Agreement on Italian claims for concessions at the strategic French port of Djibuti and a share in the administration of the Suez Canal.

Establishment of a naval status quo in the Mediterranean.

Would Omit Germany

Negotiation of a Mediterranean accord, which as now proposed would not include Germany, would be accompanied by conclusion of a trade agreement among France, Italy, Britain and nationalist Spain. This would include provisions for international participation in rebuilding war-devastated Spain.

As an inducement to Mussolini to end the Italo-French tension peacefully, Britain and France would arrange to grant much-needed credits to Italy under the contemplated agreement. The accord would also provide for mutual trade co-operation among Italy, France and Britain.

The present discussions, it was learned, do not involve the question of mutual guarantees of frontiers in the Mediterranean basin.

Despite a denial that Laval is partaking in the secret talks, it was ascertained an agent of the former French premier is acting as a go-between and is getting the fullest reaction from Mussolini regarding the various problems entailed in the attempts to fashion a "Mediterranean Locarno" and insure the peace and security of that all-important sea and the lands fringing it.

London, March 24 (AP).—Prime Minister Chamberlain made fresh efforts today for Polish support of his European "Halt Hitler" front.

Ten days after the German coup in Czecho-Slovakia the prime minister still held hopes of persuading Foreign Minister Joseph Beck, of Poland, to approve an anti-Hitler declaration by promises of British military aid, despite discouraging reports from Warsaw.

(In Warsaw the newspaper Express Poranny, considered a mouthpiece of the Polish Foreign Office, said "Poland does not expect anything from declarations" and would not permit herself to be dragged into any bloc—presumably against Germany—and would refrain from taking the initiative in forming any blocs herself.)

(Warsaw political circles considered this as tantamount to rejection of the British-sponsored plan).

Berlin, March 24 (AP).—Reichsfuehrer Hitler rounded out ten days of achievement unparalleled even in his meteoric career today with his return to Berlin from newly acquired Memel.

He came back to his pretentious chancellery without the fanfare of previous homecomings and turned immediately to arrangements for two important ceremonies next month.

Reich Announces 2 Tax Measures To Pay Arms Cost

Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, March 24.—For the second time this year, the Nazi government has been forced to revise its financing methods in order to carry out the Third Reich's "war economy."

The tax burden was increased tonight for almost the entire population—a new type of "tax certificate" and an increase in income tax assessments were announced by the ministry of finance.

Two types of the new tax certificates are to be issued to govern new agencies to fill their needs. One, which industry can turn in at the end of seven months for its tax value, amounts, in effect, to currency infiflation. The other type amounts to a forced loan. It runs for 37 months, then may be utilized for payment of taxes to the extent of 112 per cent of its nominal value.

'Only Strong Moral Offensive' Can Stop Nazis, Says Briton

Engineer Believes Showdown Is Certain; Chances of War by May's End Are 100 Per Cent Now, He Asserts

According to the present trend of world events, the chances of war by the end of May "are 100 per cent," said Arthur Primrose Young, O. B. E., noted British industrialist, in yesterday at the Hay-Adams House.

YOUNG

One of England's great electrical engineers and author of numerous books on the technicalities of management, Young United States on a combined business and pleasure trip. He described the foreign outlook as "extremely gloomy" and predicted a "showdown with Hitler" with the very near future.

Although at the end of September—following the Munich conference—the risk of war was only 10 per cent, Young said, events of the last few months have increased that risk to 80 per cent.

He added that there is still a chance of avoiding conflict "if the democracies get together and launch a strong moral offensive."

"We must strengthen, by all means possible, our moral armaments," Young declared. "This is largely a personal matter, but if we all do our part the moral power for good radiated by the democratic groups will be such as to make ultimate victory certain.

"The democracies, in squarely facing this struggle, must securely anchor their efforts in the realms of the physical to the great moral purpose at stake—the defense of the human spirit."

Even in the face of alarming developments, England is calm, said Young. He said the average Britisher is not easily perturbed and the traditional English spirit has remained unshaken.

"But in spite of what Chamberlain and others have done," he asserted, "the people of my country know that someday—and not far distant—there must be a showdown with Hitler.

It is admitted by those close to Hitler, said Young, that the only man he fears is President Roosevelt.

"The United States has ceased to talk and has taken action," Young declared, "and President Roosevelt is the only man with enough courage to stand up against this fear-breeding power. This is a tribute to your country and the man at its head."

To have a clear view of the international situation said Young, three fundamental principles must be recognized. The present grave situation, he daded, is according to plan—the plan of the present rulers of Germany. He listed these fundamental factors:

What happens in Europe, or in any other part of the world, affects for good or ill every citizen of every country.

The thoughts of all peoples are directed to the rulers of Germnay because it is clear that these rulers have dedicated their lives to the principle htat "might is right."

That man is at the cross-roads and must choose between Christ and anti-Christ.

"Nazism," Young said, "recognizes no law but its own. Its seteady evolution has torn up the eternal moral code which has guided our civilzation for generations. Its future development, if unimpeded, means definitely the final destruction of Jews, Christianity and capitalism, leading to the annihilation of the human spirit."

One of the greatest weapons of Naziism is its propaganda and the cunning use which it makes of timing in all its forward planning, Young stated.

"In fact," he said, "the element of time has been so used by the rulers of Germany as to become in their hands what is virtually a new weapon of offense. The propaganda is diabolically cunning and efficient."

In the present struggle, said Young, the democracies are all in the same boat.

"The boat may be a very long one," he concluded, "but the fact remains that any fearful disruption of its buoyancy at any point will ultimately mean that the boat will sink. But this should not discourage us, because it is a fine old boat."

Hitler Coups ClinchSafety of Reich on East

Memel Seizure, Pact With Rumania End Fears of Invasion

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 24.—Incorporation of Memelland into greater Germany and negotiation of a Rumanian trade treaty have clinched the last links in a band of friendly neighbors along Germany's eastern frontier as a buffer against her potential foe, Soviet Russia.

For the first time since the World War Germans held today they had only friends on the immediate east, from the Baltic to the Black Sea.

Adolf Hitler, Fuehrer of 80,000,000 persons in 245,000 square miles of territory, thus had improved Germany's central European position not only by solidifying his empire in the last year but also by diminishing the old German worry about a possible attack from the east.

The cession of Memelland, formerly under Lithuanian sovereignty, brought little Lithuania into Hitler's arms through a non-aggression pact and an economic understanding. Rumania plugged a hole to the southeast through a far-reaching economic tie-up with Germany.

As for the other and older links, the Polish-German nonaggression treaty still has several years to run, while Hungary has been working closely with the Rome-Berlin axis and has joined the anticomintern pact.

However, informed sources predicted there would be no immediate startling developments in Germany's expansion.

Two Veterans' Pension Bills Are Favored

Committee Members Fear Veto of Single Act on Age Benefits

Opposition to some features of a bill giving increased benefits to veterans developed yesterday in the House World War Veterans' Committee.

The bill, which Chairman Rankin, of Mississippi, had expected to report favorably yesterday, was held in committee for further consideration, and probably will be reported Wednesday.

As it now stands, the measure combines provisions for increasing compensation disabled veterans and their widows with provisions for paying a $40 per month pension to all World War veterans $65 or over.

Favors Two Bills

Some members of the committee, it was said, favor splitting the bill into two parts, as they fear the President will veto the combined bill because of the pension provisions. They believe that if the clauses regarding disabled veterans are offered in an independent bill, Presidential approval would be given. The pension section, they argue, would then have to stand on its own merits.

On the other hand, it was suggested the maneuver of placing all provisions into one bill might be an effort to put the President "on the spot," by forcing him either to accept the pension proposal or to veto added benefits for disabled veterans.

Taylor Indorses Bill

Col. John Thomas Taylor, legislative representative for the American Legion, told The Post last night he was heartily in favor of the bill as it now stands. He asserted his attitude was not inconsistent with that of Stephen F. Chadwick, national commander of the Legion.

"The proposal in this bill," said Taylor, "is not a general pension proposal. Pensions now are given to veterans who are permanently and totally disabled; this bill merely blankets all veterans over 65 into that class." Taylor added that he had "not the slightest idea" of the ultimate cost of the bill.

It has been estimated that it involves an expenditure of $13,000,000,000.

Justice For Panama

A correspondent whose letter appears elsewhere on this page calls attention to the fact that, in the midst of the campaign to cultivate good will among the Latin-American republics, rental due for use of the Canal Zone remains unpaid. It is not a situation of which any American can feel proud.

It is not accurate, however, to blame the Department of State for this situation. The Administration certainly assumed the position that our obligation to Panama could be discharged by the payment of devalued dollars. By that arbitrary action, taken in spite of the fact that the treaty calls for payment in gold, the Government exposed itself to sharp rejoinders, especially in Latin-American countries, from those powers which we now accuse of violating international agreements. But the Department of State long ago sought to make amends.

A new treaty negotiated with Panama increases the annual payment from the United States for use of the Canal Zone from $250,000 to $430,000. The latter sum is approximately equivalent to the amount Panama claimed as her annual due after devaluation of the dollar. But since that country properly rejects payment in devalued dollars, no transfers on this score have been made since 1934. The little Central American republic is satisfied with the new settlement (which includes an exchange of various concessions in addition to the rental adjustment) and has ratified the treaty. Similar action on the part of the Senate was asked last year by its Foreign Relations Committee, but the question never came to a vote.

The Senate ought to realize that this inexcusable procrastination seriously complicates the problem of friendly relations between the United States and Latin America. Beyond that, the United States is a poor advocate of standards of international morality so long as we disregard our own clear obligations to countries too weak to demand fair play.

Medals Are Not Enough

Awards for meritorious service would be an appropriate addition to the civil service system. Men and women particularly outstanding in their devotion to the work of government are as much entitled to recognition as are distinguished soldiers and sailors. So far as it extends, therefore, Senator Bulow's bill creating a meritorious service medal to be awarded to civil servants of the highest attainments seems to be worthy of the indorsement the Senate has given it.

No one should suppose, however, that the granting of medals for meritorious service will become a major factor in building up a genuine merit system. Some Government employes respond to the lure of an award for outstanding service. But probably all of them are more interested in promotions, salary increases and day to day recognition of devoted and competent work. They want to find along their paths in the Government service, not medals, but the opportunity for careers with remuneration and advancement commensurate with the ability and energy they demonstrate.

To date the Government has accomplished so little toward development of a career service that every move to reward outstanding service seems to be important. If plans now afoot succeed, however, the proposed meritorious service medals will take a place far down the list of incentives for improvement of the Government's personnel system. The new Council of Personnel Administration is working on ways of attracting the most competent men and women from many lines of work into the Government service, of advancing the most promising individuals into higher posts for which they are adapted and of training personnel for special tasks.

Another distinguished group is considering tests of fitness to be applied to various employes of professional rank before they are admitted into the classified civil service. Moreover, trained personnel divisions are being established in the executive department. If all these plans now in the development stage are permitted to become effective, a renaissance will be in store for the merit system. Medals will become an insignificant part of the incentive for distinguished service in public office.

Germany's Satellites

The blows struck by Germany during the past fortnight have resulted in perceptible disintegration of the status quo throughout all central and eastern Europe. Actually or potentially the Third Reich is today master of the vast area between the Rhine and the Dniester, the Baltic and the Black Sea. But there is, as yet, no uniformity as to the degree and nature of the control exercised over that region by Berlin.

Some nations within the German orbit continue to enjoy a more or less precarious degree of independence. Yugoslavia is in that class and so is Poland. The latter's freedom of action, however, has been greatly curtailed by the destruction of Czecho-Slovakia and the annexation of Memel. To a greater extent than is the case with Poland the continued independence of Hungary depends on the grace and forbearance of Berlin.

It is interesting to examine the four types of arrangements Germany has made in the case of the other neighboring states. Bohemia and Moravia have been annexed to the Third Reich and today form an integral part of that nation. But Hitler has not followed the same course with respect to Slovakia, Lithuania and Rumania.

Slovakia has been permitted to remain nominally outside the Third Reich. Actually this concession is meaningless. The new puppet state, in return for German "protection," must permit German troops to occupy strategic points in Slovak territory and organize "its own military forces in close collaboration with the German armed force."

Lithuania's case is different again. The loss of Memel has not led to the immediate destruction of the little Baltic republic's political independence. Lithuania remains a truly sovereign state. But it is now completely at the mercy of Germany. It is obviously in no position to resist any military push from its powerful neighbor. And through ownership of Memel, Lithuania's only outlet to the sea, Germany completely controls the economic life of that nation. In this instance, as in the case of Slovakia, the Third Reich has apparently decided that control through an independent or quasi-independent government is easier, cheaper and fully as effective as outright annexation.

There remains Rumania. Following the destruction of Czecho-Slovakia there was a possibility that this would be the next nation to be flattened out by the Nazi steamroller. But if he has such plans in mind, Hitler has held them in abeyance. His immediate interest in Rumania is primarily economic. He needs the oil, the mineral wealth, the agricultural resources of that kingdom. And he will get most if not all of what he is after by the economic arrangement just made with the Bucharest government.

Rumania had no alternative to acceptance of the Nazi demand for the establishment of something resembling a German-Rumanian "partnershop" in the exploitation of Rumania's resources and something like a German monopoly of Rumanian trade in certain agricultural products, notably wheat. She was, even before Munich, very considerably dependent on the German market and that dependence has increased as a result of the destruction of Czecho-Slovakia. But however great the concessions she has found it necessary to make to the Third Reich she continues to enjoy political independence, at least.

By and large, therefore, Rumania has not emerged from the ordeal of the past fortnight too badly. But for how long her independence will continue to be a fact remains uncertain. Her plight in this particular is the plight of all the nations in Germany's path.

The important thing, at the moment, however, is that Germany has seen fit to create various classes of dependence—outright absorption as in the case of Bohemia and Moravia; effective domination without absorption in the case of Slovakia; neutralization through economic control in the case of Lithuania and economic domination without political domination in the case of Rumania.

In dealing with Germany, therefore, the nations in Germany's path are now under notice that, depending on their readiness to "co-operate," the Third Reich's control over them may be as relatively mild as it is with regard to Rumania or as drastic as it is in Bohemia and Slovakia. This may further weaken their will to resist and give support to those elements within their borders who argue that it is better for their nation to come to terms now and save something of independence than to resist and lose everything.

Under the circumstances, therefore, the attempt to create a "stop Hitler" coalition, is certain to have hard going.

In The Free State

The Maryland Legislature is considering, perhaps not too seriously, a bill making it compulsory for pedestrians on the public highways to carry reflectors or lights after nightfall. Approaching automobile drivers would thereby be advised of the pedestrian's presence and thus could more easily avoid mussing up the road with broken limbs and such.

For the violation or nonobservance of the law there would, presumably, be a penalty inflicted by the State (under its new authority) or by the driver (as at present) or both. Which is as it should be. The desire for good, clean safety is commendable.

Moreover there is strong possibility that the new measure will boost trade. And the deeper the depression the larger the cushioning market in tail lights for pedestrians. Indeed we move steadily toward the time when no man will think of going out for his evening stroll unless equipped not only with glittering breastplate and rear red light but with a gas mask as well.

Faith In Economy

Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, has told a Senate committee that the public in general, as well as businessmen, bankers and a majority of Congressmen, believe that business confidence would be restored if the budget were balanced. While himself convinced that under present conditions retrenchment would have "disastrous results," Mr. Eccles concludes that the viewpoint of the majority should "promptly be made effective."

It is a particularly opportune time to remind Congress of its responsibility for translating demands for budget-balancing economies into positive action. Coincident with Mr. Eccles' testimony the House Appropriations Committee reported out a farm bill of record-breaking size, causing Representative Woodrum to exclaim that the current economy drive is "out of the window." It was even rumored that votes for the farm bill, carrying unbudgeted expenditures of $250,000,000 in parity payments, might be obtained in exchange for promises to support the President's demand for $150,000,000 additional for relief.

This kind of log-rolling has an almost irresistible attraction for a large legislative body in which each member has special interests to represent and a definite geographical area to serve. For that reason it is extremely difficult for Congress to effect substantial reductions in Government expenditures except with the active encouragement of the Administration. The lack of such leadership is most unfortunate from the viewpoint of the economy advocates. However, something will be gained if Mr. Eccles' statement means that the Administration will not place fresh obstacles in the way of an approach to budget balancing.

The task ahead is not nearly so formidable as the Eccles statement assumes, because the choice does not lie between maintaining the present scale of expenditures and immediate balancing of the budget. Another alternative to unchecked spending is a rational program of retrenchment which would enable us to make steady and perceptible progress away from deficit financing.

As Senator Harrison said: "No one believes that the Federal budget can be completely balanced at this time. The expenditures are too large and the continuing deficits too great." But the American people do believe, he added, "that some approach to budget balancing should be started immediately by the Congress, acting in co-operation with the Executive." Such action would do more to encourage the utilization of idle capital and idle men than the inflationary stimulus provided by deficit financing. That, at any rate, appears to be the opinion held by many who are competent to speak. And it is shared by a large proportion of the people.

Reward For Civic Work

Thomas E. Lodge became well known to residents of the District as president of the Federation of Citizens Associations and through numerous civic activities. He was entitled to recognition, not as a politician, but as an outstanding local citizen and civic leader. Appointments made on that sound basis are especially appropriate when they involve the chairmanship of such an important agency as the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

When President Roosevelt is ready to select a third member of the Board of Commissioners the precedent of naming a competent executive who has proved his interest in the local community through civic work should not be overlooked.

Learn not to expect very much of anybody—particularly yourself.

The Watermelon Pear

From the Christian Science Monitor.

Research applied to agriculture has resulted in such modern marvels as summer squashes with long necks, seedless apples, tomatoes, grapes, peppers, oranges, eggplants and a host of other things. But watermelons and pumpkins have long defied human dictatorship in such matters. Now, however, a Chinese graduate student at Michigan State College has succeeded in conquering the seed-producing habits of the watermelon. Also there's more red "meat" and less of the whitish portion than in normal melons, according to the report, and the shape is more pear-like than oval. All of which won't impress pickaninnies with whom watermelon eating is an art and mass production seed-removing a science, nor will it solve the problem of housewives who want square melons that will fit in the refrigerator without crowding out everything else.

New Gibraltar?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When or if the whole rest of the world falls under the heel of fascism, the Soviet alone will still stand against it like the Rock of Gibraltar, peaceful and unshakable, but grim and challenging if need be.

This will be so, not so much because the Soviet has the greatest armaments on the face of the earth, not because of the great area and population, but largely because she has rid herself of capitalistic "appeasers" and fascist sympathizers. It will be so because the workers there are in power and it is the workers, not capitalists, who conduct the Soviet foreign policy.

Labor Co-operation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The labor movement in Washington is to be congratulated on the united stand recently taken by unions of the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. during the hotel strike.

While the unions directly involved in the controversy were all of them affiliated with the A. F. of L., the support voted them by the C. I. O.'s Washington Industrial Union Council, and the refusal of members of C. I. O. unions, especially the United Federal Workers of America, to go through the picket lines that were maintained played a large part in demonstrating both to the hotels and to the public generally that the forces of labor can unite and work co-operatively and peacefully for improved working conditions and collective bargaining. The Socialist Party has long hoped that such manifestations of unified activity among the ranks of labor would lead to a speedy end to the internecine warfare that has hurt labor itself, as well as the general public.

The Socialist Party heartily indorses this action on the part of the unions involved, and pledges its constant support for all moves designed to bring the forces of labor together upon a common program, structure and purposes.

Justice For Panama

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Secretary Hull recently made, at Lima, an earnest effort to create good will and a more comprehensive understanding of common problems between Latin America and the United States. If these efforts of our State Department are not to be stigmatized as insincere and hypocritical protestations of good will, should we not, without further argument or discussion, pay to the Republic of Panama in gold, as originally provided, the currently due and unpaid $250,000 annual rental payment for the Canal Zone?

No economic or diplomatic sophistry can defend our present governmental philosophy of refusal to pay in gold. Obviously Panama is unable to compel this Government to abide by the terms of the original treaty. It is equally obvious that all of our Latin-American good-will missions are foredoomed to failure just so long as any one of these nations can justly claim that, because we are a powerful nation, we ignore treaties originally made in good faith.

As we contemplate the implications of our present attitude toward Panama in this instance our faces should be very red when our President makes solemn protestation in the name of the United States against the defiance and ignoring of treaty obligations and the organized banditry of central Europe. These solemn protestations are primarily against the ignoring of treaties and the imposition of the will of a powerful nation upon nations powerless to defend themselves. Are we ourselves clean?

In this day when international morality is at such low ebb, and when world suspicions and resentments are daily increasing, how easy it would be to make the amende honorable, dig into our cache at Fort Knox, and by one stroke reinstate ourselves in that distinguished but rapidly vanishing group of nations which still retain the inclination and ability to distinguish between abstract right and wrong, and between equity and inequity. WM. G. B. THOMPSON.
Petersburg, Va., March 17.

Rabbits Out Of The Hat

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Today the people of the entire Nation are facing an issue. We are at the crossroads. It is best to face any issue squarely and determine it with intelligence. The question of old-age annuity in the Townsend plan is very forcibly before us all today and vitally concerns every man, woman and child in America.

There are 20,000 people in the United States drawing salaries of from $5,000 to $250,000 annually. All salaries above $50 per month should be subject to the Townsend 2 per cent tax. This tax must be planned to reach everyone, and take from those in the upper strata of wealth who have not been paying their just share of taxation.

This program, put over in a business-like way, will bring to us the greatest prosperity we ever knew. Looking at it from a standpoint of insurance annuity, it seems to place every man and woman on the same basis. This program is not class legislation. The bill reads, "Every citizen at age 60."

This is what the Townsend program will do for the country: Take up the slack in employment, furnish an opportunity for the youth, do away with the inhuman poorhouse system, and bring prosperity in the place of crime, reduce our present taxes by 70 per cent, and keep America safe for our children, rebuild our homes which become the security of our Nation.

C. W. HARRINGTON.

Reactions To "A Community Loss"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial in Sunday's Post entitled "A Community Loss" is misleading and unfair.

In the first place, you place the blame on Howard University for the refusal of Superintendent Ballou to grant them the use of Central High School auditorium for the Marian Anderson concert. You say that Howard appealed for a particular occasion and did not raise any question of continuing policy. That is true—but the board did not grant the application in the spirit in which it was made. The board in reply did raise a question of continuing policy and asked Howard to commit itself never again to ask for the use of a white school in accepting Central High School for this occasion.

That is hardly a judicious way to settle vital problems of policy. In presenting its case to the board, Howard contended that the Marian Anderson concert was not a private profit performance. True Marian Anderson is to receive a large fee, but Howard is not trying to make money on the event. Many, many times artists who received fees have played and sung in school buildings. It is hard to see why the size of the fee should alter the principle involved.

In the second place, Howard contended that school buildings after school hours become community property—and, as such, cannot be regarded as limited to white or Negro use. It is hard to see how any fair-minded person can think otherwise.

The board asked Howard University to agree that neither of these arguments was valid before accepting the use of Central High School auditorium. This Howard could not reasonably do.

The responsibility, therefore, for the inability of Washington citizens to hear Marian Anderson sing rests squarely on the board.

Washington, March 22.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial columns last Sunday you supported the Board of Education in its stand on the request for the use of Central High School Auditorium for the Marian Anderson concert.

Can it be that the editor agrees with the board's attitude that "this request or similar requests will not again be pressed upon the board for its approval . . ."; or that the community use of buildings after school hours is an infringement upon the principle of the dual school system; or that by the acceptance of this one grant all groups of citizens whether Negro or white should forfeit the right to make requests of the board for the use of any white auditorium where a Negro may be present?

Obviously, the editor could not have understood what it would mean if Howard University accepted the qualified offer of the school board. It would mean that the Negro people of the District would be set back several decades in their fight against discrimination. It would mean that rights guaranteed by the Constitution could be withdrawn by a body posing as a board of education. It would mean that all people seeking to defend the democratic rights of American citizens would sacrifice gains taking years in the making in order to hear Marian Anderson sing once.

The Howard University School of Music should be congratulated for its courageous stand in qualifying its acceptance of the board's offer, so that the principles of democracy will not be jeopardized.

The Post Impressionist

The Sergeant

THE FIRST DAYS of spring, which bring out the forsythia, also bring out the men who are scattered over the city in hospitals and veterans' homes, the old "regulars," sergeants and corporals, and a few who were "unjustly busted," and so were privates at the end of their enlistments. These men, superannuated, disabled, still have the marks of the "Regular." St. Paul says there is one glory of the sun and another of the moon. Maybe he met some old Legionnaires down in Corinth, to which city he addresses these remarks, which might as truly be applied to the Army. The "Regular" differs from the Volunteer or the malitiaman as the sun from the moon; not that the sun is more excellent than the moon; merely that they are not the same.

If you know your Washington, you will be able to locate a white wistaria (the only one I know) which smells like Paradise and trails over an arbor furnished with a bench, ideal for a smoke and talk. The sergeant can be found there any sunny day. I have known him for years. He is like the old soldiers in the parks and cafes of every capital; not very different from the soldiers of Caesar or Hannibal or Napoleon who spun their yarns in the city gates for anyone who had time to listen. The non-com has not changed at all since armies began, and, except for the place names, talking to my friend the sergeant, might be like talking with a centurion.

The sergeant has never discovered that it is immoral to fight. When wars were slow he could always manage to find a good private fight, preferably with his hereditary enemy, a gob on shore leave.

The sergeant is a good talker, and good conversation is a thing not to be sneezed at even in Washington. He is a connoisseur of life, and appreciates good food and drink, laughter and music, and he admits that he still admires a pretty face. The smoke of his cigarette, rolled from his own makin's, drifts along with the perfume of the wistaria, as he tells about the time he was thinking of getting married.

"You had to get your commanding officer's permission to do a thing like that," he says. "The old colonel didn't like me any too well. I was in plenty of scrapes about that time, and it took me a month to get up nerve to ask him. He was an officer of the old school, with a vocabulary to blister even my tough hide. Finally I tackled him. He glared at me, and starting with a few of his pet words, he finished up with, 'Yes, . . . and I hope the girl is able to make a man of you—which is more than I can do.'"

The sergeant played in the band most of his enlistments, though he admits he does not know how that happened. The band always got the best details, and were invited to all the enlisted men's parties and weddings. He recalls one wedding, very reprehensible, where the bandsmen, one by one, each invited the bride to accompany him to the punch bowl. If the idea was intended to embarrass the bride, it was a failure. She obligingly permitted herself to be led to the bowl, and, as far as the band could remember when they tried to figure it out later, she took her glass, but when it was over the band was decidedly the worse for wear, but the bride was normal. "It was probably the palms," the sergeant admitted. The bride had evidently emptied her glass into the decorations, which were a hardy variety, and came through better than the band.

The old Regular knew his officers like a book, and Capt. This and Maj. That are celebrated in his talk with all their qualities, eccentric or admirable. Old Maj. Bing was a tartar for discipline, and his inspections were a terror. The sergeant recalls one. The band, as usual in the thick of trouble, had been on a social occasion the night before, and were still slightly dazed when they tumbled out for inspection. When they started to play, several instruments (for reasons best known to the musicians) refused to make a sound, a very unfortunate start which sent the major into a rage.

In the company was one soldier who had won most of the medals in the service. On inspection days he carried around some hundreds of dollars in gold decorations and was supposed to be a great credit to the company. On this day he appeared minus his medals. The men all knew what had happened; when he was out of luck he pawned the lot, but usually got them back for inspection. Today he shared in the prevailing gloom.

"Where are your medals" demanded the major.

"I haven't got them," he said which too obvious reply did not help.

The major got it out of him what he had done with the decorations, the pride of the company; and by the time the major finished, the unhappy man realized that he was a disgrace to the service and his country.

"This was the same officer," concluded the sergeant, standing up to go as mess call was sounded, "who was such a one for discipline that even nature couldn't get the best of him. There was a tree on the parade ground that used to shed its leaves a few at a time, looking very scraggly, and he would detail men to pick off the leaves, once they began to fall. He wanted the tree uniform; he could never stand anything untidy."

Fair Enough

Faceless Robots

A FEW YEARS after the last World War there appeared at the very musty old Garrick Theater, well below the theatrical deadline, a Theater Guild production of a play by Karel Capek, of Prague, called "R. U. R.," or "Rossom's Universal Robots." It stormed the imagination of those who saw it and gave us the word "robot," meaning a more or less faceless industrial slave.

In Capek's play the robots were flesh and blood creatures without souls or the power to reproduce themselves, being manufactured by science through some extension of the Lindbergh chicken heart-in-a-test-tube process, but with a sort of intelligence. They were great workers, and everything looked easy for the human race until science got too smart, endowing the latest model with ambition—a great mistake, as it made the great hordes of the powerful brutes revolt.

War Over Pathway Between Grass Blades

HAD CAPEK lived but a little longer he would have seen his own people reduced to the condition of the robots in "R. U. R." and the terrible fulfillment of another prophetic horror of his which was produced some time later. In this country this play was called "The World We Live In," and it is my impression that it was a flop in two attempts, being revived by William A. Brady, after a first failure, only to stumble badly, if it did not actually fail, again. It depicted the human race in the garments and traits of butterflies, beetles and ants, and in a terrifying climax showed the insect world going to war again to the clang of steel and the blare of gun foundries in a dispute about the pathway between two blades of grass.

Capek continued to live in Prague to the end of his days, and when I interviewed him there one evening about three years ago nobody could have believed that any tyrant in this day would have the stupid effrontery, to say nothing of the fiendish cruelty, to attempt the enslavement which Hitler now has decreed for Capek's people.

Not Even Citizens Of Own Country

"R. U. R." was absurdly improbable, it was impossible until the brown ants of the Nazi army, the faceless men in dehumanized form, strutting in the step that human beings never were meant to walk, descended on the helpless Czech republic, seized everything and combined the powers of both of Capek's plays into one ghastly reality. The people, by Hitler's decree, are now not even full citizens of their own country, but subjects, serfs or, much more aptly, robots condemned to work for the Germans under German masters and without even the small rights and privileges that Nazi citizens enjoy in Germany. It flatters the condition of Capek's people to say that they were captured.

Human beings are captured, but objects are stolen, and the Nazis concede the Czechs no human rights or qualities. They are creatures, not much better in the Nazi scale than cattle or the dogs which sometimes help to pull little carts in the streets, and they may not demand but may only request or implore redress of individual acts of injustice. Czech women are protected from rape not by any consideration for them but by the Nazi laws against defilement of the Nazi breed, which laws and many of the Fuehrer's utterances have plainly held that the Czechs and, indeed, even Hitler's Italian comrades in the axis are beasts.

Wildest Dream Never Imagined Conflict

Capek scoffed at the thought of an invasion of Czechoslovakia by the faceless men from over the mountains, and, although he recognized that the country formed a pathway between two blades of grass, so to speak, he thought this war would never come. He counted on France and Balkan politics to preserve his country, and it was plain that in his mind none of the fiction of his two great plays applied to the nation of which he was a citizen.

But the play is not over. There were two armies of ants in the war over the pathway between the blades of grass, and the robots, be it remembered, rebelled and took horrible revenge.

It should be worth some producer's trouble to present the Capek plays again.

Britain's Base At Capetown

Johannesburg, South Africa.

BRITAIN'S world-wide chain of naval defenses is receiving a vital but little-advertised addition in the South Atlantic, through the commencement of the third biggest dry dock in existence.

Large enough to take the Queen Mary or the Queen Elizabeth and have room to spare, it will not only accommodate the new battleships at present under construction but will also serve the needs of monster warships as yet undesigned for a generation or two ahead.

Signapore Dry Dock has been publicized the world over, but that at Capetown, estimated at 1,300 feet in length, puts the Eastern installation in the shade. At an eventual cost of $50,000,000 spread over several years, the Union of South Africa is not only providing herself with the largest artificial harbor below the Equator but increasing her own security by catering for the British fleet of the future.

SIMONSTOWN, situate 25 miles out of Capetown, has been the headquarters of the Africa squadron of the British navy for about 130 years. It is no longer regarded as adequate to the needs of the international situation.

Under an agreement made after the Great War between the then prime minister of South Africa, General Jan Christian Smuts, and the then first lord of the admiralty in London, Winston Churchill, Simonstown was left in the control of Whitehall, notwithstanding the status of equality which the rest of South Africa enjoys with the mother country. Legally the ownership of the $10,000,000 naval dockyard, built there at the beginning of the present century is vested in the Union, but the actual administration has wisely been left in the hands of the British admiralty.

WITHOUT ANY navy of her own South Africa places her protection from attack in the hands of the Africa squadron, which today is more important than it has ever been, owing to the potential threat to Britain's route to the East, through the Mediterranean. If there should be trouble in that sea, close on a billion dollars' worth of extra commerce annually would take the course via the Cape of Good Hope.

Steadily, but without much ado, England has been adding to her ships at Simonstown; there are about half a dozen of them, the largest being the H. M. S. Amphion of 10,000 tons, a cruiser whose striking power is out of proportion to her size.

COMPARED with the huge fleets in other oceans this may not seem a large number, especially as the patrol "beat" of the Africa squadron extends from somewhere near Liberia on the west coast to somewhere near Abyssinia on the Indian Ocean.

Mere names, however, do not tell the whole tale. For the first time on record British submarines have been visiting these waters, and the seaplane equipment has been much enlarged. Incidentally, Italy had just sent two of her own underwater craft on a tour 'round Africa, calling at the ports of the Union.

When the September world crisis occurred, a "dress rehearsal" was carried out at Simonstown, many hundreds of Reservists living inland being recalled, and various German and other potentially hostile ships being shadowed almost all the way to South America, where they were trying to take refuge.

Most significant of all is the decision of the South African Defense Department to station H. M. S. Erebas as a floating battery outside Table Bay Docks, Capetown.

OSWALD PIROW, the South African minister of defense, arranged a year ago to have modern 15-inch coast-defense guns mounted on Robben Island, which commands the entrance to Table Bay.

Now it has been found desirable to anticipate this by borrowing H. M. S. Erebus, which carried artillery of the size mentioned, and was used during the Great War to bombard the coast of Flanders. Described officially as a monitor, she has lain for years at Portsmouth but is still in good condition. Now she is about to leave for Capetown, where she will help to protect the gateway of South Africa.

Heavy guns are also being installed on the slopes of Table Mountain, the flat-topped 3,500-foot-high landmark that greets new arrivals to the Union. Durban, South Africa, the other principal port on the Indian Ocean, as well as smaller harbors, are being similarly guarded, the garrisons of gun crews in each case being furnished by the Boer and English inhabitants of the Dominion.

ALTHOUGH Capetown's present docks cover 200 acres, this figure will be raised to about 600 acres when the extension scheme is finished. Enormous oil reservoirs are also being built, the present capacity of about 140,000 tons being several times multiplied. These are to be placed in specially protected inland locations from which pipelines will feed the ships.

Provided everything goes well, the new Table Bay Docks, which incidentally involve the addition of a square mile of land to the busines district of Capetown, will serve the needs of peaceful commerce.

Liners as big as the Empress of Britain (42,000 tons) are visiting South Africa on cruises and arrangements have been made for the Bremen (52,000 tons) to call, but the largest regular visitors are of 27,000 tons today. Until demands warrant it, the Capetown Dry Dock and the existing 1,200 feet drydock at Durban are subdivided as required, and will take two boats at a time. Full secrets of the plan are, however, not being disclosed. The South African government expects to make a profit on the whole scheme through the sale of reclaimed land.

Sentimental considerations have not prevented them from dividing up the contract between the Dutch, Danish, British, American and South African firms.

Boys Club Drive For Funds Renewed

Members of the initial gifts committee yesterday voted to renew their campaign to make up the $18,038.49 needed to complete the Metropolitan Police Boys Club goal of $75,000.

The committee, meeting at the Ambassador Hotel, were address by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, drive chairman, and James E. Colliflower, president of the club. Gen. Cox revealed thatall volunteer solicitors have agreed to push the campaign until the total funds necessary for operation of the club units and summer camp are obtained.

Directors and workers will meet at a campaign luncheon Tuesday in the Cosmos Club.

President Will Leave Wednesday on Vacation

President Roosevelt told his press conference yesterday that he would depart next Wednesday night for a spring vacation in Warm Springs, and return to the Capital on April 10 or 11.

He will dedicate a new medical and education center in Warm Springs and will speak at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute and the Tuskegee Institute. The President held his press conference yesterday despite a severe head cold.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Struggle Short Of War

THE GREAT QUESTION at the root of the European crisis is whether any government can or will go beyond measures that are "short of war." Thus far no government, not Hitler's or Mussolini's or Stalin's or Chamberlain's or Daladier's, not the government of any smaller European nation, has ventured to cross the Rubicon which separates measures short of war from war itself.

Up to this time the controlling factor in the policy of all nations has been the determination not to become engaged in a general war. This determination has fixed the direction and the limits of the campaign of aggression; it has set the limits and the character of the resistance. Thus far Hitler and Mussolini have demanded and have taken only what they could obtain without war. Thus far the others have protested or yielded, depending on whether the next move would carry them from measures short of war to war itself.

The underlying fear of war has been the controlling factor in all the nations; it is the one thing which has preserved the peace. No government knows what would happen if it tried to take its people into a general war; no government has believed that its people would fight for any length of time outside their own frontiers; every government, the dictatorships perhaps most of all, has realized that in a general war it is the soldiers and not the politicians who will take command, it is the masses with guns in their hands, rather than the party bosses and the propagandists and the police, who will rule the nation.

Aggression Only Against The Weak

THESE ARE the ultimate considerations which have thus far confined the aggression to aggression against the weak. Though the great prizes of aggression can be had only by challenging the great powers, though the little nations are in themselves of little permanent or substantial value to the conquerors, thus far the aggressors have been careful to march down those roads only where they could be certain of meeting no opposition.

The same fundamental consideration has paralyzed the democracies in fulfilling their treaties and upholding the principles which they profess. They may refuse "to recognize" the conquest of the small nations, but when it comes to defending them, the democracies are faced with the question of waging war beyond their frontiers for the independence and liberties of distant peoples.

The whole experience of the League and of all the diplomatic coalitions arranged in the successive crises since Japan seized Manchuria in 1931 shows that modern nations will not, and probably cannot, fight against nations of equal size unless they are directly attacked on their own frontiers. Though the threat of war is still an instrument of diplomacy, war itself has become such a stupendous calamity that all nations will avoid it except possibly when they are so directly attacked that they have no choice.

Democracies' Ability To Resist Reinforced

UNDER THESE convictions Europe is involved in a desperate struggle which remains indecisive because no State has actually been willing to attack if the attack meant war or to resist if resistance meant war. In this struggle, which has been waged actively for nearly three years, the balance of power has shifted somewhat from one side to the other.

But it has never shifted decisively to one side or the oher. The totalitarian states have won political victories and acquired spectacular prestige. But they are nearer than they ever were to the exhaustion of their reserves.

The democracies have been repeatedly defeated and humiliated, but their capacity to resist, provided they are directly attacked, has been substantially reinforced.

Hitler Needs Time To Incorporate Booty

THE IMMEDIATE question, which might conceivably be resolved by the speech which Mussolini is to deliver on Sunday, is whether the dictators have reached the point when they think they must, when they think they can, challenge the democracies directly on some issue which is directly and manifestly vital to them. It may be that this question will not be answered until later in the year, until Hitler has had time to incorporate in his military machine the booty he has just captured by occupying Prague and the booty he is presumably seeking out of Rumania. It may be that even then he will not risk the frontal challenge to Great Britain and France.

But until that challenge is delivered the European situation will remain a struggle of diplomatic attrition, like the trench warfare of 1915 to 1916. The tension will remain acute. But the decision which ends it will still have been avoided and postponed. There will be neither peace nor war, but this desperate struggle which is just short of war.

What To Do With Czech World Fair Building

There is a Czecho-Slovakian government building at the New York World's Fair, and there being no more Czechoslovakian government, there is a question what to do with it. Elmer Twitchell, ever in the foreground in such emergencies, proposes that it be rechristened The Hall of the Double-Crossed, and include the following attractions and exhibits:

Waxworks

1—The Fellow Who Trusted Everything to His Friends. (In very bad condition; please do not handle.)

2—The Blue Man. (A lecturer will tell what made him blue. But is it necessary?)

3—The Man Who Said, "They can't do that to me."

4—Diz-Daz, the Mad Map Maker. (If you were in the map business today you'd be mad.)

5—Little Red Riding Hood's Grandma. (The lecturer will try to show that she was swallowed by a former corporal, not a wolf. Only 10 cents extra.)

6—The Man Who Said, "I should worry; I'm in the hands of my friends." (Very brittle. Keep ten feet away.)

7—The Mayor Who Kept No Fire Apparatus Because His Uncle Had a Hose.

8—The Umbrella Man, two-thirds umbrella and one-third pal. (Don't fail to stay for the illustrated talk, "Through Munich With Pen and Trap Door.")

9—The Rights of Small Nations. (Invisible. Step up closer and be convinced.)

10—Gideon the Gullible. (Made to scale. You remember Gideon; he originated the crack, "Well, it was a tough war, but thank goodness we'll never hear anything more of the goose step.")

12—Dobble-Dobble, the Dog-house Designer. (The busiest man in the world's most thriving industry. Do not disturb. He's behind on orders.)

This Way, Folks!

1—The Underdog Room. (Pretty crowded but you can still get in for a dime, 10 cents, a tenth of a dollar. Don't feed the animals; they are not longer usesd to it.)

2—Hall of Aquatics. (John Bull comes to the rescue of a drowning friend with an iron life belt three times daily. See this attraction before we run out of friends.)

3—The Hall of Phrasemakers. Lifelife models of the originators of those famous phrases, "He can't do that to me," "It's against the law," "England wouldn't stand for a thing like that," "They can't get away with this," and "Whatever happens, you can count on me."

Over Here, Ladies And Gentlemen!

1—The Curio Mezzanine. See the Treaty of Versailles! Hear the League of Nations speeches! Behold the reasons for the last world war! (They dazzle you, they astound you, they amaze you with their incredibility!)

2—Hall of War Songs and Slogans. (Children not admitted. They still have a right to their illusions.)

3—The Talking Wood Chopper of Doorn. (A laugh in every word. Drop a nickel in the slot and hear him say, "After what I've seen of Hitler, I think I must have been Poor Little Buttercup.")

Boy, get away from that buzz saw. It may be another mad paper hanger in disguise!

Wagner Act Stalemate

By Mark Sullivan

Revision Delayed

IN THE CURRENT talk about recovery—the need for it, the impediments that stand in the way of it—the momentary emphasis is put upon taxation. Yet a fair judgment would say that another serious obstruction is the Wagner national labor relations act.

Many think the Wagner act, as carried out by the present National Labor Relations Board, is a fatal and permanent impediment to recovery. High officials of one of the great labor organizations, the A. F. of L., men of cool judgment, think this. They regard it as imperative, for the sake of America's future, that the Wagner act be modified. But the other great labor organization, C. I. O., wants to prevent any change in the Wagner act.

That the act would be modified in the present session of Congress has been taken for granted. Steps toward modifying it were begun. Several weeks ago the Senate Committee on Labor announced that hearings on the Wagner act would begin March 10.

Wagner Act Hearing Postponed For Reason

BUT SOMETHING intervened. Some time preceding March 10, President Roosevelt called upon the two great labor organizations, A. F. of L. and C. I. O., to get together, to unite. Representatives of the two organizations met. At their first sitting, President Roosevelt with them, and put strong pressure on them to unite. The sittings were continued, and still continue.

Presently the chairman of the Senate Committee on Labor, Senator Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, announced that the hearings of his committee, to discuss changes in the Wagner act, would be postponed. He put the postponement on the ground that discussion by a Senate committee of proposed changes in the Wagner act might interfere with Mr. Roosevelt's efforts to bring A. F. of L. and C. I. O. together. Mr. Thomas said:

"The negotiations between C. I. O. and A. F. L. would undoubtedly be carried on at the same time as our hearings. This, I am sure will be deemed unfortunate by all . . . I am sure that I bespeak the sentiments of the entire Labor Committee, and, I trust, of the Senate, when I say that it is the earnest wish of all that the movement initiated by our President may prove successful."

Changes Seen Unlikely Until C.I.O.-A.F.L. Peace

SUBSEQUENTLY, there was a second postponement of hearings by the Senate committee looking to changes in the Wagner act. Still later, there was a third postponement. Meanwhile the meetings between C. I. O. and A. F. L., looking to union, have gone on. Apparently it is the view of the Senate Committee on Labor, or a majority of it, that no hearings looking to change in the Wagner act should be held until after conclusion of negotiations between C. I. O. and A. F. L. to unite.

But the negotiations between C. I. O. and A. F. L. may continue a considerable time—there is no limit to them. On the other hand, there is a limit to the present session of Congress. If the negotiations between the two labor organizations go on long enough, and if hearings by the Senate committee continue to be postponed, the present session of Congress could come to and end, with nothing done about the Wagner act.

This could happen readily. It often happens that about the first or middle of June, a Congress makes a sudden rush to go home. Such an impulse, this year, would not be resisted by the Administration—the common view says the Administration would prefer to see this session of Congress end early.

The net of the situation is that unless the Senate Labor Committee hearings begin soon, there will be no change in the Wagner act. For hearings take time, debate in each House of Congress takes more time, conference takes yet more time. Throughout, there is always possibility of delays.

A. F. L. Leaders Fear Squeeze-Play

SUCH AN OUTCOME—the ending of this session of Congress with no change in the Wagner act—would be pleasing to C. I. O. Presumably it would be pleasing also to the Roosevelt Administration. It would be pleasing to everybody who wishes that no change be made in the Wagner act.

It would not be pleasing to A. F. of L. The executive council of A. F. of L. appears to see the posibility here suggested. A. F. of L. wants the hearings of the Senate Committee on Labor to begin at once. The executive council of A. F. of L. this week gave out a statement saying:

"We hold that further delay of hearings in this case will lead to serious misunderstandings. On the other hand it is our belief that an immediate hearing will tend largely to clarify the present situation and aid, rather than injure, current negotiations for an adjustment of existing differences. Further delay cannot be attributed to impartial desire for the adjustment of a serious situation, for it could only contribute to the advantage of one party to the controversy."

Apparently it is dawning upon the A. F. of L. leaders that they may be caught in a squeeze play.

Mussolini And The Axis

OLD HABITS are hard to break. Every time that Nazi Germany has gone on a rampage, strenuous efforts nave been made by the British and French governments to win Mussolini to their side. They have sometimes succeeded in doing so, but never for long. Yet despite repeated disappointments they have never given up trying.

Logically considered, there was always much to recommend the formation of an Anglo-French-Italian bloc to keep Hitler in check. But the logic has never appealed as much to the Duce as it has to the British and French governments.

For a number of reasons Italy stands much to lose by the establishment of German hegemony in central and eastern Europe. The succersion of victories won by Hitler have already resulted in the extension of Germany's frontiers to the Brenner and to within striking district of the Adriatic which, at one time, Mussolini hoped to make an Italian lake. The stronger the Third Reich becomes the greater the potential threat to Italy's security.

WHY THEN, does Mussolini hesitate to join forces with Great Britain and France, why does he cling so ardently to the Rome-Berlin axis which is now so heavily weighted on the Berlin side?

The answer is that the Duce has no choice in the matter. He is today, and has been since the absorption of Austria by Germany, as much a prisoner of the axis as is Hungary. The freedom of action which Italy once enjoyed vis-a-vis Germany it has almost completely lost. That is why the plans said to be entertained by Messrs. Chamberlain and Daladier to draw Mussolini out of Hitler's camp are, at bottom, so unrealistic.

Of course, the Duce has never been averse to wresting concessions out of the democratic powers nor even to paying them with minor concessions of his own. Thus in return for the Anglo-Italian treaty of April, 1938, he did, temporarily, reduce the Italian garrison in Libya, stop Italian press attacks on Great Britain and halt anti-British propaganda disseminated in Arabic over the Bari radio station. But at no time after anschluss has he shown the slightest disposition to break with Berlin. He can't.

Why Il Duce Is Impaled On Axis

THERE ARE two principal reasons why he can't. The first goes back to Ethiopia, the second to anschluss.

The Ethiopian campaign inevitably involved, on Italy's part, a sacrifice of her interests in central Europe. With the Fascist kingdom occupied in East Africa and the Stresa front smashed by the sanctions program, Germany saw her opportunity and seized it. On March 7, 1936, Hitler entered the Rhineland. Two years later, with Italy weakened by the Ethiopian war and busy in Spain, Austria was annexed.

Logically, that event should have smashed the Berlin-Rome axis. Actually, it can be said that the axis only came into being as a real force as a result of that development. For with Austria gone, the boundaries of an enlarged Germany were brought to the Brenner, which meant that Italy henceforth had to live under the guns of the Third Reich.

HAD ITALY been a "satisfied" state, content with her frontiers and anxious to live at peace, anchluss would have flung her into the arms of Great Britain and France. But as it happened Fascist Italy, like Nazi Germany, wants to expand and is determined to do so, at whatever cost.

After the Austro-German anschluss, Italian expansion in central Europe and the Balkans became out of the question. But expansion in the Mediterranean and in Africa was possible. However, it could only be accomplished through the weakening of the powers dominant in those areas, namely, Great Britain and France, and through the co-operation of Germany.

Dependence Increased By Hitler's Victories

BECAUSE OF THIS, Italy could not and did not oppose the Munich settlement. She could not and did not oppose the destruction of what was left of Czecho-Slovakia. And she has hailed every other successful attack made by the Third Reich on the status quo.

This does not mean that the Italian people have liked what has been going on or even that Mussolini has had any enthusiasm for the unimpeded progress of his ally. In his heart of hearts the Duce probably has, one can surmise, bitterly resented the fact that he has been forced to play second fiddle to the Fuehrer. Yet the stronger Hitler becomes the less capable is Mussolini of breaking with him, the less likely, also, that he can achieve his imperial ambitions without Germany's aid.

THE SITUATION would conceivably be quite different if the democratic powers proved themselves ready and willing to stop Hitler. It is doubtful if now or at any previous time Mussolini was in any sense prepared to join in a war on Germany's side. But the democracies have shown themselves to be weak and pusillanimous for so long that Mussolini has had reason to be contemptuous of them and hopeful that he might, with Germany's aid, get what he is after in the Mediterranean and Africa.

Similarly, it is obviously to Hitler's interest to have Mussolini prodding Great Britain and France to make concessions to Italy. Fear of what Italy might do has been a factor in paralyzing the London and Paris governments. The axis powers have thus been able to pool their nuisance value, although so far Germany has capitalized it far more successfully than has Italy.

THERE IS ONE further point which requires particular emphasis today. The democratic powers are today very weak in the east, but they are strong in the west. If Hitler is to move west, as he ultimately is bound to do, any weakening of Anglo-French power as a result of a Mediterranean Munich, or even as a result of a deal for the purpose of buying off Mussolini, will redound to the advantage of both axis powers. Thus Hitler can view with equanimity and even secretly support any flirtations his partner may indulge in with Chamberlain and Daladier. And if Mussolini should be tempted to go too far in making peace with the democracies, a pointed reference to the Brenner and to Trieste is likely to bring him in line.

The events of the past two years have made it abundantly plain that the axis cannot be broken by trying to buy off Mussolini or Hitler, or both. Such a policy only persuades both dictators of the tremendous usefulness of their partnership. But whether that lesson has been learned in London or Paris is by no means clear.

City, Rural House Blocs Resort To Log-Rolling on Farm Bill

Farm

ceded yesterday in striking several small items from the bill on points of order, are planning a similar drive against the $250,000,000 parity proviso, but leaders expressed confidence the item will be retained. The contested benefits gained committee approval by only one vote, and a Democratic motion to strike it in the House may be offered by Representative Woodrum, of Virginia. But if "big city" and farm bloc members agree on a trade, approval appears assured.

Just before adjournment, Representatives Taber, of New York, and Ditter, of Pennsylvania, Republican appropriations committeemen, opened a volley of points of order at individual appropriations that stopped only with a decision by leaders to let the bill "go over."

Ditter Wins Point

First, a $160,460 item for control of the "Mexican fruit fly," was stricken on motion of Ditter, who complained it wasn't authorized. Next $13,485 for "citrus canker" elimination was removed on a point of order by Taber.

Ditter had just raised a point against $75,000 for "sweet potato weevil" control, when Representative Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, presiding, said "obviously" the bill could not be completed last night. Ditter demanded a ruling on his point, and Lanham agreed to rule today.

Later Ditter told reporters similar points of order will be raised today against all "unauthorized" appropriations in the bill, climaxing in an effort to strike out the parity price provision on similar grounds. If the latter effort succeeds, Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, handling the bill, is expected to reoffer the $250,000,000 item in revised form.

Suggests "Trade"

It was Representative Sabbath (Democrat), of Chicago, who first chided farm members for not supporting such urban items as the $150,000,000 relief appropriation, and urged their aid in return for farm support.

"I know it would be helpful to the farmers of the country if they would co-operate with us from the large cities and see to it that the laboring men of the Nation obtain a living wage," Sabbath told the House.

"But whenever we appeal to you gentlemen from the rural sections to help the unfortunate needy people in the cities, you turn against us, and refuse to assist us to obtain the help."

Sabbath declared "you always will have my vote when it will help the farmers" and appealed to farm members "to stand by us when the time comes."

Representative Bradley (Democrat), of Philadelphia, advised city members to make certain they would be supported by farm members on the $150,000,000 relief outlay before they voted on the farm parity grant. And Representative McGrannery (Democrat), of Philadelphia reminded the House that the rural group was largely responsible for curtailment of the original WPA appropriation.

Farm Vote Up First

Asked if farm members have offered any "assurances" they will back the full $150,000,000 relief estimate. Representative Cooley (Democrat), of North Carolina, advocate of $500,000,000 for parity payments, said:

"What assurances can we give them? All I can say is that if they don't support parity payments, it may make it impossible for us to help them on urban relief."

City members, proposing to "trade" farm support for relief support, are at a disadvantage, as the farm vote comes first. The appropriations deficiencies sub-committee is not expected to meet until Tuesday on the President's request for $150,000,000 for relief. Economy-minded members are seeking to cut this to $100,000,000.

One circumstance auguring House approval of the $250,000 parity provision was the reluctance of most members to face a roll-call vote on the issue. If the provision is approved by the House sitting as a committee, then no roll call is necessary under the rules. But if the House in committee strikes the parity provision from the bill, then a roll call would be demanded, placing every member on record, for or against.

"Trade" Denounced

Mary Haworth's Mail

Taken in Charge by Jealous Suitor, Girl Is Unable to Enlarge Circle of Friends; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 18 years of age and I recently moved here from another city. I have since met several young men whose company I have really enjoyed. But there is one boy whom I have seen a lot, who seems to think I should go with him regularly. This I don't intend to do. He is a very peculiar person, and anything I suggest is apt to make him very angry. I cannot reason with him and he is inclined to be jealous if I have much to say or do with anyone else. (He is 19, by the way.)

When we first met, he told me that it was always his plan to beat the other fellows to the new girls in the neighborhood, just to prove that he could win them. This gave him away in the beginning. Well, after several weeks, he has now almost "barred" me from any other boys, giving them the impression that I am "his girl," so that they don't dare come near. I enjoy his company to a certain extent, and therefore do not wish to be rude. But I am getting fed up with the whole works. What am I to do? Thanks a million for any advice, X. Y. Z.

DEAR X. Y. Z.: Persons are known by the company they keep, and I cannot believe that any boy such as you describe would enjoy a very savory reputation amongst those who are forced to witness his show-off performances with regard to girls. I imagine that you have been doing yourself a distinct disservice, socially, in tolerating his domineering attentions this long. I daresay if other boys have shown a tendency to drop out of the race for your favor, it is because they figure that favor doesn't represent much of a prize, if it can be so easily won and held by him. My advice to you is to ease him out of the picture, before he messes up your social prospects completely. How to do it? By cutting down your engagements with him to one a week, at most, and preferably less —say one every ten days.

Just tell him frankly and flatly that the way he's running this friendship it's costing you too much; far more than you are willing to pay. Tell him you haven't the slightest intention of being—or becoming known as—"his girl," if it means you are going to have to live and move and have your being in the neighborhood equivalent of a Nazi concentration camp. Tell him you want—and intend to have—friends, lots of friends of both sexes, normal good times, an occasional restful and refreshing change in beaus from time to time, and that if this declaration of policy means you two are through, all right, then you're through.

Having let him cut you out from the crowd and put his brand on you, more or less, you are going to have to gamble a bit in getting off the reservation. You are going to have to run the risk of being without a beau until such time as the stag line gets wind of your unsurrounded state and gathers round to fill the breach. As a matter of fact, I don't think you have been putting up with this down-cheeked dictator all these weeks out of gentle reluctance to be rude; or because he has had you so oppresively hemmed in. I think, simply, that you have been afraid to face the prospect of being without a beau, even for a short period. I think you grabbed at a gift horse and clung to it desperately, and that now you're pretty sick of the bargain.

But since his attentions are admittedly motivated by considerations more egotistic than romantic, I am confident that the more diligently you try to get rid of him, the more genuinely interested he will become. If you turn on him with tactics as high handed as those he has directed at you, I think you may make him your crestfallen slave, thankful for any crumbs of attention you may henceforth see fit to toss his way.

You have everything to gain and nothing to lose in kicking over the traces of this relationship, upsetting the apple cart, and heading out into broader and more fruitful pastures of social relationships. On the other hand, if you continue to let this boy lead you around by the nose, telling you when to speak and whom to speak to and what to say, you have everything to lose and nothing to gain—since he himself would drop you eventually, after everyone else had given you up as a nincompoop.

M. H.

Care Is Needed To Keep Meat

If your meat spoils, don't blame your butcher! The fault may be yours if you have committed the meat-crimes of incorrect storing or poor refrigeration. If you are keeping uncooked meat more than a day be sure that your refrigerator is below 50 degrees F. Remove the wrapper from fresh meat as soon as you get it home, and put the meat on a clean platter or pan. If you want to cover it, use a piece of clean oiled or waxed paper laid lightly over the top.

Cooked meat should be covered with oiled paper so that it keeps its juiciness, and put in the coldest part of your refrigerator. Plan to use the meat as soon as you can.

Two Showgirls Beat Stage Depression by Running 'Hot Spot'

AS YOU know, if you follow these snide snips, most of my daily life is spent among "career women"—or anyway, girls who work for a living. So, my poor spouse would sneer, are too many of my evenings. But owing to my long connection with various branches of the fashion racket, these career girls are apt to be of that stripe, or ilk, as a sizable posse of advertising sharks and merchandising wizards. That's why it's a pleasure and profit for me to meet up, as often as possible, with ladies who make an honest dollar or so in other ways.

Take, for instance, Cora and Irene Stephens, who own and operate the little nightspot on East Fifty-second street here called "The Whirling Top." Cora and Irene give the lie direct to those dopes who say that showgirls are stupid and fluttery beauties who have only eyes for a future bankroll—either marital or, as those French so beautifully put it, "derriere l'eglise."

But let me point out that Cora and Irene are doing right well with their little boite—and are very wise to all the business tricks involved in the operation of a gay deadfall on Swing Alley here. And they were in the choruses of many a Broadway musical show. Cora was the elegant blonde showgirl—Irene was the cute little number who kicked fast and high among the prancing chorines. Together they form a team now unique in running a New York night club.

When the depression (which one?) hit show business, the girls still had to eat, so they became hat-checkers. They saved their money, studied the business, and two years ago blew open "The Whirling Top" on that famous shoe string. Fortunately, the story ends happily. The joint is doing well, and Cora and Irene are making suckers out of the showgirl-runner-downers! And you can tell pop that they are still mighty fetching lookers—if he cares.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—In the show "I Must Love Someone," about the Floradora girls of the numb nineties, the ladies wear (pardon me) bustles. And it is my painful duty to report that the dusky beauty known as Marion Pierce, according to the current rumor, got so tangled up in her contraption that it took nigh on to two hours to get her out of it. Who said current styles weren't practical and handy? Certainly not Marion . . .

No use teasing—I simply can't get you put up for the Terrace Club, the swankiest spot on our World's Fair Grounds. I can't get put up myself, though I may chisel in occasionally on my press card. This is the Fair's top Snob Spot, with a list of 500 members all in the Blue Book. But what do we care? I know a few joints that will be lots more fun. I fear the Terrace Club may get a bit stuffy, what? . . .

Fabrics Made Rain Repellent And Ageless by New Process

Chemical Life Saver Enables Garments To Resist Water, Ink, Mud and Stains; Goods Will Last Longer With New Treatment

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

"A person is only as old as he feels" is a remark that might just as readily be applied to a wardrobe. This is more than true of fabrics, for they show the ravages of old age more quickly than their wearers. What then is the solution to helping your clothes keep up with your own ebullience of youth? The answer has come recently in the form a chemical life saver of fabrics.

This fountain of youth has been introduced to leading stores throughout the country. One such shop in Washington is so enthusiastic about it's "scoop" on this new fabric-process that it has cornered the market. It's scoop is called zelan, which, in plain everyday English, means a water-repellent finish for materials.

Although a very short time has elasped since zelan was perfected by a large chemical laboratory (and thence used to finish off thousands of bolts of fabric), it has already become a word to whet the curiosity of the fashion-conscious. Here is what it actually does for you. It is a chemical which, when fabrics are dipped in it, causes them to become vital and ageless. It is a preservative for good clothes that do not want to grow older.

Dresses, hosiery, draperies and coats treated to a long, tall drink of zelan will resist mud, ink, common stains and even alcoholics—which is the first time this can be asserted. Zelan processed garments require fewer cleanings. Such processed articles as raincoats and capes can be laundered as well. This feature is one to appeal to thrifty housewives.

The most exciting phase of zelan's coming out party is its usefulness as a rain repeller. Not that water repulsion is new. There are two treatments that have been in use for over 100 years, believe it or not. Those lead soap and alum mixtures had the limitations, however, because they were as temporary and variable as a perfect spring day is right now. The recent zelan discovery of a long chain organic compound simmers down into terms which the consumer understands—reliability, the real Fountain of Youth for fabrics.

Best of all, this process permits breathing and ventilation of even such intimate garments as cotton, rayon or silk undergarments. As for the outer garments, the raincoat or cape are naturals for such a treatment. Those glamorous—yes really glamorous rainy day capes, suits, coats and combination sports outfits have just come to town. They are so agreeably styled that you'll wake up in the morning hoping for rain.

Eleanor Powell Loses Instead of Gaining; Adopts Rigid Regime

SO YOU thin girls think you are having a hard time gaining weight! What if you were in Eleanor Powell's shoes and danced off 15 or so pounds in making a picture? Here is a star whose program to keep from losing is exactly what the average thin girl can use to gain.

Eleanor Powell was forced to adopt a health regime during the making of her first picture. Completion had been delayed because she lost too much weight in the dance sequences and the close-ups didn't match.

Now she starts a picture with a little reserve weight which is built up in advance simply by drinking a few glasses of milk between meals. She never takes anything but milk or fruit in between her regular meals. The average thin girl makes the mistake of having sweets or rich beverages between meals, and they take away the appetite for a balanced weight-gaining menu.

Must Have a System

Miss Powell's health program consists in regularity—"eating regularly, sleeping regularly and exercising regularly." You thin girls must have a system for gaining.

This dancing star finds massage an invaluable aid in keeping her weight up. It helps her to relax and saves her nervous energy. If you are thin and nervous try having an occasional massage. This may do wonders for you.

It is interesting to know that she balances her tap dancing with ballet. Tap dancing stretches the leg muscles and tends to thin down the calves, while ballet rounds out the contours.

Hasn't Spoiled Her

Eleanor Powell's success has not spoiled her in the least. She is a hard-working young woman and is friendly and natural. Once she overheard two youngsters standing in line at the postoffice making bets as to whether she was or wasn't Eleanor Powell. Much to their joy, she settled all doubt by breaking into a spontaneous little dance step!

And when asked for these tips on gaining she seemed genuinely delighted to think she could help other thin girls. She knows that it is possible to gain because she has managed to do it under the most difficult circumstances. She is one in a thousand; she gets too much exercise! If you will have a little daily exercise, and follow her cues as to regularity of sleeping and eating, nothing can stop you from adding those much-needed pounds.

Business Meeting

President—Ladies, since a very serious crisis has arisen in Europe, we want to hurry through with our business meeting so we can take some action concerning it. Now let's make everything just as snappy as possible——

Mrs. Posey—Madame President, may I interrupt to ask if anyone has seen anything of a box of macaroons Mrs. Flytie brought them for the tea and they have disappeared.

President—Will everyone see if there are any macaroons near them?

Mrs. Doodle—May I ask if the refreshments committee got my cup cakes?

Mrs. Nitter—I brought oatmeal cookies——

Mrs. McAddle—I simply ADORE oatmeal cookies.

President—Please, please, just a minute——

Mrs. Squibb—What's that box on the platform?

Mrs. Flytie—Oh that's my macaroons! I forgot! I did put them there!

President—Now we will have the secretary read the minutes of the last meeting.

Mrs. Nitter—Madame President, since we are in a hurry, I move that we don't read the minutes.

Mrs. Flagg—I object. I think we should do things in the right way. The constitution says——

Mrs. Perk—Well who cares anything about the constitution

Mrs. Flagg—That's just what's the matter with this country today. You see it everywhere—

President—Is there a second to the motion to eliminate the reading of the minutes?

Mrs. Nitter—I second it.

Mrs. Flagg—Wait! You can't second your own motion!

Mrs. Yeaman—I second it.

Chorus—Aye!

President—Opposed, "No."

Mrs. Flagg—NO!

President—The ayes have it. Now before we go on to the reports——

Mrs. Squibb—Madame President, just a minute. Will you ask if anyone has lost a glove? I found a black suede one.

Mrs. McAddle—Oh, that's mine! I was looking everywhere for it.

President—Now then as I was saying, we have received a lovely letter of thanks from Mrs. Bigger for the flowers we sent her when she had the flu and I am going to ask the secretary to read it.

Mrs. Flagg—Just a minute, Madame President! I think under the constitution the corresponding secretary should read it.

Mrs. Wright—No, no, you're wrong. The recording secretary should read it.

Mrs. Joyner—Madame President! The last time we got a letter I know the corresponding secretary read it.

Mrs. Smiley—Well I know that in all the men's clubs the recording secretary reads all the letters.

Dr. Nannie B. Hopper—I rise to a point of order! This is not a men's club. Women should stand on their own feet.

President—We will let the parliamentarian rule on this. Where is the parliamentarian?

Chorus—Mrs. Piper!

Mrs. Squibb—Mrs. Piper's out helping fix the tea.

President—Well, I don't suppose it matters and since we are in a hurry——

Mrs. Flagg—Madame President, I think we should do this thing in the right manner. It's the principle of the thing.

Mrs. Battle—Yes, but who's principle? There's always two sides to a thing like this.

President—Ladies, please! We must hurry on to the European crisis.

Mrs. Giblet—May I say that, as the recording secretary, it's perfectly all right with me if the corresponding secretary reads the letter.

Mrs. Doodle—Well as the corresponding secretary, I just want to say that I'd be more than glad if Mrs. Giblet would read the letter.

Mrs. Squibb—This thing isn't important. We're acting just like a bunch of women.

Dr. Hopper—Men are every bit as bad.

President—We will see what the constitution says. Who has a constitution? . . . Hasn't anybody a constitution?

Mrs. Joyner—Madame President, since we are in a hurry to get to the European crisis, I move that we postpone the reading of the letter until the next meeting.

Mrs. Yeaman—Second the motion.

Chorus—Aye!

President—Now then if there is no further business we will take up the foreign crisis——

Mrs. Posey—Madame President, may I interrupt to say that the tea is ready and I'm afraid it'll get cold.

Mrs. Nitter—I move we adjourn for tea.

Chorus—Second the motion!

New Chocolate Drink

Of all the flavors, chocolate reigns supreme. Of all the chocolate drinks, banana chocolate milk shake wears the crown. It is easy to prepare and should be served at home whenever the children pine for something cool to drink. Keep a jar of chocolate syrup ready in the refrigerator. four tablespoons of sirup are combined with four ripe bananas, sieved. Milk is added and then comes the exercise. Shake it thoroughly, top with cream.

Idea for Basting

A flavorful basting liquid for roast ham, pork, veal or lamb is made by mixing a half cup of orange juice, a third cup of pineapple juice, a half cup of mint jelly and a fourth cup of lemon juice.

Works of Art For Your Home

BEAUTIFUL pictures in your home! Nothing makes a room so cheerful, brings it "to life" more quickly than the magnificent colors of a beautiful picture. And a fine picture not only makes good decoration but is an inspiring companion as well.

Today there is a great vogue for modern art. A masterpiece of modern French painting is Cezanne's great still life, "A Basket of Apples." The original, in oils, hangs in the Art Institute of Chicago.

The Home Institute of this newspaper now makes available to its readers a full color reproduction of this great work of art.

Our illustration cannot do justice to this lovely picture. Its rich colorings, the subtle variations of red, green and orange make it a glowing, almost a living thing. This inspired use of color, light and form made Cezanne one of the greatest of painters. He has rightly been called "The Father of Modern Art."

Our print of Cezanne's "A Basket of Apples" is 14¼ inches—a fine size for framing. It's printed on the finest coated paper and you will love its vivid colors, faithfully reproduced by a process that gives you every exquisite tone of the master's palette. Enjoy this beautiful print in your home!

To obtain this full color reproduction of Cezanne's "A Basket of Apples," send 15 cents in coins to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of picture.

Mme. Wellington Koo Seeks Title for Memoirs

Wife of Former Chinese Minister to United States Appeals to Many Without Avail In Search for Name for Her New Book

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

WANTED: A name for Mme. Wellington Koo's memoirs, which will be published in this country next autumn. The book is now well under way; is almost finished, in fact, but the author has not yet hit on a title.

Yesterday at the Chinese Embassy she told me she had thought of conducting a contest for a name. "I've already asked all my friends for ideas," she said. "Now I'm ready to solicit suggestions from anybody."

She had thought the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu-Shih, would help. "He's one of China's most eminent philosophers, you know; but even he couldn't think of a suitable title." Somerset Maugham told her she should call her book "Meteor In Void," and for a very good reason—her name is Huilan (her "little name" as she calls it—Mme. Wellington Koo being her "big one") which means 'meteor."

These bits of information bubbled up through her wave of talk that rippled over a variety of subjects—the situation in her homeland and what America could do to improve it; American and French fashions, and woman's eternal problem of keeping the years from taking their toll.

Mme. Koo's fingernails rival the celebrated ones of Paulette Goddard in length, being 2 inches long. She pencils her brows in a straight line, wears no rouge, but plenty of lipstick. Though she looks as though she might be in her early twenties, Mme. Koo is really in her late thirties, and has two sons, almost grown. Her photograph sent recently to one of them had all his schoolmates asking the name of his "new girl."

Reveals Formula For Staying Young

Mme. Koo has only one formula for preserving youth — "hard work." She has been making every minute count since arriving in this country December 15; has made countless radio addresses; and has talked to small and large groups, all in the interest of China's cause. She thinks the United States could and should help to curb the onslaught of aggressor nations. Though believing that China will never give up fighting, she declares her people are at heart "the most peace-loving in the world."

The wife of China's Ambassador to France has won acclaim as one of the best dressed women in the world. She favors native styles—sheath frocks, of rich material, made on trim lines for daytime wear and heavily ornamented for evening. Yesterday she had on a two-piece suit of blue wool, reaching to her ankles and slit to the knee on either side. A piping of cyclamen silk on the skirt matched her shoes, which had platform soles ornamented with gold nail heads. She bought these shoes in New York. ("America has the best shoes of any country," she said.) She also likes our cosmetics and automobiles, and has just bought a new Buick.

Returned to New York Yesterday

Mme. Koo returned to New York yesterday and will be at Hampshire House until sailing April 7 for France. She has been staying at the Chinese Embassy, where yesterday she was guest of honor at a small luncheon given by the Ambassador. Only members of the staff were present.

Had she remained here until today, as she had originally planned, Mme. Koo would have been among the honored guests at the dinner given last night by the Bishop of Nanking, Dr. Paul Yu-Pin, who is visiting Washington. At this party, the spotlight centered on the young Chinese aviatrix, Hilda Yen, who has been flying about the country in the interest of her war torn homeland. She arrived at the Capital airport yesterday accompanied by Miss Y. E. Lee, daughter of a well-known Chinese diplomat, who was also at the dinner.

The party was held at the Chinese Lantern restaurant. Among the guests were the Rev. George B. O'Toole, former rector of Catholic University in Peking; S. Chu, Chinese delegate to the International Labor Conference; Dr. P. C. Chang, professor of Nankai University, Tientsin, who has just arrived from China; members of the embassy staff and the Chinese colony in Washington, and various newspaper people.

Hulls Return From Miami

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull returned to their apartment at the Carlton Hotel yesterday after two weeks in Miammi, where they had gone on the advice of Secretary Hull's physician to enable the Secretary to recuperate from a recent attack of influenza.

In spite of the fact that the late political crises required the Secretary to keep in constant daily communication with his office, Mrs. Hull reports that the sun was most beneficial. Secretary Hull is much stronger, according to reports, and expects to keep long hours at his desk with no social entertaining for some time.

Ramceyers Are Dinner Hosts

Commissioner C. William Ramseyer, of the United States Court of Claims, and Mrs. Ramseyer entertained at diner last night at the Shoreham Blue Room for their daughter, Miss Barbara Ramseyer, who is home from Smith College, and her two guests, Miss Patsy Richmond, of Providence, R. Anne Lawrence Notes Trend Away From Drabness

It is as important for the rooms of a house to take on color and light in the spring as for the outside world to do so, Miss Anne Lawrence, interior decorator, told members of the D. C. Home Economics Association last night. Miss Lawrence, who spoke at the March dinner meeting of the association in the Y. W. C. A., illustrated her discussion of "The Value nad Use of Color in the Home" with fabrics and charts.

The house should be transformed from winter to summer, she said, with year-round slip covers replacing the monotonous rust and green of the winter room. She suggested block-print linens used with a warm mulberry tone and some gold to bring new color harmony to the furnishings.

Another combination she illustrated was a dusty apricot tone, intensified for accent and dulled for the heavier pieces of furniture, used against a gray wall.

The whole tendency nowadays is away from monotony and drabness, said Miss Lawrence, both in clothes and furnishings. People have become color conscious.

Senator Minton Fetes Democratic Clubwomen

Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana, yesterday entertained at a luncheon on Capitol Hill in honor of the prize-winning women visitors to the Conference of Democratic Clubs, which closed Thursday night.

The prizes, trips to the conference, were awarded in a drive for the greatest number of subscriptions to the Democratic Digest secured in any one precinct, county or State. Three prizes won by three women from Indiana, Mrs. Sanford K. Trippet, vice chairman of the State executive committee; Mrs. Frank T. Dowd, and Mrs. Ednaa Bingham.

Mrs. Mary Wade Hickey, of Rhode Island, who secured a subscriber to the Digest in each precinct of her State, and Mrs. L. J. Lutgen, Digest director of South Dakota, were also prize winners.

These women were the honor guests of Senator Minton. His other guests were Democratic members of the Congressional delegations from his own State, and those of the other winners, including Senator Theodore F. Green, of Rhode Island, and Senator William J. Bulow, of South Dakota, the three Democratic women in Congress, Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister and Mrs. May Thompson Evans, director and assistant director of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, and Mrs. Helen Essary, editor of the Democratic Digest.

Officers who will serve with Mrs. Strother for the coming year include: Mrs. H. T. Vosper, first president; Mrs. Frank M. Elliot, second vice president; Mrs. Emery M. Foster, re-elected as recording secretary; Mrs. Donald D. Sells, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Leo Raywid, treasurer, and Miss H. May Johnson, Mrs. Gershom Bradford and Mrs. J. H. Eaton, dirctors.

The alliance has a membership of 285.

League for Peace To Hear Address By Miss Perkins

Milo R. Perkins, recently appointed president of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, will address members of the District of Columbia branch of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom on Monday, at 3:30 at the Friends' Meeting House on Florida avenue.

The subject of Mr. Perkins' address will be "Rural Conditions Among Low Income Farm Families." His talk will deal particularly with the problems of the shore croppers and farm laborers in the South and what the Government, under the Farm Security Administration, is doing for this low income group. Its program includes rehabilitation, medical aid, tenant purchase loans, farm debt adjustments, tenure improvements, homestead projects, camps for migrant farm families, grants and other aids.

The meeting is open to the public.

Beta Sigma Phi To Install Chapter

Theta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi will be installed tonight at a ceremony in the North Room of the Mayflower Hotel. Miss Lyda Huff, international field executive, will be in charge, assisted by Ruth Cate Hill, who will give the pledge ritual, and Alice Roberts Koch, who is to give the sorority prayer. Others who will assist will be Mildred Brown, president of Zeta Chapter, and several guests from Richmond, among whom will be Spencer Watkins, of Virginia Delta, and president of Virginia State Council.

Those to be initiated are Maxine Siman, Leannette Peterson, Josephine Robinson, Myrtle Olson, Mary Jane Young, Henriette Factau, Margaret Burdette, Ella Sill, Mary Barker, Marjory Carder, Mary Hill, Jewel Levi, Fern Lee Smith, Karline Klett, Peggy Kennedy, Virginia Voegtli, Mary Jones, Jean Hatton and Bessie Southard.

Miss Georgia Dance will be installed as educational director of Zeta Chapter.

During the ceremony, a choral group from Epsilon Chapter will sing the sorority songs, accompanied by Ellen Runyan.

Following the installation, a dessert course will be serve. Members from all of the chapters will be present, including Mrs. E. B. Sunday, educational director of Gamma Chapter; Miss Mae R. Murray, sponsor of Delta, and Miss Helen Brundage, educational director of Epsilon Chapter.

Miss Huff, of the Claridge Hotel, is in charge of reservations and plans for the installation.

Shoppers to Meet At Ezekiel Home

Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel, president of the Washington League of Women Shoppers, will be hostess at her country home near Bethesda to the executive board of the league on Friday evening, March 31. There will be a general discussion of the basic principles of the league, and the league's program for the ensuing year will be tentatively outlined. It is felt that the informal evening meeting will fill a need for a more general discussion of policies than daytime meetings have permitted, particularly in view of the fact that the league's program has been crowded with demands upon the time of its members in recent months.

The Washington League will be host on May 19 and 20 to the annual convention of the National League, which now has grown to include 13 chapters. At the request of the national, Mrs. Ezekiel has appointed a charman of arrangements for the convention, Mrs. Palmer Boggs.

Delegates to the convention are expected from Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Columbus, Ohio, Denver, Hollywood, Newark, and surrounding cities in New Jersey; New York City, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, San Francisco and St. Louis.

Dinner Arranged Monday Night by Business Women

The Business and Professional Woman's Club will have its monthly dinner Monday night at the Lafayette Hotel, with Mrs. Helena D. Reed as speaker.

Mrs. Reed, who is assistant trust officer of the Lincoln National Bank, will discuss "Savings and Investments." There will be music on the program, provided by Miss Blanche Kerr, who will sing, and Mrs. Charlotte Gasse, who will accompany her and also play a group of piano solos. Miss Nina Kinsella, president of the club, will open the meeting and Mrs. Emily Davis Phoenen, finance chairman, who is in charge of the program, will present the guest speaker.

The club this year has held two meetings a month, one a dinner followed by a program and the other an evening session devoted chiefly to business, eliminating business entirely from the program meeting.

Pen Women's Tea Set Wednesday

Wilhemina Stanhoofd (Mrs. E. H. Walter), soprano soloist, and Earle Hague, dramatist, will give the program at the following tea of the D. C. League of American Pen Women Wednesday, from 3 to 6 p. m., at the Grafton Hotel.

The hostess, Mrs. John E. Lawyer, will be assisted by Mrs. William W. Badgley and Miss Clara Manderschied.

Mrs. Walter studied with Crist, in Italy, and is now with Mme. Roulanger. She has been actively associated with Mrs. Ruby Stahl, of the A Cappella Choir, and is well known in music circles in Washington. She will present two groups of songs, concluding with "Colored Stars," by Crist. Tera Bartlett Sells will accompany her.

Mr. Hague, a young American playwright, who won the annual scholarship prize of Le Salon des Lettres, and tourned nationally as producer, director of musical comedies and historical pageants, will give dramatic readings from "The Hardy Perennial."

Zeta Beta Chi Plans To Hear Prof. Gewehi

Prof. W. M. Gewehi, of American University, will be the guest speaker at the next meeting of the Delta Chapter of Zeta Beta Chi Sorority on Monday at 7:45 p. m. at the Raleigh Hotel.

Prof. Gewehi will speak on "Travel Adventures," describing his tours to various parts of the world.

Spelling Bee Planned

An old-fashioned spelling bee will be held by the Massowa Town Club group of the Massachusetts Society at Wardman Park Hotel Thursday at 8:15 p. m. This will be open to everyone, and a prize will be awarded to each person left standing on the winning team.

Matrons, Patrons to Meet

Wednesday, the Matrons and Patrons Association of 1932 Order of the Eastern Star will hold its spring meeting at the Grafton Hotel. There will be entertainment and refreshments. On April 1 a barn dance will be held at the Chillum Masonic Hall, Chillum, Md., and it is expected the Worthy Grand Matron will be among the guests.

Prizes Slated At Bal Boheme

The Arts Club of Washington, whose Bal Boheme, "Paris au Printemps," will take place Eastern Monday night, April 10, at the Hotel Willard, will offer three prizes for the most beautiful, the most original and the most amusing costume worn at the ball. Preference will be given by the judges to costumes showing a Frence influence, it has been announced.

Miss Clara Saunders is chairman of the committee on the selection of costume prizes and the judges of costumes, assisted by Miss Dorothy Barnes and other club members.

The Bal Boheme committee is sending out gayly colored invitation cars this season—the design of Hugo Inden—and the cards hand colored by club artists. The entire scheme for the bal is "spring," and the Willard ballroom will become a street in Paris in springtime, its sidewalks lined with budding horsechestiuts, and the gay striped cafe awnings providing a real Parisian atmosphere.

The floor committee of 33 this season will be captained by Harold V. Meakin, all its members being garbed in gay costumes, of which Mrs. Charles Bittinger and her committee are in charge. Working with her are Mrs. Charles H. Stratton, Mrs. Charles S. Piggot, Mrs. Edward O. Hulburt, Mrs. Edwin H. Etz, Mrs. Ralph Richards and Mrs. Frank B. Steele.

Mrs. Duncan Phillips, chairman of patronesses and boxes, is accepting reservations for boxes, which may be made also at the Arts Club.

SURE..EUROPE TAUGHT US..BUT WHO MAKES THE BEST BEER NOW?

Pictures through courtesy of Otto Hesse, Photographer and International Barmen Association

IT'S A VICTORY! A Big victory for beer making in the U. S. A. But do you realize how big a win it is? Europe, you see, has long had a corner on the best beer. People have paid as high as 30¢ for a small glass of the better known foreign brands.

But it's not necessary any more!

If you live in the Middle West you can get a dry, tangy beer that 37 international experts called equal to Europe's finest imports.

And if you live in Maryland or Washington, D. C., you can get Gunther's, the beer that these experts actually ranked above 2 out of 3 of Europe's most famous beers.

How Experts Did It

It was at a recent congress of international experts that this exhaustive comparison was made of the best European and Domestic beers. All of these experts are members of the International Barmen Association with headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland. And all are of different nationalities now serving the finest bars of this country.

Not a single man knew what beer he was comparing. All he knew was that some were from abroad, some domestic. He had to judge them on quality alone. Quality of body, color and flavor.

A Toss-up

And when the 37 experts had made all their comparisons here was the result:

FIRST:

3 world famous imported beers had scored 48 points.

3 fine beers made in this country had scored 50 points.

Virtually no difference.

SECOND:

Each man had been asked to pick the beer he preferred to all the others.

Here a European beer won. But only by 1 single vote.

Gunther's, the beer so well known in Maryland and Washington, came next, and actually led the other 2 imported beers by a convincing margin!

By this Pledge

Let it be known that Gunther's beer will always be brewed according to the highest standards of the art of brewing. We will never use any but the finest ingredients, and thus maintain the same remarkable dry lager quality that places it among the finest beers, domestic or imported.

The high cost of making Gunther's prohibits the giving away of premiums or prizes. All the value is in the Beer!

Congratulations, Baltimore

Gunther's did a grand job for the U. S. Team of beers. Like one of its team-mates, an expensive beer made in the Middle West, Gunther's is a "Special Dry Lager," the kind most real beer-drinkers prefer. Gunther's has always claimed it was as dry and beer-y as any imported beer! Now the experts have proved it!

And you can prove it for yourself. Taste it. Compare it with any beer made regardless of price! Drink it for one week . . . and you'll never go back to the sweeter-type beers.

Remember Gunther's is the original and only "Special Dry Lager" made in this part of the country.

It ranks right up with the world's finest. AND HERE IT COSTS YOU NO MORE THAN ORDINARY BEERS!

Gentlemen:-

On last Thursday evening, at a dinner of our members, held in the Empire Room of the Hotel Lexington, a very thorough and comprehensive test was made to determine the relative merits of famous imported and domestic beers.

It was gratifying to see how the standards of brewing in this country have produced beer so excellent in taste, body, and color; that three domestic beers were virtually comparable in every way with three world-famous imported beers.

Thirty-seven experts, all master bar-men and wine stewards, engaged in this test, and none were permitted to know the names of the beers they tasted until the test was concluded.

You may also be gratified to learn that Gunthers was one of the highest ranking beers, receiving, as it did, the second highest number of votes for first choice. It was only exceeded by one world-famous imported beer in the opinion of these experts.

Yours very truly,

Bloc to Ask Auto Title Tax Boost

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., March 24.—New and unexpected revisions in the administration's $17,000,000 revenue bill, additional turmoil over a bill to oust State employment commissioner Harry C. Jones, and a move to abolish another State department marked today's session of the Legislature.

Principal development of the day was a disclosure, by well-informed sources, that Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor's leaders would seek to balance his $35,000,000 biennial budget with an increased tax on titles to new automobiles.

Estimated to bring in approximately $400,000, the boosted titling tax would place a 2 per cent levy on titles to new cars and continue the 1 per cent titling tax on used automobiles. Hand in hand with the plan would be a reduction in the proposed $1 a barrel beer tax.

No Cut in Relief

With this change, sources close to the administration said, the revenue bill would bring in more than the $17,000,000 originally estimated, the budget could be balanced without being appreciably reduced, and no money would be taken from the $5,000,000 annual relief appropriation.

Legislation aimed at dismissal of Commissioner Jones, replacing him with a three-man unpaid commission and a paid director, was on the Senate's third reading and final passage calendar today, but administration leaders sidestepped the issue.

Senators opposing the Jones bill made it clear that, if and when the bill came up for passage, "a real filibuster" would result.

At the same time, Senate President Arthur Brice dneied a bill he introduced last night, exempting the State police from the merit system, represented by a new attack on the civil service.

"This bill was prepared by the State law department at my request," Brice asserted, "and is designed to confer upon the superintendent of State police power and authority similar to that possessed by the police commissioner of Baltimore City and by the many of the heads of State police forces in other States.

Full Control Sought

"I think it is desirable to give the superintendent full control over the police employes, rather than to have the authority divided. This is particularly true in regard to higher officers of the department."

Brice's bill would give the police superintendent full power to hire, fire, promote or demote any State police officer.

Governor O'Conor asserted he had "made no move pro or con" with regard to the State police bill. He declined, however, to make that statement with regard to the Jones ouster legislation, reiterating that neither was an "administration bill."

Senator Brice, in a formal statement on the police measure, asserted "it was not my intention to have the new provisions apply to clerical employes and I shall propose an amendment to continue these under the merit system."

Abolition of the State tax commission, to be replaced by a new State bureau of taxation and assessment, was proposed in the senate by Senator Philip Dorsey (Democrat), St. Mary's.

Believes in 'Spoils'

Dorsey declared during debate on the Jones bill Wednesday night that "frankly, I agree with the theories of Andrew Jackson, that 'to the victor belong the spoils.'" His new bureau bill makes no mention of the merit system.

Meanwhile, with today the deadline for introduction of new bills without suspending the rules, legislators dumped 50 more measures in the House and a score in the senate even before the night session began.

The senate also banged 67 bills through final passage, the longest calendar so far. Included in the measures sent to the governor was one raising legislators' salaries to $720 a year.

Mushroom-Raising Termites Are Described in Lecture Here

Armand Denis and Leila Roosevelt Also Tell of Giants 7 Feet Tall Who Visited Them in Africa

Termites which raise mushrooms for food underground, and giants 7 feet tall who are believed to be descended from the ancient Egyptians were some of the sights of Africa described last night by Armand Denis and Leila Roosevelt before members of the National Geographic Society at Constitution Hall.

They showed motion pictures of the opening of a great termite and hill in which the ants actually cultivate a form of mushrooms deep in underground passages. These plants are the termites' food supply, and when they start a new colony, pieces of mushroom from the old ant hill must be taken along to start a new supply growing.

The 7-foot giants were among many little-known African peoples visited by the Denises while making a motion picture record of life in the Belgian Congo for the Belgian government. The motion picture, "Dark Rapture," was made from a part of the material they collected. Mrs. Denis is a cousin of both "Teddy" and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The giants have herds of cattle with peculiar horns exactly like those of cattle depicted in ancient Egyptian paintings. The Denises showed sound motion pictures of ceremonial dances staged by Congo tribes, and an orchestral concert given in honor of the "sacred" cattle.

Anklets of copper wire, weighing from 25 to 40 pounds, worn by some of the African women, did not prevent them from taking part in the dances, some of which might well have inspired the American "jitterbug" style. The "world's largest" xylophone, made of logs of wood and played by half a dozen musicians, was found and photographed in sound by the Denis expedition.

They secured pictures of chameleons which have "swivel" eyes, working independently of each other and able to point in any direction, beetles nearly as large as a man's hand, and colonies of thousands of hippopotamuses.

Pygmies were photographed in the process of building a bridge of vines high in the air between two trees across a river, and feasting upon an elephant which had been shot.

The Denises also took part in the capture of a wild African elephant to be trained for farm work, and had a thrilling escape from a bush fire which broke out during the hunt.

U. S. Citizenship Restored Md. Girl Wed to Marquis

Baltimore, March 24 (AP).—American citizenship was restored today to the Marquise de Lasclaras, the former Sally Abell, in a brief hearing before Federal Judge William C. Coleman.

L. Vernon Miller, her attorney, explained she had lost her citizenship through her marriage to Fernando De Elzaburu, Marquis De Lasclaras. He said she was sailing shortly for France but wished to regain her citizenship because of unsettled conditions in Europe.

Dr. Millian Lauds Teachers At Woodside M. E. Banquet

Function Part of Program Dedicating $60,000 Church Building at Silver Spring; Ceremonies to Continue

While some nations have lost regard for humanity, God still values human personality, Dr. John C. Millian told an audience last night at Woodside Methodist Church, Silver Spring.

He is director of religious education of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and addressed a devotional service in the new church building following a church school banquet, highlight of "dedication week." The forty-voice, vested junior choir, led by Mrs. Dorothy Emery, sang.

"For comparison," he pointed out, "we should observe how little value is placed on human beings in Germany, with men treated like dogs because of their race. However," he added, "every human being is worth a lot in the sight of God."

He lauded the accomplishments of the Sunday School teachers and officers, and told his listeners "the church school is the greatest evangelistic agency the Christian Church has." Eighty per cent of the church membership comes from the church school, he said.

Dr. Millian was formerly director of religious education at Foundry Methodist Church. He was introduced by Dr. Ralph Dela Smith, pastor of Woodside Church, which last Sunday dedicated its $60,000 building at 8811 George avenue northwest. Dr. Howard B. Dozier, Sunday school superintendent, was a special guest.

Arrangements for the fellowship banquet dinner were made by the Ladies' Aid Society, headed by Mrs. H. H. Howlett. Mrs. C. W. Hake was chairman.

Other dedication wek exercises are scheduled for tomorrow and Wednesday. (Story on Page 22.)

Bishop's Rites Set Monday at Mt. St. Mary's

Rt. Rev. Mahoney to Be Buried Near Campus Of Alma Mater

By the Associated Press.

Emmitsburg, Md., March 24.—Rites for the Right Rev. Bernard J. Mahoney, bishop of Sioux Falls, S. D., who died March 20, were arranged at Mt. St. Mary's College today for next Monday.

Interment will be in Mount Echo Cemetery overlooking the Mt. St. Mary's campus in accordance with the expressed wish of the late bishop, who was graduated here in 1899.

The graduating class, including the bishop's nephew, Bernard J. Mahoney, to whom the bishop was to have delivered their graduation address in June, will be honorary pall bearers.

Bishop Mahoney was born in Albany, N. Y., in 1875.

Preston Lumpkin

Staunton, Va., March 24.—The funeral of Preston Lumpkin, 17, was held Wednesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Byers, by whom he had been adopted. He was a member of Central Methodist Church and his pastor, Dr. John C. Copenhaver, officiated, assisted by the Rev. J. M. McBryde, chaplain at Augusta Military Academy, where he was a student. His death came unexpectedly Monday after an operation and brief illness.

Charles E. Sheller

Chambersburg, Pa., March 24.—Funeral services will be held Saturday for Charles E. Sheller, Chambersburg farm implement dealer, who died unexpectedly of a heart attack Wednesday night at his home, Chambersburg, R. F. D. No 5. He is survived by his wife, a daughter and three brothers.

Mrs. Sarah E. Plum

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 24.—Services will be held here Sunday afternoon for Mrs. Sarah E. Plum, 70, wife of Trent Plum, a native of Page County, Va., who died at a local hospital yesterday.

John G. Stewart

Fredericksburg, Va., March 24.—Funeral services were to be held in Prince William County this afternoon for John Gordon Stewart, 62, who died at his home here Wednesday night.

Berkeley to Resubmit School Plans to WPA

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 24.—G. William Ropp, superintendent of Berkeley County public schools, today announced plans for re-submission of WPA projects calling for erection of new buildings and repair of present county school buildings.

Probable projects to be submitted, stated Ropp, will include a one-room schol building at Shanghai; a two-room building at Jones Spring; specific improvement to existing buildings throughout the country, and grading of two acres plot of ground behind Martinsburg High School.

State to Launch Exhaustive Study Of 'Crash Centers'

Richmond, Va., March 24 (AP).—A study of "accident centers" in Virginia for the purpose of eliminating conditions that have contributed to accidents in the past will be undertaken, April 15, by the State division of motor vehicles.

Major Roy P. Bishop, administrative assistant to the division director, will be in charge of the study, which will be carried out by a safety squad headed by Troopers John E. Clinely and G. D. Stoutamyer.

The study, Maj. Bishop said, will begin in the area which reported the largest number of accidents and fatalities last year.

The division reported that Fairfax County led the State in automobile fatalities during 1938 with 39, followed by Norfolk County, with 20; Augusta, 18, and Henrico, 15.

A review of accidents for the past five years showed 60,008 reported accidents in the State, which caused the death of 3,857 persons.

Md. Police Hunt Missing Merchant

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, March 24.—Missing since Monday night and believed a victim of amnesia, James A. Martin, 43, merchant of Yarrowsburg, a small town in the southern part of Washington County, was sought today by Sheriff Joseph Baker. Martin was last seen Monday night when he closed his store and started for his home.

Relatives told Sheriff Baker that Martin was gassed during the World War and may be a victim of amnesia. Weighing 223 pounds, he is 5 feet 11 inches in height, had black hair and brown eyes and was wearing a brown shirt, gray sweater and blue trousers.

Juror's Illness Forces Attack Case Mistrial

Halifax, Va., March 24 (AP).—A mistrial was ordered late yesterday in the trial of Luther Hogg, 35, of Mecklenburg, charged with assaulting a 13-year-old niece of his wife.

Judge N. S. Turnbull ordered the mistrial because of illness of a juror. The latter fainted after the jury had begun its deliberations.

Second Fire Victim Dies

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 24.—A fire that destroyed a frame home here last Friday, yesterday claimed the second life—that of Nettie Gray, 50, colored. Her husband, Allen Gray, 55, was found dead at the foot of a burned stairway.

5,000 Cheer O'Conor at State Fete

Governor's Appeal To Preserve Nation's Ideals Applauded By U. of Md. Throng

A military review, martial music and a challenge to preserve the State and Nation's democratic ideals against "totalitarian oppression" marked the celebration at the University of Maryland yesterday of the 305th anniversary of the Free State.

Condemnation of the totalitarian doctrines by both Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor and Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer brought wild applause from the 5,000 college and high school students attending the exercises in the Ritchie Coliseum.

Comparing the present-day oppression abroad with the social evils which Maryland's early colonists sought to escape, Gov. O'Conor declared:

"When strong nations can ruthlessly seize weaker nations, and deny even the fundamental civic rights to minorities within their borders—when the rights of whole peoples can be destroyed overnight with impunity—when on all sides the totalitarian doctrine that "might is right" begins to be the sole guiding principle, then, indeed, it is time for us in this land of free institutions to be on the alert to preserve and safeguard our hard-won privileges."

Warning Is Issued

O'Conor warned against "subversive influences," asserting that "disloyal groups are working night and day to bring about here the very doctrines that have destroyed individual liberties throughout a great part of the world of today."

This Nation's guarantees of individual rights and freedom must be preserved, "at all costs," he declared.

Addressing himself to the students, Representative Sasscer declared:

"It is your responsibility to preserve the traditions passed down to us from our founding fathers and to keep the heel of the dictators, with any of the accompanying "isms," off our American shores and out of our American hearts."

Pageants Are Given

Pageants portraying the settlement of St. Marys City by Lord Baltimore's colonists March 25, 1634, were given by students of the Montgomery Blair and Annapolis High Schools. The Montgomery Blair students depicted the planting of the cross at St. Marys City and the Annapolis students dramatized the proclamation of the establishment of the Province of Maryland.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University, presided; and the Rev. Leonard Walsh, O.F.M., of Catholic University, gave the invocation and benediction.

The celebration was held a day in advance of the official anniversary because of the school holiday today. High school students from Prince Georges, Montgomery, Howard and Anne Arundel counties, as well as the university students, attended.

Repairing Old Ship Models

Veteran of Two Wars Finds Fountain Of Youth in Smithsonian Institution Where He Restores Maritime Exhibits

(This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.)

By Gerald G. Gross.

Maj. John W. Loveland thinks he has found the fountain of youth in a little workshop in the arts and industries building of the Smithsonian Institution. It was there that he was discovered yesterday, studiously restoring a seventeenth century fishing vessel temporarily off exhibition.

"It's delightful, having such an opportunity as this to indulge my hobby, ship models," he said. "Isn't this one a beauty?"

The model was of a square-rigged brig called a "snow," a type that was common in the codfish grounds off the Newfoundland banks many years ago. Maj. Loveland was busy repairing the rigging, painting the miniature fishermen on deck and inspecting the hull for weaknesses.

Retired Army Officer

A retired patent lawyer and Army officer who was 72 last October, Maj. Loveland became a volunteer ship model restorer at the Smithsonian about a month ago. Prior to that time his chief pastime had been marine painting.

"While I have not given up my painting," he says, "model work is taking up most of my time. I come down at about 10:30 in the morning every day, except Saturday and Sunday, and stay on the job until 4 or 4:30 p. m."

One of the most valuable ship models in the Smithsonian collection is of the "Ariel," Maj. Loveland's sloop yacht which he bought in 1907 and which he sails each summer when he and his wife go to their summer home at Nantucket. The miniature, complete in every technical detail, was built by Maj. Loveland.

"It was 25 years in the making," he says. "The idea I had at first was to fashion a reproduction of the 'Ariel' for my son to sail in a pond. But before I had gone far I made up my mind that this model would be too good for use as an ordinary toy."

Veteran of Two Wars

When he left Washington on a round-the-world cruise in 1934, he deposited the model in the Smithsonian Institution and it has been there since.

Maj. Loveland, a native of West Pittston, Pa., is a graduate in civil engineering and military science, as well as patent law. He served in Puerto Rico during the Spanish-American War and was sent to the Mexican border in 1916. During the World War he was attached to the Twenty-ninth Division.

His marine paintings have been exhibited at the Corcoran and other galleries, although he never painted a picture before 1921. It was at about that time that he came to Washington as a patent law counsel in the Department of Justice. He retired from Government service in 1933. Maj. and Mrs. Loveland live at the Wardman Park Hotel.

SURE...EUROPE TAUGHT US...BUT WHO MAKES THE BEST BEER NOW?

Pictures through courtesy of Otto Hesse, Photographer and International Barmen Association

IT'S A VICTORY! A Big victory for beer making in the U. S. A. But do you realize how big a win it is? Europe, you see, has long had a corner on the best beer. People have paid as high as 30¢ for a small glass of the better known foreign brands.

But it's not necessary any more!

If you live in the Middle West you can get a dry, tangy beer that 37 international experts called equal to Europe's finest imports.

And if you live in Maryland or Washington, D. C., you can get Gunther's, the beer that these experts actually ranked above 2 out of 3 of Europe's most famous beers.

FIRST:

3 world famous imported beers had scored 48 points.

3 fine beers made in this country had scored 50 points.

Virtually no difference.

SECOND:

Each man had been asked to pick the beer he preferred to all the others.

Here a European beer won. But only by 1 single vote.

Gunther's, the beer so well known in Maryland and Washington, came next, and actually led the other 2 imported beers by a convincing margin!

How Experts Did It

It was at a recent congress of international experts that this exhaustive comparison was made of the best European and Domestic beers. All of these experts are members of the International Barmen Association with headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland. And all are of different nationalities now serving the finest bars of this country.

Not a single man knew what beer he was comparing. All he knew was that some were from abroad, some domestic. He had to judge them on quality alone. Quality of body, color and flavor.

A Toss-up

By this Pledge

Let it be known that Gunther's beer will always be brewed according to the highest standards of the art of brewing. We will never use any but the finest ingredients, and thus maintain the same remarkable dry lager quality that places it among the finest beers, domestic or imported.

The high cost of making Gunther's prohibits the giving away of premiums or prizes. All the value is in the Beer!

Congratulations, Baltimore

Gunther's did a grand job for the U. S. Team of beers. Like one of its team-mates, an expensive beer made in the Middle West, Gunther's is a "Special Dry Lager," the kind most real beer-drinkers prefer. Gunther's has always claimed it was as dry and beer-y as any imported beer! Now the experts have proved it!

And you can prove it for yourself. Taste it. Compare it with any beer made regardless of price! Drink it for one week . . . and you'll never go back to the sweeter-type beers.

Remember Gunther's is the original and only "Special Dry Lager" made in this part of the country.

It ranks right up with the world's finest. AND HERE IT COSTS YOU NO MORE THAN ORDINARY BEERS!

Gentlemen:-
On last Thursday evening, at a dinner of our members, held in the Empire Room of the Hotel Lexington, a very thorough and comprehensive test was made to determine the relative merits of famous imported and domestic beers.
It was gratifying to see how the standards of brewing in this country have produced beer so excellent in taste, body, and color; that three domestic beers were virtually comparable in every way with three world-famous imported beers.
Thirty-seven experts, all master bar-men and wine stewards, engaged in this test, and none were permitted to know the names of the beers they tasted until the test was concluded.
You may also be gratified to learn that Gunthers was one of the highest ranking beers, receiving, as it did, the second highest number of votes for first choice. It was only exceeded by one world-famous imported beer in the opinion of these experts.
Yours very truly,

Bloc to Ask Auto Title Tax Boost

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., March 24.—New and unexpected revisions in the administration's $17,000,000 revenue bill, additional turmoil over a bill to oust State employment commissioner Harry C. Jones, and a move to abolish another State department marked today's session of the Legislature.

Principal development of the day was a disclosure, by well-informed sources, that Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor's leaders would seek to balance his $95,000,000 biennial budget with an increased tax on titles to new automobiles.

Estimated to bring in approximately $400,000, the boosted titling tax would place a 2 per cent levy on titles to new cars and continue the 1 per cent titling tax on used automobiles. Hand in hand with the plan would be a reduction in the proposed $1 a barrel beer tax.

No Cut in Relief

With this change, sources close to the administration said, the revenue bill would bring in more than the $17,000,000 originally estimated, the budget could be balanced without being appreciably reduced, and no money would be taken from the $5,000,000 annual relief appropriation.

Legislation aimed at dismissal of Commissioner Jones, replacing him with a three-man unpaid commission and a paid director, was on the Senate's third reading and final passage calendar today, but administration leaders sidestepped the issue.

Senators opposing the Jones bill made it clear that, if and when the bill came up for passage, "a real filibuster" would result.

At the same time, Senate President Arthur Brice dneied a bill he introduced last night, exempting the State police from the merit system, represented by a new attack on the civil service.

"This bill was prepared by the State law department at my request," Brice asserted, "and is designed to confer upon the superintendent of State police power and authority similar to that possessed by the police commissioner of Baltimore City and by the many of the heads of State police forces in other States.

Full Control Sought

"I think it is desirable to give the superintendent full control over the police employes, rather than to have the authority divided. This is particularly true in regard to higher officers of the department.

"Brice's bill would give the police superintendent full power to hire, fire, promote or demote any State police officer.

Governor O'Conor asserted he had "made no move pro or con" with regard to the State police bill. He declined, however, to make that statement with regard to the Jones ouster legislation, reiterating that neither was an "administration bill."

Senator Brice, in a formal statement on the police measure, asserted "it was not my intention to have the new provisions apply to clerical employes and I shall propose an amendment to continue these under the merit system."

Abolition of the State tax commission, to be replaced by a new State bureau of taxation and assessment, was proposed in the senate by Senator Philip Dorsey (Democrat), St. Mary's.

Believes in 'Spoils'

Dorsey declared during debate on the Jones bill Wednesday night that "frankly, I agree with the theories of Andrew Jackson, that 'to the victor belong the spoils.'" His new bureau bill makes no mention of the merit system.

Meanwhile, with today the deadline for introduction of new bills without suspending the rules, legislators dumped 50 more measures in the House and a score in the senate even before the night session began.

The senate also banged 67 bills through final passage, the longest calendar so far. Included in the measures sent to the governor was one raising legislators' salaries to $720 a year.

The "world's largest" xylophone, made of logs of wood and played by half a dozen musicians, was found and photographed in sound by the Denis expedition.

They secured pictures of chameleons which have "swivel" eyes, working independently of each other and able to point in any direction, beetles nearly as large as a man's hand, and colonies of thousands of hippopotamuses.

Pygmies were photographed in the process of building a bridge of vines high in the air between two trees across a river, and feasting upon an elephant which had been shot.

The Denises also took part in the capture of a wild African elephant to be trained for farm work, and had a thrilling escape from a bush fire which broke out during the hunt.

U. S. Citizenship Restored Md. Girl Wed to Marquis

Baltimore, March 24 (AP).—American citizenship was restored today to the Marquise de Lasclaras, the former Sally Abell, in a brief hearing before Federal Judge William C. Coleman.

L. Vernon Miller, her attorney, explained she had lost her citizenship through her marriage to Fernando De Elzaburu, Marquis De Lasclaras. He said she was sailing shortly for France but wished to regain her citizenship because of unsettled conditions in Europe.

Dr. Millian Lauds Teachers At Woodside M. E. Banquet

Function Part of Program Dedicating $60,000 Church Building at Silver Spring; Ceremonies to Continue

While some nations have lost regard for humanity, God still values human personality, Dr. John C. Millian told an audience last night at Woodside Methodist Church, Silver Spring.

He is director of religious education of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and addressed a devotional service in the new church building following a church school banquet, highlight of "dedication week." The forty-voice, vested junior choir, led by Mrs. Dorothy Emery, sang.

"For comparison," he pointed out, "we should observe how little value is placed on human beings in Germany, with men treated like dogs because of their race. However," he added, "every human being is worth a lot in the sight of God."

He lauded the accomplishments of the Sunday School teachers and officers, and told his listeners "the church school is the greatest evangelistic agency the Christian Church has." Eighty per cent of the church membership comes from the church school, he said.

Dr. Millian was formerly director of religious education at Foundry Methodist Church. He was introduced by Dr. Ralph Dela Smith, pastor of Woodside Church, which last Sunday dedicated its $60,000 building at 8811 George avenue northwest. Dr. Howard B. Dozier, Sunday school superintendent, was a special guest.

Arrangements for the fellowship banquet dinner were made by the Ladies' Aid Society, headed by Mrs. H. H. Howlett. Mrs. C. W. Hake was chairman.

Other dedication wek exercises are scheduled for tomorrow and Wednesday. (Story on Page 22.)

Bishop's Rites Set Monday at Mt. St. Mary's

Rt. Rev. Mahoney to Be Buried Near Campus Of Alma Mater

By the Associated Press.

Emmitsburg, Md., March 24.—Rites for the Right Rev. Bernard J. Mahoney, bishop of Sioux Falls, S. D., who died March 20, were arranged at Mt. St. Mary's College today for next Monday.

Interment will be in Mount Echo Cemetery overlooking the Mt. St. Mary's campus in accordance with the expressed wish of the late bishop, who was graduated here in 1899.

The graduating class, including the bishop's nephew, Bernard J. Mahoney, to whom the bishop was to have delivered their graduation address in June, will be honorary pall bearers.

Bishop Mahoney was born in Albany, N. Y., in 1875.

Preston Lumpkin

Staunton, Va., March 24.—The funeral of Preston Lumpkin, 17, was held Wednesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Byers, by whom he had been adopted. He was a member of Central Methodist Church and his pastor, Dr. John C. Copenhaver, officiated, assisted by the Rev. J. M. McBryde, chaplain at Augusta Military Academy, where he was a student. His death came unexpectedly Monday after an operation and brief illness.

Charles E. Sheller

Chambersburg, Pa., March 24.—Funeral services will be held Saturday for Charles E. Sheller, Chambersburg farm implement dealer, who died unexpectedly of a heart attack Wednesday night at his home, Chambersburg, R. F. D. No 5. He is survived by his wife, a daughter and three brothers.

Mrs. Sarah E. Plum

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 24.—Services will be held here Sunday afternoon for Mrs. Sarah E. Plum, 70, wife of Trent Plum, a native of Page County, Va., who died at a local hospital yesterday.

John G. Stewart

Fredericksburg, Va., March 24.—Funeral services were to be held in Prince William County this afternoon for John Gordon Stewart, 62, who died at his home here Wednesday night.

Berkeley to Resubmit School Plans to WPA

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 24.—G. William Ropp, superintendent of Berkeley County public schools, today announced plans for re-submission of WPA projects calling for erection of new buildings and repair of present county school buildings.

Probable projects to be submitted, stated Ropp, will include a one-room schol building at Shanghai; a two-room building at Jones Spring; specific improvement to existing buildings throughout the country, and grading of two acres plot of ground behind Martinsburg High School.

State to Launch Exhaustive Study Of 'Crash Centers'

Richmond, Va., March 24 (AP).—A study of "accident centers" in Virginia for the purpose of eliminating conditions that have contributed to accidents in the past will be undertaken, April 15, by the State division of motor vehicles.

Major Roy P. Bishop, administrative assistant to the division director, will be in charge of the study, which will be carried out by a safety squad headed by Troopers John E. Clinely and G. D. Stoutamyer.

The study, Maj. Bishop said, will begin in the area which reported the largest number of accidents and fatalities last year.

The division reported that Fairfax County led the State in automobile fatalities during 1938 with 39, followed by Norfolk County, with 20; Augusta, 18, and Henrico, 16.

A review of accidents for the past five years showed 60,008 reported accidents in the State, which caused the death of 3,857 persons.

Md. Police Hunt Missing Merchant

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, March 24.—Missing since Monday night and believed a victim of amnesia, James A. Martin, 43, merchant of Yarrowsburg, a small town in the southern part of Washington County, was sought today by Sheriff Joseph Baker. Martin was last seen Monday night when he closed his store and started for his home.

Relatives told Sheriff Baker that Martin was gassed during the World War and may be a victim of amnesia. Weighing 223 pounds, he is 5 feet 11 inches in height, had black hair and brown eyes and was wearing a brown shirt, gray sweater and blue trousers.

Juror's Illness Forces Attack Case Mistrial

Halifax, Va., March 24 (AP).—A mistrial was ordered late yesterday in the trial of Luther Hogg, 35, of Mecklenburg, charged with assaulting a 13-year-old niece of his wife.

Judge N. S. Turnbull ordered the mistrial because of illness of a juror. The latter fainted after the jury had begun its deliberations.

Second Fire Victim Dies

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 24.—A fire that destroyed a frame home here last Friday, yesterday claimed the second life—that of Nettie Gray, 50, colored. Her husband, Allen Gray, 55, was found dead at the foot of a burned stairway.

5,000 Cheer O'Conor at State Fete

Governor's Appeal To Preserve Nation's Ideals Applauded By U. of Md. Throng

A military review, martial music and a challenge to preserve the State and Nation's democratic ideals against "totalitarian oppression" marked the celebration at the University of Maryland yesterday of the 305th anniversary of the Free State.

Condemnation of the totalitarian doctrines by both Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor and Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer brought wild applause from the 5,000 college and high school students attending the exercises in the Ritchie Coliseum.

Comparing the present-day oppression abroad with the social evils which Maryland's early colonists sought to escape, Gov. O'Conor declared:

"When strong nations can ruthlessly seize weaker nations, and deny even the fundamental civic rights to minorities within their borders—when the rights of whole peoples can be destroyed overnight with impunity—when on all sides the totalitarian doctrine that "might is right" begins to be the sole guiding principle, then, indeed, it is time for us in this land of free institutions to be on the alert to preserve and safeguard our hard-won privileges."

Warning Is Issued

O'Conor warned against "subversive influences," asserting that "disloyal groups are working night and day to bring about here the very doctrines that have destroyed individual liberties throughout a great part of the world of today."

This Nation's guarantees of individual rights and freedom must be preserved, "at all costs," he declared.

Addressing himself to the students, Representative Sasscer declared:

"It is your responsibility to preserve the traditions passed down to us from our founding fathers and to keep the heel of the dictators, with any of the accompanying "isms," off our American shores and out of our American hearts."

Pageants Are Given

Pageants portraying the settlement of St. Marys City by Lord Baltimore's colonists March 25, 1634, were given by students of the Montgomery Blair and Annapolis High Schools. The Montgomery Blair students depicted the planting of the cross at St. Marys City and the Annapolis students dramatized the proclamation of the establishment of the Province of Maryland.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University, presided; and the Rev. Leonard Walsh, O.F.M., of Catholic University, gave the invocation and benediction.

The celebration was held a day in advance of the official anniversary because of the school holiday today. High school students from Prince Georges, Montgomery, Howard and Anne Arundel counties, as well as the university students, attended.

Repairing Old Ship Models

Veteran of Two Wars Finds Fountain Of Youth in Smithsonian Institution Where He Restores Maritime Exhibits

(This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.)

By Gerald G. Gross.

Maj. John W. Loveland thinks he has found the fountain of youth in a little workshop in the arts and industries building of the Smithsonian Institution. It was there that he was discovered yesterday, studiously restoring a seventeenth century fishing vessel temporarily off exhibition.

"It's delightful, having such an opportunity as this to indulge my hobby, ship models," he said. "Isn't this one a beauty?"

The model was of a square-rigged brig called a "snow," a type that was common in the codfish grounds off the Newfoundland banks many years ago. Maj. Loveland was busy repairing the rigging, painting the miniature fishermen on deck and inspecting the hull for weaknesses.

Retired Army Officer

A retired patent lawyer and Army officer who was 72 last October, Maj. Loveland became a volunteer ship model restorer at the Smithsonian about a month ago. Prior to that time his chief pastime had been marine painting.

"While I have not given up my painting," he says, "model work is taking up most of my time. I come down at about 10:30 in the morning every day, except Saturday and Sunday, and stay on the job until 4 or 4:30 p. m."

One of the most valuable ship models in the Smithsonian collection is of the "Ariel," Maj. Loveland's sloop yacht which he bought in 1907 and which he sails each summer when he and his wife go to their summer home at Nantucket. The miniature, complete in every technical detail, was built by Maj. Loveland.

"It was 25 years in the making," he says. "The idea I had at first was to fashion a reproduction of the 'Ariel' for my son to sail in a pond. But before I had gone far I made up my mind that this model would be too good for use as an ordinary toy."

Veteran of Two Wars

When he left Washington on a round-the-world cruise in 1934, he deposited the model in the Smithsonian Institution and it has been there since.

Maj. Loveland, a native of West Pittston, Pa., is a graduate in civil engineering and military science, as well as patent law. He served in Puerto Rico during the Spanish-American War and was sent to the Mexican border in 1916. During the World War he was attached to the Twenty-ninth Division.

His marine paintings have been exhibited at the Corcoran and other galleries, although he never painted a picture before 1921. It was at about that time that he came to Washington as a patent law counsel in the Department of Justice. He retired from Government service in 1933.

Maj. and Mrs. Loveland live at the Wardman Park Hotel.

A Gay Comedy Is on Screen At the Capitol

'Wife, Husband, Friend' Stars Baxter and Young; Buddy Clark on Stage

"WIFE, HUSBAND AND FRIEND." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a novel by James M. Cain, adapted to the screen by Nunnally Johnson, starring Loretta Young and Warner Baxter, with Binnie Barnes, Helen Westley, Cesar Romero, George Barbier, J. Edward Bromberg, Eugene Pallette, Ruth Terry, Alice Armand, Rene Riano, Harry Rosenthal, Laurence Grant, Kay Griffiths, Edward Cooper and Charles Williams. Directed by Gregory Ratoff. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

A watered martini with a flannel olive to the wretch who handicapped the Capitol's choice comedy, "Wife, Husband and Friend," with such a Faith Baldwin title!

The Loretta Young-Warner Baxter-Binnie Barnes farce has nothing to do with the endless parade of Wife-Nurse-Doctor-Husband-Psychoanalist-Garbageman triangles that have so changelessly haunted our theater marquees. It is a delightful sneer at amateur singers who beleaguer their families with their bathtub arias. Baxter clips off a neat comedy role, as the husband who shows that he can sing as well as his wife, and Binnie Barnes, at last, has one of those important parts which her worldly manner so deserves. The satire also hits the musical world in a vulnerable spot.

George Barbier sums up the whole situation early in the film when he recalls to his son-in-law that his daughter and her mother were not the only females in their line ambitious for a vocal star in the musical heavens:

"Why, Doris' grandmother thought she could sing, too, back in 1861. She went down to Richmond, Va., to give a concert. After that the Civil War began."

Allergic to Music

Briefly, the men that Helen Westley and Loretta Young married a generation apart are allergic to the music that the little women claim is their raison d'etre. Mother Helen encourages Loretta, while Baxter's contracting business slides down to hopes for designing chicken coops and Barbier drink's Lethe's liquid liquors in the butler's pantry. Encouragement for the vocally ambitious comes with snaky Cesar Romero, who teaches scales and Dvorak songs.

Friends and business pressure fill Town Hall for Loretta's triumphant debut, but a worldly opera star is there, too, and she observes the vocal vacuity and connubial unrest. When husband Baxter begins to demonstrate the words of a soldierly song, the slinky soprano is amazed to hear a ringing barytone and a glass break for its force. Not only does she cultivate Baxter, but she convinces him that his voice will prove to his wife that a family can have more than one singer.

The film's spoantaniety of idea is carried through with rapid pacing, clever lines and odd pieces of business that keep it always alive. Baxter is particularly choice, as the absurdly costumed barytone in his first—and final—opera appearance, a bit of satire that operagoers in our town can appreciate through long concentration. Barbier's customary grouchiness gives place to eternal morbidity, and Helen Westerley has never been more acidulous. Loretta Young is certainly sufficient as the plaintive wife. Eugene Pallette and Reno Riano (dressed up for a change) are Baxter's business partner and frau. Scriptwriter Nunnally Johnson and witty director Ratoff collaborated neatly.

Some Expert "Dubbing"

The singing voices have been expertly dubbed in so that Baxter's barytone is a robust combination of Tibbett, Thomas and that fellow who always sings with Jeannette MacDonald. His platform appearance is a high light in this top-top comedy.

The Capitol stage show is below par this week, except for a lusty and rowdy redhead, Cinda Glenn, whose vision of "The Deb of the Year," at a table in El Morocco, is one of the better things. She also sings "My Heart Belongs to Daddy," baldly aided by Drummer Ralph Fox. Headliner Buddy Clark, from radio's "Hit Parade," is at his best in the Gershwin, "It Ain't Necessarily So," an unhackneyed number for a variety turn.

The Rockets have a clever idea in their miniature piano finale, and Dolinoffs and the Raya Sisters do a now-you-see-us-now-you-don't routine. The Carr Brothers tumble, Renay Rice taps and John Galus juggles. RICHARD L. COE.

Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer Have Ideal Vehicle in 'Love Affair'

Film at RKO-Keith's Is Ably Directed And Superbly Acted; Shorts Are Notable

"LOVE AFFAIR." RKO-Radio picturization of an original story by Mildred Cram and Leo McCarey, adapted to the screen by Delmar Daves and Donald Ogden Stewart, costarring Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer, with Mme. Maria Ouspenskaya, Lee Bowman, Astrid Allwyn and Maurice Moscovich. Music and lyrics by B. G. Silva, Harold Arlen and Ted Koehler. Directed by Leo McCarey. Previewed Monday, March 20. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

Contrived with a subtlety and good taste that seldom have been approached on the screen, "Love Affair," revealed yesterday for the first time locally at RKO-Keith's Theater, must appeal to every discriminating theatergoer with any regard whatever for the more deftly maneuvered of the cinema's comedy romances.

BELL

It has been bruited about that "Love Affair," in its original form, encountered the stern opposition of the Will H. Hays office and that a happy ending was appended to the engaging tale after a doleful one had impressed the producers as not quite what the subject demanded for widest appeal. However these circumstances may have been, there remain no blemishes upon a film play that is at once literate, highly amusing, sometimes mildly pathetic and always interesting and genuinely diverting.

Is Slowly Gaited

As has been stated on a previous occasion, the pace of the picture is not swift. One suspects that this retardation of movement was deliberate on Director McCarey's part, for the sum total of his finished work is so preponderantly on the side of intelligent, moving and thoroughly adult entertainment that it could not have been accidental.

The action is initiated aboard ship, but it moves successively to the villa of Michel's grandmother, on the Mediterranean, and thence to the hurly-burly of New York's ultra-smart and ultra-squalid environs. Mr. McCarey has been as discreet in what he has not shown on the screen as in what he has. He could have made his fable exceedingly tawdry, by the revelation of sensational scenes that are only implied, but happily resisted that temptation.

"Love Affair" is handsomely played by its two costellar figures and all of the comparatively small cast that surrounds them. Irene Dunne, with extreme adroitness, gives an occasional impression that she may, at some time, have been a shady lady, but skirts the thin ice so skillfully that her portrayal becomes one of complete charm. Charles Boyer, as Michel—his first role in an American picture since "Algiers,"—enacts the part of the wastrel playboy with easy sauvity and complete apprehension of the intent of the authors in fashioning the character. Delmar Daves and Donald Ogden Stewart have supplied both Miss Dunne and Mr. Boyer with lines that are brittle, witty and wise.

European Crisis

Foremost in support of the stars is Mme. Maria Ouspenskaya, in the role of Michel's grandmother. Her scenes are brief, but vitally potent. Lee Bowman, Astrid Allwyn and Maurice Moscovich are others in the small cast who aid in making "Love Affair" one of the most delightful releases of the season. Miss Dunne's singing of "Wishing" and "Sing My Heart," is among the picture's distinct assets.

Foremost among the supplementary features of the new bill at Keith's is "The March of Time," devoted exclusively to the "Mediterranean. Background of War." Here are skillfully integrated all of the elements that are causing concern to Italy, Germany, France, England and all of the other European nations whose interests fringe the island sea. It is something to be seen. Walt Disney's Mickey Mouse comedy, "Society Dog Show," is a humorous item in which Pluto falls in love! The latest issue of the Pathe News—and any newsreel is interesting these turbulent days—completes a program that should be good for an extended run on Fifteenth street.

Two in Love and All at Sea!

IRENE DUNNE AND CHARLES BOYER
as they appear in the roles of the two principals who give rise to the title of "Love Affair," borne by the fine romantic comedy now on view on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater. "Love Affair" affords Miss Dunne opportunity to sing and in every respect is a film play of the first rank, superlatively played and directed

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, March 24.

JIMMY HINES: The probation reports on Dixie and Harry Schoenhaus, which were released to the press, first were edited and parts deleted. Those censored portions contained uncomplimentary references to the former Mrs. Davis by Dixie, and the other section referred to a lady enamored of Schoenhaus . . . ADOLF HITLER: Clement Wood, who wrote that anonymous book, "The Strange Death of Adolf Hitler," received a $500 advance from the publishers . . . John Amen: Two B'klyn jurists, one on the supreme court and the other on the county court bench, expect to resign soon.

JOAN CRAWFORD: Franchot Tone went to Tony's, on West Fifty-second street, accompanied by his mother . . . "Well, Ma," Franchot suggested, "you're a very nice girl. How'd you like to come and keep house for me?" . . . "I'd love it," replied Mrs. Tone. "And I can hire a nice housekeeper."

JOHNNIE WEISMULLER: Buster Crabbe will be the swimmer who will have the leading role, opposite Eleanor Holm, at Billy Rose's Aquacade . . . And Gertrude Ederle will make her comback in this show . . . Prince Obolensky: Fleischman, who invested $240,000 in the Ballet Russe with you, plans to resign from that enterprise shortly . . . George Bernard Shaw: The 12 famous people who were referred to in the script of Sam Behrman's new show, "No Time for Comedy," all have been eliminated. Your part was eliminated last night . . . Harry Hopkins: Last night another rehearsal was held of "Sing for Your Supper," the Federal Theater revue which started rehearsing during your regime more than a year ago. At the Government's request, Kaufman & Hart attended, to give some advice.

BORIS KARLOFF: Bert Lahr and Victor McLaglen were comparing their respective talents as well as their physical appeal . . . "Listen, feller," McLaglen barked, "you get uglier and uglier every day" . . . "Yes," Lahr agreed, "and that's another thing you can't do." Col. Lindbergh: Paul Wendel, the lawyer whose hoax confession and kidnaping by Ellis Parker postponed the Hauptmann execution, is trying to raise some money for an exhibit at the World's Fair. He wants to call the exhibit "The Lindbergh-Hauptmann Aftermath" . . . The Parker trial, incidentally, scheduled in Brooklyn next week, will be postponed.

F. D. R.: That SEC trio—Chairman W. O. Douglas, who will go to the Supreme Court; Jerome Frank, who probably will inherit Douglas' job, and the extremely capable Dave Schenker, who is slated for a commissionership—all were discovered by Justice Ferdinand Pecora . . . B'way Assn.: The cloakroom concessions for the revived International Casino brought the new lessees $55,000.

BRENDA FRAZIER: A prominent glamour boy, who just arrived from Nassau, was very much embarrassed during the customs inspection. The officials discovered three jeweled cigarette cases among his possessions, each inscribed with the autograph of their true owners—ladies mentioned frequently in the social columns . . . Senator Pittman: Theodore Grannick, who has your backing for the Federal Communication Commission job, also has the backing of the New York legislators in Washington. His 15 years of experience in radio should get him the job . . . Darryl Zanuck: Your star, Binnie Barnes, left New York for Havana. Moss Hart, whose name has been linked with hers, sent her a farewell wire: "This can't be love because I feel so well."

POL. COM. VALENTINE: "The Phantom," who mystified the Long Island police with a series of robberies in wealthy homes, tried to feign deaf-and-dumbness when the police wanted to get him to talk . . . An old police trick fixed it . . . A lighted match was placed next to the Phantom's ear until it burned him—and he leaped from the chair . . . A few seconds later a detective standing in back of the prisoner struck a match. The sound made the "deaf mute" jump.

TRUMAN TALLEY: Your newsreels will have difficulty photographing sweepstakes winners this year. "Threee Smart Girls"—the name on one ticket drawn on a favorite—already have hired a theatrical manager . . . Leon & Eddie's: Jack White's 18 Club, across the street from you, will move next door to the Band Box on Easter Sunday. The name 18 Club will be retained . . .

TOMMY MANVILLE: Your former wife, Mrs. Jay Carlisle, and her husband are back to wind up their N. Y. affairs before settling permanently in Hollywood . . . Magazine Guild: Wilfred Funk's newest publication is ready. It's his third magazine and will be called "Your Health."

Racing Yarn Scores a Hit At the Earle

'King of the Turf' Packs Real 'Wallop;' Shirley Ross Scores

"KING OF THE TURF." United Artists-Edward Small picturization of an original screen play by George Bruce, with Adolphe Menjou, Roger Daniel, Dolores Costello, Walter Abel, Alan Dinehart, Harold Huber, George McKay, Lee M. Moore, Oscar O'Shea, Cliff Nazarro, George Chandler, Milburn Stone, William Bakewell, Eddie Chandler, Tom Hanlon, Charles McAvoy, Harry Semels, Donald Kerr, Barlowe Borland and Snowflake. Directed by Alfred E. Green. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

It takes nerve to win the title of hero—but it takes more than nerve to set yourself up as a scummy crook in the eyes of the person dearer to you than anything in the world—even if this viewpoint is best for him. That's the thesis and action pivot of "King of the Turf." It's told to a counterpoint of thundering hoofs, the wangling of touts and big-time bookies, the roar of the crowd as the winner comes down the stretch.

The drama, both on the track and off, is that of the "Come-From-Behinder." Red Gold, the wonder horse, hurtles out of the ruck, busts through a tight spot with rival jockeys laying their crops across his nose, pounds his way to the front on the outside—wins, going away. Adolphe Menjou, once the big shot of the turf as owner of the fambulous Blue Bolt, drops to the rank of a nameless, though mannered, bum, familiarly referred to as the "Rye Highball." Then he pulls out of it, climbs to the top of the heap again. But back of the winning races run by both Red Gold and Adolphe is a wisp of a jockey, "Goldie" Smith, played by Roger Daniel.

A New Juvenile Ace

This Roger Daniel boy should be labeled "looks like the right one" in any Hollywood form of odds. He's a fine looking youngster, a good actor, American as a boiled dinner, natural as a puppy. Yes sir, little Master Daniel is what the doctor ordered for Hollywood in the way of juveniles.

Coincidence is stretched like a rubber band to unwind the story of "King of the Turf." But life is like that, too—sometimes. Jim Mason (Adolphe Menjou) has always said, apropos of both horses and life, "Blood is all that counts. It's the greatest power in the world." So when a clear-eyed little stable boy who "hates a crook with a horse," takes a great shine to the down-and-out Adolphe (who's wearing spats because he has no socks), it's perhaps natural that he should turn out to be Adolphe's own son by a wrecked marriage. The heady music of hammering hoofs is in the boy's blood; he's run away from home to follow the thoroughbreds. So father and son, not knowing the relationship, become inseparable. Adolphe rises out of the gutter and trades his whisky bottle for a stop watch; acquires the man-killer, Red Gold, by a lucky fluke at an auction; builds up the waif, Goldie, into great rider. The story, though fantastic, is believable. Stranger things than that have happened at race tracks.

Can't Pull His Horse

Then the boy's mother (played rather adeptly by Dolores Costello), gets track of him, tells Adolphe of his parenthood, hitherto unknown, and persuades him to loosen the last link of affection by convincing Goldie that he'd sell out both the youngster and Red Gold to a gambling syndicate. Stricken, the boy agrees to the crooked race—but he can't go through with it. He tries to pull Red Gold, but at the last minute, he leans forward and whispers, "Go it, babe," and, "Come on, baby!" Melodrama? Sure, but it's great stuff.

There are a lot of good people in "King of the Turf." Alan Dinehart toasts his role of king-pin bookie to a turn. Ditto, but certainly, for Harold Huber, always one of the most delightful of low characters. Walter Abel gives his customary touch of fine sincerity to the part of Goldie's stepfather.

Shirley Ross a Hit

Shirley Ross, last seen in the completely ingratiating "Thanks For the Memory," proves as sweetly clever on the stage as on the screen. She gives (and we mean "gives") a melange of her screen hit songs, also the inescapable "Deep Purple."

Another vocal double-treat is contributed by Frank Hornaday, who climaxes with an enchanting version of "Dreamland." Too bad there evidently wasn't time for Hornaday encores. The audience wanted them.

Orchids (and the rare white ones) are rated by Helen Faye for her beautiful and vital violining of one of Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsodies. The Roxyettes' number with apparently empowered boots dancing miraculously should be credited among Harry Angers' many adroit miracles. MARY HARRIS.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 24. (I.N.S.)—News that Mary Pickford may return to the screen in a biography of Mary Baker Eddy, founder of the Christian Science faith and author of "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," is the most amazing story to come to this desk in months. My information comes from a member of the Christian Science Church, who waxed very enthusiastic over the idea of our Mary in such a picture, since it is well known "America's Sweetheart" is herself deeply interested in Christian Science.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Plans for production are much farther along than anyone realizes, though, naturally, the whole project depends upon the official approval of the Christian Science Church to both the screening of Mrs. Baker's life and Mary's portraying the role. Personally, I believe Mary would be excellent and that it is an ideal vehicle for her return to her acting career. Moreover, such a movie should make plenty of money.

Guess I'm getting suspicious in my old age for when I was told that an old diary was unearthed by the Warner research department during the filming of "Dodge City," I said in my most refined manner, "Oh, yeah?" But investigation proved it was no publicity build-up. One Capt. Stanley actually did keep a day-by-day record of his trip on horseback across the Santa Fe Trail in 1853, jottnig down notes on his exciting trek from Fort Smith, Ark., to San Diego. Presto chango, and it's converted into "Diary of the Santa Fe Trail," by Norman Reilly Raine. I could wax more enthusiastic if I was sure that Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Bruce Cabot, et al, would actually be starred in the captain's diary. But when in the Sam Hill will Errol have time?

Sam Goldwyn, who has been having his troubles finding a story to co-star Jon Hall, of the body beautiful, and Dorothy Lamour, of sarong fame, has made up his mind on "Canal Zone." Personally, I think Sam is wise to get the two stars of "Hurricane" away from the South Sea Island background because Old Mother Nature would have a hard time repeating that "big blow" for a climax, and Dorothy's sarong and Jon's physique aren't news any more. Wilson Collison, author of Jean Harlow's hit, "Red Dust," is already at work on the script. Later on the entire troupe will journey to Panama for authentic locales.

A few years ago the stage experimented with a two-character cast in "Jealousy," with Fay Bainter and John Halliday. Now Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has a similar idea and will produce "Two People," by Janie Hall, in which a boy, a girl and a pooch are the only members of the cast. The action takes place all in one day when the three go a-picknicking. Pencilled in are the names of Margaret Sullavan and Jimmy Stewart, with Sam Zimbalist as producer. Of course, it's one of those things set in the future, but it's an interesting idea for the movies. At least it is to me.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Ross Clark, Barbara Freitchie's estranged groom, consoling himself with Jane Truex at a night spot; Mary Brian and Reginald Gardiner having themselves some fun at another spot; the gayety waxed fast and furious when Ella Logan in one party and Cary Grant in another sang Scotch duets; Melvyn Douglas, now a member of the State Relief Board, if you please, in Sacramento on official business; Billy Selwyn and Ona Munson a happy pair of night clubbers; George Brent getting plenty of femme interest at a tavern; Eddie Judson and Rita Hayworth carried off a rhumba prize at a cafe; the Three Stooges sail June 21 for a six weeks of personal appearances in London and Dublin.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Long the Shavian public waited for picturization of some of the bearded wonder's magic words and with the pictorial advent of "Pygmalion" they may sigh thankfully that there was a skillful trio of adaptors at hand to work on the story.

With Leslie Howard as the phonetics professor, who picks a bedraggled flower girl from the gutters of Picadilly Circus and makes her a lady in word and eventually deed, there is nothing left for the leading lady to do but handle a very exacting role.

Wendy Hiller is the flower girl who comes to a forced blossoming under the stern tutelage of the speech doctor. That she attains a final nobility of soul, makes her creator recognize her as a human being and not a creation of stone is what makes George Bernard Shaw's wordage eagerly consumed by a literate populace today.

Distinguished by a cast which performs with sterling zest, and by photography which is exciting without being tricky, the whole play moves along with that occasional blessed rightness which is why people keep going to movies.

"Pygmalion" will not be a disappointment to you.

Pete Smith has a swift-moving clip of diving champions performing prodigious feats from intolerably high boards, with and without blindfolds. The newsreel has William O. Douglas, new Supreme Court appointee, Tony Galento and Jimmy Durante signing the former's contract to fight Joe Louis, and the funeral cortege of the late Japanese Ambassador. S. S.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., March 24.—Paul Muni is going romantic for a change. His make-up tests for young Beethoven are really handsome and romantic. Muni's been wanting to play that fiery composer for four years. And they've had the script on the shelf for that long. Although he'll deny he wants to play a romantic lover on the screen, don't believe him—and this will be it, we hope.

HOPPER

"Marcel's" is more like a club than a cafe. The other night I saw Jules Bache there on his way to Honolulu. Billy Wilkerson getting an earful from Louis Shurr, who knows more New York gossip than any man in town. Edgar Selwyn was dancing with his sister. The Gianninis were there. Our lovely "Chatterbox" Barbara Trippet. The David Hearsts who will be three any minute. Young Frank Freeman—what a nice boy. The Stanley Bergemans. And Joe Schenck, who moved right in on Kay Aldrich, the Red Book cover girl, and said, "Get dressed up in your prettiest and I'll take you to Darryl Zanuck's party and introduce you to all Hollywood society." Her escort quipped, "Then you'll appreciate the Mexican quarter."

You'll remember she was in "Vogues of 1938." And looks an awful lot like Deanna Durbin. Here's luck!

The Jack Warners lunched with President Roosevelt in the White House, spent a week in Palm Beach and will join the gang in Dodge City—coming home with them.

Sam Goldwyn used to invite the press over to his studio to see his pictures. Now he calls them in to see Jimmy Roosevelt.

Nick Grinde tired of being called Grin-dee, put a sign on the "Million Dollar Legs" set, saying his name rhymes with "rind." Yes, and Betty Grable's with "sable." Lucky girl!

Found Olivia de Havilland at Selznick's mumbling: "I can't afford a four-door Ford." No, she's not economizing, just practicing Southern talk.

Brian Donlevy today discovered that one of the autographs he signed while on location in Yuma, Ariz., was a three-year subscription to a chicken ranching magazine—and he doesn't even own a canary.

The Bing Crosby picture at Universal, "This Side of Heaven," is a wow with the hit song the same title as the picture. Should make him millions. It's Bing's best up to date and Joan Blondell is swell.

Is Twentieth-Century foaming about the gossip that Alice Faye is going hi-hat. I couldn't print what the others are doing!

Satevepost Story Bought by Studio

"It Could Happen to You," Charles Hoffman's Saturday Evening Post story, has been purchased by Twentieth Century-Fox and will be the first assignment of Associate Producer David Hempstead.

The story, a comedy with a dramatic climax, is scheduled to go into production in March. Allen Rivkin has been engaged to write the screen play.

"It Could Happen to You" sees a young businessman become innocently involved in a murder charge from which all avenues of escape appear closed.

Draws Quick Ones

Jeffrey Lynn, an excellent sketch artist, keeps in practice between scenes of "American Family" by making drawings of his fellow players.

Collegiate Coaching

George Brown, former college and All-American ice hockey star, is teaching the Dead End Kids the "sticks" at his Pan-Pacific Ice Rink for their roles in "Hell's Kitchen."

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 24.—There is no rush on the part of American Leaguers to join in the belief that Bill Werber will be a vast help to the Cincinnati Reds. American League opinion is that Werber is a better business man than he is a ball player.

POVICH

It is pretty significant that every American League club was willing to grant waivers on Werber for whom the Reds reputedly paid Connie Mack $25,000. Cleveland is in woeful need of infielders and so are the White Sox. The Red Sox, avowedly believing that they are pennant stuff this year, didn't make an offer for Werber despite the fact that their only third baseman is an untried rookie, Jim Tabor. And the cold facts are that Werber never hit over .300 in the big leagues more than once in his life.

But there is no disputing the Berwyn boy's ability to cash in on whatever limited talents he has. He started capitalizing on this disputed baseball ability of his when he was still in his 'teens after graduating from Tech High School. He wangled the New York Yankees into paying him a $5,000 bonus for signing and underwriting a four-year course of studies at Duke University.

The Yankees never did cash in on Werber. They never thought enough of him to give him a real trial and in midseason of 1933 he was traded to the Red Sox as extra booty in a four-player deal. In 1934 Werber flashed. He hit .321, stole 40 bases and apparently the Red Sox had something. But they were disappointed. Werber slumped to .255 in 1935 and never has re-established himself as much of a ball player.

Connie Mack Took a Chance

Connie Mack, who has made his share of screwy deals, in recent years, took a chance on Werber when he traded Pinky Higgins to the Red Sox for him in 1937 despite the fact that Higgins was an established .305 hitter and a better fielder than Berwyn Bill. Werber did a tolerable job for Mack in '36, hitting .292, and promptly held Mack up for a salary raise. He got the raise and then turned in a .259 season for Mack last year.

The old gentleman didn't feel any too kindly about that so his 1939 contract to Werber contained a $2,000 salary slash. Bill wouldn't accept it. He held out and declared he'd quit baseball and retire to his insurance business. It wasn't the usual threat of disgruntled ball players to quit the game and go into business. Werber does have a highly profitable insurance clientele in Washington. He is smart. He was in a position to hold out.

The chances are that he would have remained out of baseball, too, were it not for the fact that the Reds have worked up a pennant passion this year. The Cincinnati club was willing to gamble heavily and it wanted Werber. The Reds, after making the deal, found that they had to meet Werber's terms, however. Whether or not Werber got a part of th purchase price from Mack with a threat to quit the game, or whether he forced the Reds to boost his contract is unknown. But it is a safe guess that William lost no money on the deal.

A Couple of Very Lucky Guys

In baseball, especially in connection with saladies, some guys seem to have all the luck. Ossie Bluege, the greatest third baseman of his time, and a member of three pennant-winning teams never made more than $10,000 salary in any year. He happened to be with a club that doesn't pay fancy salaries. Werber, who is not to be mentioned in the same inhalation with Bluege as a ball player, will draw at least $10,000 for this year's play.

A pair of lucky guys this season are Al Simmons and Zeke Bonura. Both of them were in line for justified salary cuts with the Nats on the strength of their 1938 performances. They were vastly overpaid for what they accomplished, an dcould expect nothing but a revision downward in their contracts. But baseball fortunes took care of them. Simmons was traded to the Bees and Bonura went to the Giants. When a player joins a new club, his salary is rarely cut. Club owners and managers do not want dissatisfied players on their hands, especially new players.

Take the Case of Tommy Henrich

The manner in which a young player can cash in on his talents if he is lucky is adequately expressed in the case of young Tommy Henrich. As a member of the Cleveland farm system, Henrich was earning only $3,500 a year. When Judge Landis uncovered irregularities by the Cleveland club and made Henrich a free agent, Henrich received a $20,000 bonus from the Yanks for signing a contract. In 1937 his salary with the Yanks was $7,500. Last year it was $9,000. This year it is $12,000. And Henrich has already cut in on two world series shares of approximately $8,000 each. Added up it shows that the fellow has pocketed about $60,000 for his first three years' work in the majors, with more series money due in October.

Joe DiMaggio got off to a nice start when the Yankees bought him from the Coast League in 1936. He held out for and received $7,700 for his first season's play. He made the Yankees come across with $15,000 in 1937, and he got himself a $25,000 contract last year. This season his figure is reported at $27,500. He can make that kind of money because he happens to be a swell ball player and because he happens to be with the Yankees. They must pay their ball players well because they must have pennant-winning clubs. The taxes on their vast real estate holdings and the tremendous overhead of the Yankee system can be kept up only by a pennant winner. And such as DiMaggio and Henrich mean pennants.

On the Line

With Considine

New York, March 24.—Jimmy Hines, who once threatened to corner the stock in the New York Giants, and who indirectly still owns close to $100,000 worth of the team, will miss his first opening game in many years on April 18, unless his attorneys in the meantime can spring him out of jail on bail.

CONSIDINE

If not, the friend of John J. McGraw will be in a Sing Sing cell when Carl Hubbell, one of his favorite latter-day baseball heroes, cranks up the first pitch against the Dodgers. It will be hard for him, if this is true.

Hines was a Giant fan from the time McGraw came up from Baltimore with his scrappy Oriole team. He came to know the manager as the years rolled on, and in time—by one means and another—he began to have an income that made it possible for him to buy into the team.

Fundamentally his interest was financial, though he was once of a mind to corner the stock and put McGraw in as president. In July of 1930, Hines got a tip that the Giants were going to declare a dividend of $25 a share on their stock, and that he could purchase 2,575 shares at $185 a copy. He put up $15,500, as his share of the option money produced by the syndicate he formed, and borrowed $30,000 more from Max Steuer, the internationally known criminal lawyer, who eventually testified against him in the "numbers" trial.

Only Needed $102,559

The option had to be taken up in November of 1930 and Hines needed $102,559.59 more to consummate the purchase. Steuer came through once again, and took a big block of the stock as collateral. A year later Steuer turned 400 shares of the stock over to Mrs. Hines and later, at Hines' request that he needed the stock to protect his other investments, 450 more shares were turned over. Their value today is something around $100,000, but it is patent that Hines himself has received no income from the stock, because a judgment of a little more than $300 was recently returned against him for back rent.

Hines' interest in the Giants waned a little when Terry succeeded McGraw, but he still went to ball games, particularly the opener and the World Series. He at no time managed to control the stock in the team. The family of Chubby Horace Stoneham now owns 51 per cent of the stock, and thus the controlling interest.

Hines was the picture of an old-time sportsman—with a little Currier and Ives tossed in there somewhere. He was a regular at the big and little fights, and the publicity departments of Tex Rickard and Mike Jacobs always mentioned him high up among the list of distinguished patrons. He had been a pretty good rough and tumble fighter in his youth, because often he would have to point out the beauties of Jeffersonian democracy with a sock to an oppenent's jaw. And he retained a lively interest in nose-busting. Dempsey was his favorite.

Worked for Rockingham Park

But his true love was horse-racing, and by a curious twist of fate it helped bring him to his downfall. Hines was the New York representative of the New Hampshire breeders, operators of Rockingham Park. He had an extensive acquaintanceship with prominent thoroughbred owners, and it was part of his pob to convince them to race their nags at the New England track when it was new and lusty and yearning for distinction.

The track paid Hines $3,300 in 1931 and $2,400 in 1932 and 1933. In 1934 they jumped him to $6,300 and in 1935 to $6,550. Hines did them a lot of good.

Hines was a big horse better. Nobody knows just how big. He used several New York bookmakers, and one of them—Johnny Ferrone—eventually turned up in court during the "numbers" trial to put the finger on him.

Hines was a pretty good golfer, with a lambusting drive off every tee. Jimmy was playing golf the day Dixie Davis, who eventually squealed on him, brought James D. C. Murray, famed New York lawyer, out to the course to tell Hines he (Murray) thought about the appointment of a young man named Tom Dewey as a special rackets prosecutor.

Murray looked at Hines who was practicing his swing, and said, "Jimmy, that fellow is merciless, relentless and a damned good lawyer."

Hines took another swing and said, "We'll see about that."

It was then that Davis uttered his now poignantly phophetic line. "He'll destroy us all," he cried.

Undefeated Record Stays Unblemished

Mount Rainier Lassies Take Early Lead but Falter, 32-20; Miss Miller Star of Game

The great Rockville Girls A. A. basketball sextet kept intact its undefeated record since 1937 and at the same time advanced into the finals of the women's unlimited division of The Post-A. A. U. basketball tournament last night by winning a hard-fought victory over Mount Rainier, 32-20, before a large crowd at Eastern.

But it was not without a bitter struggle that the Montgomery County team shalked up what is reported to be its fifty-fourth straight triumph, for the younger spirited Mount Rainier lassies made a close game of it for three quarters during which not more than five points ever separated the foes.

Leads Favored Foe

At one time Mount Rainier led its heavily-favored opponents, 7-4, but couldn't hold the pace and was behind 14-9 at half time. In the end it was the sharpshooting of Rockville's three young matron forwards which smashed down Mount Rainier's defense and carried their team to a fairly decisive conquest.

Mrs. Margaret Lanier, Mrs. Marguerite Howard and Mrs. Audrey Nusbaum divided 30 of the winners' points between them, 5, 13 and 12, respectively. The other Rockville basket was scored by Miss J. Smith.

The big star of the game, however, was not on the winning side. Virginia Miller, Mount Rainier's lightning-fast and accurate-shooting forward, completely stole the spotlight from her more publicized rivals by dumping in seven field goals and three throws for high scoring honors and by playing the outstanding floor game.

First Forfeit

Rockville, the defending champion, will seek its third straight tournament title when it meets the winner of the Sherwood-Hyattsville semifinal game next week.

The first forfeit, precipitated by ineligibility, in the tournament resulted when Al's Billiard Parlor was given the customary 2-0 decision over Regal Neon. The latter team used a player under a fictitious name in its last start.

Eckington Bakery Reaches Semifinals

Eckington Bakery advanced into the semifinal round of the 135-pound division with an easy 25-12 victory over Roosevelt Boys Club.

Packed by Miller and O'Neil, with 6 and 5 points, respectively, the strong Bakery team was never pressed in doubling the score on its foe after taking a 14-4 halftime lead. Brant and Redinger were high for the losers with 5 and 4 points.

St. John's U. Wins Practice Lacrosse

Annapolis, March 24.—The lacrosse team of St. John's University started its last season here today with a practice game victory over Lehigh, 19-5. Medford and Buck were the outstanding attack players of the Johnnies, and Heffenriffer paced the losing effort of Lehigh.

Though winner of the National Intercollegiate lacrosse championship for three years, this is the final season the game will be played at St. John's. An extramural sports have been abandoned by school leaders.

Dot Kirby Victor In Augusta Golf

Augusta, Ga., March 24 (AP).—Nineteen-year-old Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, turned back the veteran Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, 3 and 2, in the final match of the Augusta Women's Golf Tournament today.

Playing out the match after clinching the title at the short sixteenth, Miss Kirby turned in rounds of 38-34—72, four under women's par, to establish a new competitive record for the Forest Hills course.

Smithsonian Takes Puppy Stake Honors

With ideal weather prevailing, the puppy stakes of the 17th annual Spring Trials of the National Capital Field Trial Club got off to a fast start yesterday morning over the broad expanse that is Walter Johnson's Germantown, Md., farm.

In spite of a derath of entries in the class, the action was exhaustingly fast for young dogs. Robert Ralph's setter, Smithsonian, setting a pace that was unbeatable although William J. Harper's Betsy of Caradoc, a white and black setter, finished a close second.

A. K. Frank's Archives, a liver and white pointer, took the show place.

Oddly Frank and J. Blackwell, who runs Smithsonian, are mates in a twelfth precinct radio scout car.

Carolina Frank, owned by W. B. Lawson and handled by A. L. Lewis, won the dogs of all ages, winners or non-winners class, with R. D. Roane's Wayside Bob second, and Frank Vermillion's Frank of Woodridge third.

Entries for the Shooting Dog Stakes which were to get underway at 8 o'clock this morning, are:

(1) Pete, Valaint Sportsman; (2) Just Jim, Woodbridge Jeff; (3) Harts Spot, Woodridge Mutt; (4) Frank of Woodbridge, McCafferty's Dream; (5) Frank's Hawks Lady, Pohicks Fancy; (6) Umpuco Buddy B., King's Spot; (7) Rappahannock, Mohawks Blue Duke; (8) Conner's Dash, Mertels Mack; (9) Bonnie Lou, Nancy Bird; (10) Birds Rex Six, Sally Lou; (11) Perfection, Burrows Whalebone; (12) Broadway Bill, Psalephins Jack; (13) Major Hankin, Rex; (14) Glonas Jake.

Tony Galento Gets O. K. for Title Bout

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 24 (AP).—The New York State Athletic Commission today put its stamp of approval on Two-Ton Tony Galento's physical condition, thereby removing the last obstacle in the way of holding his fight with Joe Louis for the heavyweight championship in Yankee Stadium, New York.

The five physicians who examined the roly-poly puncher last Tuesday at the commission's request found him in "satisfactory physical condition," Gen. John J. Phelan, the commission chairman reported. The examination had been ordered to determine whether either an attack of pneumonia last summer or the usual Galento diet of beer and spaghetti had left the barrel-shaped battler in anything but "the pink."

Although the physician's report just about killed the hopes of Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and several other places for holding the fight, which promises to attract a million-dollar gate, a new development made it appear today that the original June 28 date may have to be changed to accommodate Promoter Mike Jacobs' rapidly growing summer boxing program.

Mike has another heavyweight attraction, between Lou Nova and Max Baer to decide a September opponent for Louis, scheduled for May 25 in Madison Square Garden's Long Island City Bowl. Nova's manager, Ray Carlin, arrived from California this week, pointed out his contract calls for the bout to be staged in Yankee Stadium, and definitely objected to the Garden Bowl because the fight "might not make any money there."

Should Carlin's insistence on the stadium be upheld, Mike would have to set the Nova-Baer fight back to June 1, since the Yankees will be using their ball park on May 25. And if that fight is held up Mike would also have to delay the Galento-Louis bout accordingly to give his publicity staff enough time for the last-month "buildup."

Kennedys Solve 'Nutrition' Plan With 'Sweep' Bets

By the Associated Press.

London, March 24.—United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy revealed to the London Press Club tonight how Britain's Grand National horse race helps provide "nutrition" for his family of nine children.

KENNEDY

"We have a system," Kennedy said, explaining that last year, his first in London, "we bet on an American horse, because we are Americans first."

An American horse, Battleship, owned by Mrs. Marion Scott, won the 1938 event.

"The second year we bet on an Irish horse, because we are Irish-Americans," Kennedy went on.

Sir Alexander Maguire's Irish-bred Workman accommodated the Kennedys and came home the winner at Aintree today.

260,000 Watch Workman Win Aintree 'Chase

By Scotty Reston.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Aintree, Eng., March 24.—Sir Alexander Maguire's Irish-bred Workman, a leaping streak of green and glittering silver, sprang from behind in Aintree's final mile today to win the 101st Grand National before royalty and commoners numbering 260,000.

Cornered in the pack starting the final lap of the four and one-half miles, maneuvered free by his grinning, toothless little Irish jockey, Workman made his bid just where he faltered a year ago, bounded ahead two fences from home and beat Capt. L. Scott Brigg's MacMoffat by three lengths.

Kilstar, Dorothy Paget's 8 to 1 favorite, was third, 15 lengths back. When Kilstar blundered four fences from home the crowd settled down for a duel between the 100 to 8 second choice, Workman, and the 25 to 1 shot, MacMoffat.

Jockeys Use Whips

Taking the lead together halfway down the far side of the course, MacMoffat and Workman took three fences like a pair of show jumpers. Two fences from home the brawny Irish nine-year-old got his head in front and rounding the final bend both jockeys pulled their whips.

From the stands, where 200,000 of the crowd were massed along a 600-yard stretch for the finish, Workman and MacMoffat were just two spots of color—little Tim Hyde in his emerald shirt on Workman and A. Alder in primrose blouse on MacMoffat. Workman gained slightly on that final jump and then little Tim lashed out with his whip.

Workman, said the critics all year,

Knocks Two Strokes Off Old Mark at Greensboro; Manero Second With a 69

By the Associated Press.

Greensboro, N. C., March 24.—While the paying customers trailed the heels of the fellows who have been cashing all the big checks, W. Lawson Little, of San Francisco, the former amateur king pin, blazed the way today in a record-shattering score in the $5,000 Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

Little, 27 years old and one of the newcomers to professional ranks, nonchalantly batted the ball around the Sedgefield course for a sensational 65, five under par and a new record for the battle scene, and at the end of the day's firing the curly-haired shartshooter was four strokes in front of the field.

Slamming drives far down the fairway middles and pitching with fine precision to all greens, Little added a neat putting touch to his game to crack the previous record of 67 held by Lighthorse Harry Cooper, of Chicago, and Denny Shute, of Coral Gables, Fla.

Little, whose 65 was the second-best round he has had since he turned professional more than two years ago, had as his nearest competitor after the first round of the 72-hole event a former local club professional—Tony Manero, now of Peabody, Mass., and former national open champion. Manero clicked off an opening round of 69, one under par.

Eight players congregated at 70. A half dozen were veteran pros, headed by Slammin' Sammy Snead, of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and Ralph Guldahl, of Madison, N. J., the national champion. Others were Jack Toomer, a young Reidsville (N. C.) professional, Clayton Heafner, of Greensboro; Horton Smith, of Oak Park, Ill.; Jimmy Hines, of Lakesville, L. I.; Cooper and Harold (Jug) McSpaden, of Winchester, Mass. Guldahl, Smith, Toomer and Cooper had nines of 6-34. Snead and McSpaden scored 35-35, Heafner 37-33.

The second 18 will be played tomorrow, and Sunday will bring the 36-hole finale.

Middleburg's Races Draw Strong Fields

Point-to-Point Events Listed Today Over Course at Crouch's

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Middleburg, Va., March 24.—Twenty-two of the speediest hunters in northern Virginia fox hunting country are awaiting post time tomorrow for the annual point-to-point races of the Middleburg Hunt. These races will be staged on the Crouth brothers' farm situated about 1½ miles from Aldie. The flagged course is about 5 miles long and the start and finish of the races are at the same point. The course is so laid out that with field glasses spectators may be able to see every jump along the way.

The firs tevent, the lightweight class, will be called at 1 o'clock and 11 entries have been recorded in this class. The middleweight class has 5 entries and the heavyweight division records 6 entries. The first three horses in each class will compete for the Middleburg Bowl, which is awarded the most suitable hunter entered in the races tomorrow. Mrs. John Hay Whitney now holds possession of the bowl. Sh ehas one entry, Loro, a lightweight bay gelding, to defend her claim to the trophy this year.

The middleweight class will feature Mary Barry, belonging to Mrs. Crompton Smith, who has already held the trophy one year. Gerald B. Webb's Easy Mark is entered in the heavyweight class, and this fine chestnut gelding has won honors in point-to-point races this season at the Paul Mellon estate and at Warrenton.

Weather conditions point to a fine day and a large crowd is expected from Washington Maryland and the fox hunting country of Virginia.

Reinartz Elected W.-L. Cage Pilot

Lexington, Va., March 24 (AP).—Leo Reinartz, of Middletown, Ohio, was elected tonight captain of the Washington and Lee University basketball team for the 1939-1940 season.

Reinartz, star guard for the Generals during the past two years, served this year as secretary-treasurer of the atheletic council.

He also is a member of the freshman assimilation committee, Omicron, Delta Kappa, honorary fraternity; the Cotillion Club, Pi Alpha Nu, and is president of the Washington and Lee chapter of Delta Tau Delta Fraternity.

He was captain of the freshman basketball tea min 1936-1937.

Handiboy, Paying $21.10, Takes Feature at Tropical Park

Sassy Lady Takes Place From Sirasia

Winner Beats Field By Three Lengths; Favorite Players Experience Bad Day

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 24.—Favorite players in the crowd here today were wishing that they had started the trek northward before the running of today's program. When Merry Gesture barely managed to finish fourth in the Naples Handicap, 6 furlong feature for 3-year-olds, it marked the downfall of 5 consecutive choices.

The River Divide Farm's Handiboy, recently fifth in a race won by Merry Gesture, easily won the headliner with three lengths to spare. The colt was a $21.10-for-$2 shot and whirled the distance in 1:11 3-5. Snow White Stable's Sassy Lady headed W. C. Stroube's Sirasia for the place, while Merry Gesture, a 7-to-5 proposition, lost the show by 3 lengths.

It was anybody's race from the time the field got off to a good start to the final furlong, when the improved, Handiboy confounded the figure experts by bounding away from his opposition, whearas he had faltered in his last outing. The fast but faint hearted Royal Taste made the early runnin by daylight, with Sassy Lady, Merry Gesture and Handiboy following as named.

Entering the stretch, the leaders were bunched, with Merry Gesture on the outside. Handiboy then pulled away under Euclid Le Blanc. Sassy Lady held on gamely to the end to beat out the slow-starting Sirasia, one better suited by a distance of ground. Merry Gesture, Modern Age and Royal Taste were lapped for fourth money.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MOSS GAL, $10.10, $3.50, $4.00; LIPTON, $4.70, $3.90; COMBATANT, $10.90.

MOSS GAL, going forwardly on the outside in the early running, closed with determination under punishment through the stretch and wore LIPTON down in the last strides. LIPTON, going in his best form, displayed the most speed and saved ground turning into the stretch, but was unable to withstand the winner's challenge. COMBATANT worked his way up gradually between the leaders in the final half mile and disposed of BLACK BUDDY in the stretch run. BLACK BUDDY, hard ridden and prominent early, came wide entering the stretch and faltered in the final drive.

SECOND RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, maidens. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:34. Off 2:33. Winner, R. B. Lovett's dk. b. f. (3), by Jacopo—Cluster. Trained by H. O. Simmons. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48, 1:13 1-5, 1:41 1-5, 1:46.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JACOPOBELLE, $13.00, $6.90, $4.30; PEACHYPIE, $8.40, $3.80; NANAHCUB, $2.50.

JACOPOBELLE, away forwardly, was reserved off the pace until the stretch run, moved up with determination when placed to pressure and drew out in the stretch run. PEACHYPIE, a keen factor, raced SWING IT and NANAHCUB into defeat in the early stages, assumed a short lead entering the stretch, but faltered in the final drive. NANAHCUB, quickest to get going, was rated in front while saving ground early, but weakened in the last furlong, yet was easily best of the others. SWING IT went forwardly for six furlongs and then retired.

Daily Double, Moss Gal and Jacopobelle, Paid $176.70.

THIRD RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, maidens. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:05. Off 3:04½. Winner, H. McLeod's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STEPACOLA, $19.60, $7.80, $5.20; VENEER, $18.10, $10.10; BROWN LIGHT, $26.70.

STEPACOLA, well up in the early stages, bettered her position on the inside on the stretch turn, swung around the leader coming into the stretch and outlasted VENEER in the final drive. VENEER worked her way forwardly while securing clear passage on the inside, made a game effort when the final issue came, but hung in the last sixteenth mile. BROWN LIGHT, vigorously ridden the entire trip, came to the outside in the last furlong, but could not get up. TOWN LEAGUE raced COUNTRY JIM into submission in the opening half mile and opened up a good lead rounding the turn, but weakened badly in the stretch run.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 3:33. Off 3:37. Winner, A. J. Halliwell's br. m. (6), by Frisaius—Summer Moon. Trained by E. Dubble. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:22 4-5, 0:46, 1:11 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPRING MOON, $22.90, $10.20, $5.60; SWEEPING FLAME, $5.90, $3.90; SPITTENIMAGE, $3.60.

SPRING MOON, showing keen speed, set a fast early pace while being steadied in front, maintained his lead under brisk pressure when challenged. SWEEPING FLAME, under the inside rail all the way, closed courageously, but could not overhaul the winner. SPITTENIMAGE, on the outside and prominent the entire trip, faltered in the final drive. LADY SARA saved ground all the way and had no excuses. TUTTICURIO, sore going to the post, breezed briskly before the race, but was outrun from the start.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Naples Handicap. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:03. Off 4:04. Winner, River Divide Farm's ch. c. (3), by General Lee—Nutting. Trained by R. T. Shepp. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 0:22 3-5, 0:45 4-5, 1:11 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HANDIBOY, $21.10, $9.70, $4.80; SASSY LADY, $4.10, $3.10; SIRASIA, $4.20.

HANDIBOY, away well, was reserved back of the leaders until well around the turn, moved up with determination while saving ground, shook off the leaders at the furlong pole, then drifted out through the stretch, but won decisively. SASSY LADY, on the inside of ROYAL TASTE in the opening quarter mile, was eased back, then moved up gamely on the outside and was carried out on the stretch turn, but continued gamely to outlast SIRASIA. The latter, outrun the first half mile, rallied steadily while saving ground, but could not reach the leaders. MERRY GESTURE, lightly restrained early, moved up on the extreme outside midway around the turn, was carried out and faltered badly in the last furlong. ROYAL TASTE displayed high speed, but bore out, as usual, on the stretch run. MODERN AGE showed an improved effort.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:31. Off 4:33½. Winner, Mrs. M. R. Lewis' b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NOTICE ME, $22.10, $10.50, $6.50; JANE VITO, $11.40, $6.30; FREE CHILD, $4.20.

NOTICE ME, a trailer in the first quarter mile, moved into contention rapidly while saving considerable ground, disposed of the leader turning into the stretch and won as his rider pleased. JANE VITO, vigorously ridden, took command leaving the backstretch, but raced well off the inner rail, lost ground entirely to outlast FREE CHILD. The latter, away tardily, moved up steadily on the extreme outside, lost ground entering the stretch, but closed well and held the others safe. CUCKOO could never get up. BRAIN TRUST outbroke the field, but was the victim of a bad ride.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:01. Off 5:03. Winner, Mrs. H. O. Simmons' b. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SOMALI, $9.50, $5.40, $3.80; ODDESA FRANK, $4.60, $3.70; SEPTIME, $4.10.

SOMALI, going in his best form, followed the leaders under light restraint on the outside until straightened into the stretch, closed with determination when called upon and wore ODDESA FRANK down in the final strides. ODDESA FRANK, prominent throughout, assumed command rounding the lower turn and saved ground into the stretch, but faltered in the final drive. SEPTIME, in hand at the post, broke into the air and off stride, went to the leaders with a rush rounding the first turn and in near pursuit of the pace and continued courageously in the final drive. FIRST ENTRY, stoutly restrained the first half mile, moved up on the extreme outside leaving the backstretch, but flattened out badly in the stretch run.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:32. Off 5:34. Winner, H. Howard's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—EBLIS, $13.10, $9.20, $7.30; MYRON, $8.10, $5.40; BOSONIA, $5.70.

EBLIS, showing good speed, raced DALAMAC into defeat in the early stages and drew out into a commanding lead rounding the lower turn, but had to be ridden out briskly through the stretch to maintain his lead. MYRON, slow to get going, bettered his position on the inside until leaving the backstretch, was taken to the outside and closed with a belated rush. BOSONIA gradually bettered her position along the inner rail the entire trip and held the remainder safe.

Workman Clears Last Hurdle in Winning Grand National Race

Leonard Slated to Hurl Opening Game for Nats

Harris Likes Performance Of Knuckler

Kelley, Krakauskas Being Considered But Dutch Appears Best Opening Bet

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 24.—At 3 p. m. on the afternoon of April 17, after F. D. Roosevelt makes his first and last pitch of the season, a Washington hurler will take the mound against the New York Yankees and his name is very apt to be Emil Leonard.

Leastwise that's what Buck Harris is thinking as he works daily to fashion some kind of a pitching staff for the Washington Club here in spring training. He was talking about Leonard today.

"That's the fellow who may be out there for us on opening day," Harris was saying. "From here, he looks like our best choice. He went well against the Yankees every time he faced them last season, and this spring he seems to have his knckler in working order again.

Three Considered

"I'll probably pick my opening-game pitcher from three men. Joe Krakauskas, Harry Kelley and Leonard all seem to rate the job. Perhaps, though, I won't feel like tossing Krakaukas into that kind of a spot in his firs tstart. After all, he's still a rookie. Kelley is reliable when he's in shape. I'll have to wait on him. But Leonard ought to be ready."

The battle for pitching jobs on the Washington club is still in a furious stage, but with Harris' revelation that he counts on carrying 11 hurlers, 6 rookies appear to be fighting for two jobs. Leonard, Appleton, Weaver, DeShong, Kelley, Krakauskas and Chase are considered regulars and Masterson and Ortiz will be carried with the club. The two vacant berths are being battled for by Rene Monteagudo, Alex Alexandra, Joe Haynes and Arnold Anderson. The other rookie pitchers are already counted out.

Monteagudo Goes Today

Monteagudo, who has been impressive in his one appearance, tomorrow will get another chance to make a bid for a job. The little left-hander will pitch against the Milwaukee Brewers at Ocola. He will divide the Washington pitching with Joe Krakauskas, who will be making his first appearance in an exhibition game.

The veteran pitchers, who have been overshadowed in the Nats camp by the highly publicized doings of the rookies, came in for a bit of attention today when all of them took the mound for batting practice.

The most impressive performance was given by Pete Appleton, who was displaying a baffling curve ball, plus his speed. He was merely toying with the hitters when he wanted to cut loose. "If that guy would only pitch that way for me this season," remarked Harris wistfully.

110 'Y' Athletes Enter Inter-State Meet

One hundred and ten athletes left here yesterday to take part in the fourth annual Inter-State All-Sports Day of the Y. M. C. A. in Wilington, Del., today.

Athletes from Delaware and Maryland also will compete in the various events which begin this afternoon. Among the District basketball teams, junior and senior entrants are junior and senior swimming squads, junior tumbling team, and senior fencing, gymnastic handball, squash and volley ball

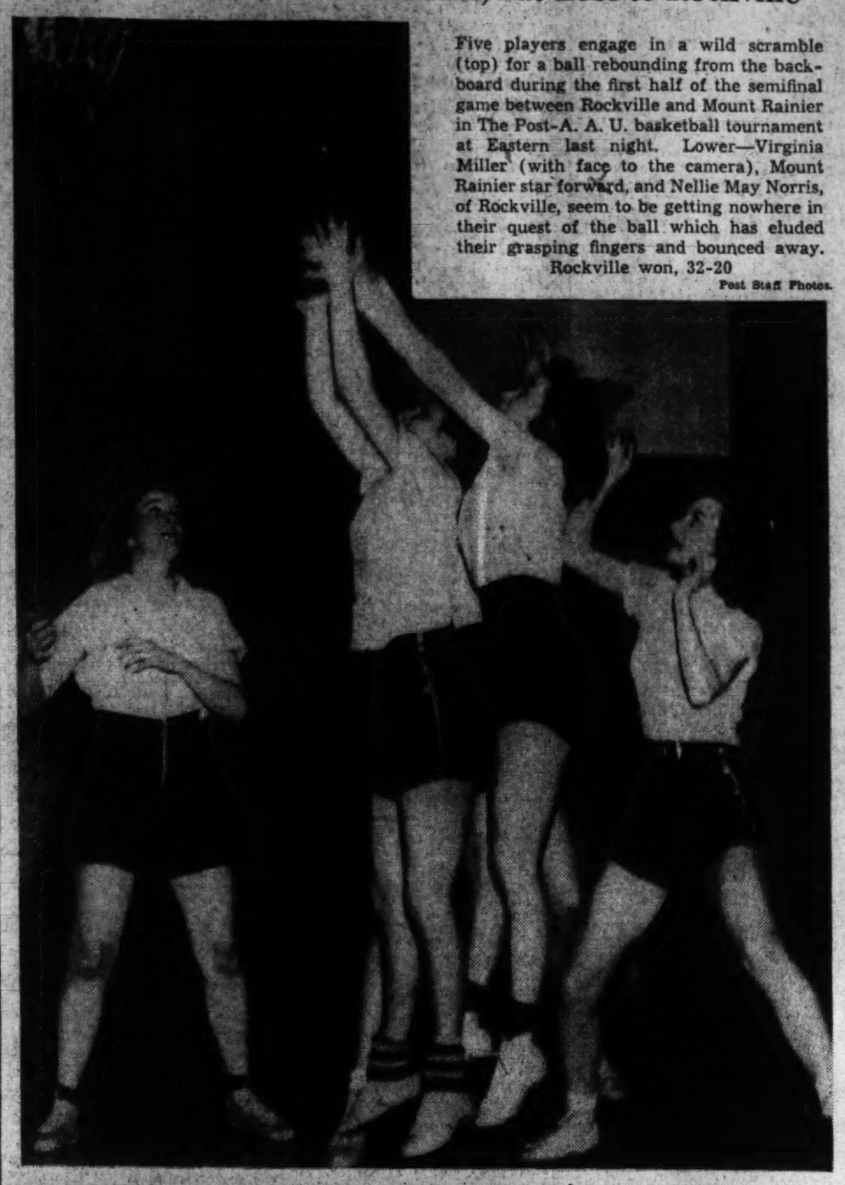
Mount Rainier Girls Are Game, but Lose to Rockville



Five players engage in a wild scramble (top) for a ball rebounding from the backboard during the first half of the semifinal game between Rockville and Mount Rainier in The Post-A. A. U. basketball tournament at Eastern last night. Lower—Virginia Miller (with face to the camera), Mount Rainier star forward, and Nellie May Norris, of Rockville, seem to be getting nowhere in their quest of the ball which has eluded their grasping fingers and bounced away. Rockville won, 32-20

J. C. C. Faces Bolling Field In A. A. U. Tourney Tonight

Karp and Zwisle in Scoring Clash; Eleven Other Games in Post Event

With a semifinal berth at stake, Jewish Community Center and Bolling Field clash tonight in the feature of a week-end program that will bring 12 games to the new Eastern High gymnasium. Scheduled for 9 p. m., the J. C. C. and Aviator fives promise a thrilling battle before one or the other passes out of the Post-District A. A. U. championship. Victory will put one of this clubs within two games of the coveted title and The Washington Post Trophy emblematic of the championship.

The battle will bring a clash of two of the city's highest scorers. It will be Sid Karp, leading scorer of the tournament in the blue and white of J. C. C. C., against Joe Zwisle, who set the pace for the pointmakers in the fast U. S. Government League. It was in the inability of the two Y. M. C. A. teams to stop Karp which put J. C. C. into the quarter finals.

Karp Has 57 Points

Karp, former G. W. U. freshman, scored 57 points in these two games while his club was turning back the "Y" Blues, 45-22, and the "Y" Reds, 48-22. Coached by Everett Russell, former Tech High and semipro ace, J. C. C. has shown plenty of punch. Besides Karp, the club has Silverstein, Genderson, Feldman and Schainerman groomed for tonight's struggle.

Bolling Field survived one of the hardest battles of the tournament to reach the quarter finals. After brushing off the Eckington A. C., the Aviators met team of court Tartars in the Police Boys Club and came through with flying colors in a 44-36 contest. While Zwisle is a scoring threat at all stages, the Bolling Field club stresses team play.

Jewish Community Center fans will have another reason to root tonight. The J. C. C. 145-pounders, also directed by Coach Russell, meet St. Martin's in a quarter-final of their division. St. Martin's, one of the favorites in this class, has walked over a pair of opponents, beating the Police Boys Club and the Takoma Junior Firemen. J. C. C. drew a bye in the first round and then trounced Delta Phi Sigma in the second round.

C. U. Fights Tonight Raise Tourney Fund

42 Undergrads War In Bouts Featuring 'Marvel' and Fat Boys

With a super-dreadnaught bout and a "masked marvel" featuring the card, the Brookland "fight mob," a corps of Catholic University undergraduate pillow-pushers, swings into action tonight in a fund-raising benefit for the school's delegates to the intercollegiate tournament next week.

Forty-two gladiators embracing studious young men of all sizes from frail 129-pounders to corpulent 230-pounders, embryonic engineers, scientists, barristers and medicos will do their bit for the cause. And while they are swinging they'll simultaneously settle the intramural championships for the year.

A modest tariff of 25 cents for general admission, and 40 cents for reserved seats, will be charged. Every cent collected will be used to defray the expenses of Jay Turner, Fred Stant, and Joe Bunsa at the intercollegiates, scheduled at Madison, Wis.

The super-dreadnaught class involves a tongue-twister by the name of Ksycewski, and a lad named Nemic. No accurate weight was obtained on either, but it was estimated that their combined tonnage totals well over 500 pounds. Ksycewski's style is said to be as puzzling as his handle, but Nemic has been faithfully practicing a corkscrew punch, and if he doesn't throw his elbow out of joint heaving the blow, is liable to kayo his fine, fat friend.

The "masked marvel" will battle a chap by the name of Morris in a 175-pound engagement, and Eddie LaFond, who made the arrangements, guarantees it is not the same masked gent decorating Joe Turner's wrestling shows. There will be at least two bouts in all but the 165-pound class, and action virtually is guaranteed.

Dodgers Shell F. Hutchinson, But Tigers Win

Detroit Rallies in Late Innings to Top Brooklyn, 6-4

Lakeland, Fla., March 24 (U.P.).—The Detroit Tigers overcame a wobbly start by their prize rookie, Freddy Hutchinson, today and came from behind to defeat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 6-4.

Hutchinson opened for the Tigers and after a scoreless first inning was shelled from the box during a three-run Dodger assault.

The Tigers scored two runs each in the fourth and fifth innings and then reached Ira Hutchinson for another pair to win out in the eighth. The score by innings:

Brooklyn (N.)	030	000	100	4	11	1
Detroit (A.)	000	220	02x	6	11	1

Tamulis, I. Hutchinson and Phelps, Hayworth; F. Hutchinson, Harris, Eisenstat and Tebbetts, York.

Cardinals Beat Red Sox, 2-0

Sarasota, Fla., March 24 (U.P.).—A pair of veterans, Bob Weiland and Curt Davis, allowed the Boston Red Sox only four hits as they pitched the St. Louis Cardinals to a 2-0 victory today.

The Cards collected only four hits off Jack Wilson and Joe Heving but sent two runs across in the third to win the game. The score by innings:

St. Louis (N.)	002	000	000	2	4	1
Boston (A.)	000	000	000	0	6	1

Weiland, Davis and Owens, Franks; Wilson, Heving and Desautels.

DiMaggio Hits 3d As Yanks Win, 8-3

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 24 (U.P.).—Joe DiMaggio hit his third homer in two games today as he led the New York Yankees to an 8-3 victory over the American Association Kansas City Blues today.

DiMaggio hit his homer in the sixth with one man on after a four-run burst in the fifth had practically sewed up the game for the Yanks. The score by innings:

Kansas City (A. A.)	000	100	110	3	6	1
New York (A.)	100	042	10x	8	11	4

Chicubs Wallop Pittsburgh, 8-4

San Francisco, Calif., March 24 (U.P.).—An 11-hit attack, topped off by a five-run spree in the third inning, brought the Chicago Cubs an 8-4 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates today. Bill Lee and Rookie Pitcher Ed Carnett divided the pitching and allowed only six hits while the Cubs collected 11. The score by innings:

Chicago (N.)	005	200	100	8	11	0
Pittsburgh (N.)	000	010	003	4	6	0

Lee, Garnett and Garbark; Baker, Bauers, Heintzelman and Mueller.

St. Louis Browns Win 8th Straight

McCallen, Tex., March 24 (U.P.).—The St. Louis Browns scored their eighth victory of the exhibition season today when they slammed out a 10-6 victory over Tulsa of the Texas league. The Browns found three pitchers for 12 hits but took advantage of four errors. The score by innings:

St. Louis (A.)	012	231	010	10	12	0
Tulsa (T. L.)	000	101	310	6	10	4

Pyle, Cox (5) and Harshany; Stein, Perry (5), Raymond (8) and Carter.

Okla. City Hands Phils 8th Beating

San Benito, Tex., March 24 (AP).—Overcoming an eight-run handicap, Oklahoma City, of the Texas League, put o na driving finish today to hand the Phillies their eighth straight defeat, 13 to 12. Shortstop Calvey scored the winning run in the ninth when Pitcher Claude Passeau made a wild pitch, his second of the inning. The score by innings:

Philadelphia (N.)	203	340	000	12	15	2
O'homa City (T. L.)	040	030	132	13	18	2

Sivess, Dickinson, Smith, Passeau and Clark; Marshall, Prince, McClendon and Dickey, Andrews.

White Sox Defeat Los Angeles, 6 to 4

Los Angeles, March 24 (AP).—A five-run splurge in the third inning gave the Chicago White Sox a 6-to-4 victory over the Los Angeles Club of the Pacific Coast League today.

The score by innings:

Chicago (A.)	105	000	000	6	10	0
Los Angeles (P. C.)	100	100	200	4	7	1

Dietrich, Dobernic (6) and Rensa, Tresh (6); Prim, Flores (7) and Collins.

Down In Front

With Richards Vidmer

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 24. A tremendously tall, heroically handsome young man took his place at the plate in batting practice, swung three times and sent three balls sailing over the left-field fence of Waterfront Park and bounding into the bay.

VIDMER

Then he came back to the dugout, wiping the perspiration from his face as he sat down on the steps.

"I could have used a couple of those last season," he grinned, for this was Henry Greenberg, the home-run king of the last campaign.

He hit 58 homers during the 1938 season, just two less than Babe Ruth's Royal record of 60. Just a couple more and he would have been on an equal basis with the Babe—at least in the record book. And like a golfer replaying his round while the solace of sleep evades him, Henry Greenberg confessed he played a lot of last season's games over and over again through the winter months as he remembered the homers he almost got.

It Might Have Been

"I hit a ball off pearson in the last game we played at the stadium," he recalled, "that traveled 430 feet, but it was just a little too far to the right. It hit the wall and bounced back. Joe Dimaggio grabbed it with one hand as it came off the wall and held that one to a double. Just a few feet more to the left and it would have been a home run. And then there was one I hit off Whitehill in Cleveland that barely caught the end of the wire screen where it goes all the way up. A little more to the left and it would have gone over the part where the wall is only half screened. And then in Detroit I hit one off Bob Feller that bounced off the top of the fencee, and instead of getting a homer I was thrown out trying to stretch it into a double. Then in Cicago—"

But suddenly he broke off with a laugh.

"There were a lot of others, though, that just barely dropped into the bleachers or over the walls. I might as well be honest. Maybe there were a lot of homers I just missed getting, but there were quite as many that I didn't deserve."

Ruth Rides Alone

"Do you think you'll ever come that close to Ruth's record again?" he was asked.

"No, of course not," Henry replied with a wide, contagious smile. "Why should I? Besides, suppose I did; suppose I hit 61 home runs. That wouldn't make me another Ruth. There's only one Babe. And whenever anybody talks about home runs they think of him. Just as they always think of Ty Cobb when they talk about base stealers. Why the Babe had characteristics I never could have. He even struck out with gusto. He made 'em like it. Huh, when I strike out nobody likes it—except the opposing pitcher."

The big fellow arose and took another turn in the batting cage. When he came back after three more solid wallops a young lad approached shyly and handed him a baseball and a pen with which to autograph it. Henry started scratching on the cover as he talked.

"If I ever hit 60 home runs, nobody would remember it anyway," he said in his pleasant, easy voice. "I would have to keep the clippings and get out my scrapbook in my old age to prove it. Probably then they would think it was a fake. They'll always remember Babe Ruth as the home-run hitter."

Another Ambition

He wats having trouble with the pen, for the ink wouldn't flow and he had been able to get only half of a letter on the ball.

"What I would rather do than anything else," he confessed, "is break the runs-batted-in record. A couple of years ago I came within one of Gehrig's 184, but I want to break Hack Wilson's all-time mark of a hundred and ninety-something. I'd like to drive in 200 runs some season. I think that is a clearer indication of a man's value to his team."

Randolph-Macon Beats Ohio State, 6-4

Ashland, Va., March 24 (AP).—Trailing by one run up until the sixth inning, Randolph-Macon's nine scored four runs to clinch its opening game of the season, 6 to 4, over Ohio State here today.

St. John's Wins, Gains Final At Newport

Johnnies, St. Peter's High Clash Today for Catholic Cage Title

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Newport, R. I., March 24.—St. John's High, surprising little cage team from Washington, D. C., provided a major thrill of the semi-final sessions in the Eastern States Catholic Prep basketball tournament tonight when it rudely ousted the host team, De La Salle High, after a nip-and tuck battle, 17 to 14.

Wit hthe victory, the claret-clad Johnnies advanced to the finals, in which they met St. Peters High, of New Brunswick, N. J., tomorrow. The latter came through its semi-final war with Power Memorial High, of New York, with a slim but satisfying 27-to-26 victory.

Except for exceedingly accurate score keeping, the St. John's game might have ended any way but the way it did. For the first two quarters, and throughout the greater part of the final half, never more than 2 points separated the teams. Most of the time it was a single point.

Each team seemed bent on limiting its foe to the least number of points, rather than running up its own score. Charley Batchelder, with a point from the foul line, opened the scoring and registered his only point of the game. But his more prolfic scoring mates, Joey Gallagher, Moe Mulvihill and Marty Hunt, kept St. John's in the game and managed for a point surplus at the end.

The first quarter score was 5-3 in favor of the defenders, but by the time intermission rolled around, St. John's had pared that lead to a mere 7-6. No sooner had the second half got under way than Frank Cady, husky forward, dropped a circus throw through the ring, but the score shifted hands numerous times before DeLaSalle emerged with an 11-10 advantage going into the final quarter.

Then began the usual late-game rush of the Washington contingent. Gallagher tied the count and gave the Cadets a 13-11 lead, his effort being enlarged upon by Hunt who added another two pointer to St. John's edge. Before the Crusaders tallied again, Mulvihill had closed out scoring with a sneak basket, putting St. John's ahead, 17-11. From then on, for about five minutes, it was a case of clinging to what it had for the eventual winner.

Gallagher was high pointman for the Johnnies with 5, his effort being matched by James, of DeLASalle.

Phils Have 99-Year Lease on N. L. Cellar

St. Louis, Brooklyn Or Boston May Land In Upper Bracket

(Following is the fourth and last of a series of articles on prospects of the major league baseball teams.)

By Harry Ferguson.
(United Press Sports Editor.)

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 24.—Three of the four clubs that finished in the second division of the National League last season have a chance to club out of the ruck this year. The hopeless Phillies, who apparently have taken a 99-year lease on last place, are in for another season of being kicked around.

Given some kind of a break, St. Louis, Brooklyn and Boston might dislodge one of the four teams that wound up in first division in 1938. The Cardinals, with plenty of power and some rookie pitchers who look good, seem to have the best chance.

Manager Ray Blades, of the Cardinals, has the nucleus of a ball team in Johnny Mize, slugging first baseman, and Joe Medwick, the powerhouse outfielder. He is going to have to do some patching in the middle of his infield and as a starter he is working Joe Orengo, a neat-looking player from Sacramento, at shortstop. At second base he apparently is going to choose between Jack Sturdy, who hit .299 for Rochester last season, and "Creepy" Crespi, a pretty good fielder but a weak hitter, who was up with the Cardinals for a brief time last season. Don Gutteridge will be on third and there is no worry about the outfield with Medwick, Terry

Medwick — Al Simmons

Cards Have Nucleus Of Great Ball Team; Wyatt Dodgers' Hope

Moore and Enos Slaughter on duty.

Brooklyn's chances to climb depend chiefly on an elderly rookie pitcher named Whit Wyatt and the always un certain arm of Van Lingle Mungo. Manager Leo Durocher needs pitching and if those two come through he will have it. He has Fred Fitzsimmons, Luke Hamlin, Wayne Lamaster, Forest Pressnell and Bill Posedel back from last season and he obtained Ira Hutchinson from the Boston Bees. The infield looks good with Dolf Camilli on first, either Pete Coscarart or Tony Lazzeri on second, Durocher at short and Cookie Lavagetto at third. Ernie Koy, Tuck Stainback and Gene Moor ewill make up th eoutfield. Blimp Phelps will do most of the catching.

Casey Stengel led the Bees into fifth place last season, and he has Doc Protho has a likely looking prospect in Third Baseman

Warneke — Fitzsimmons

Merrill May who comes up from Newark but otherwise the Phillies look like—well, the Phillies. It's pretty much the same crowd that finished in last place in 1938. a fight on his hands to try to keep them there this year. He has made three important additions to his team—he got Buddy Hassett, a first baseman who also can play the outfield, from Brooklyn; he obtained Eddie Miller, a good-looking shortstop prospect from Kansas City; and he acquired Jimmy Outlaw, an outfielder who batted .339 for Syracuse. He probably will use all of them in his first-string lineup.

The Brighter Side . . .

By Damon Runyon

One night a fellow called our old man a windbag.

Our old man said, "Yes," he guessed that was quite true.

RUNYON

He said every man who gave a lot of verbal gas was a windbag unless he made something out of it, like getting into Congress or writing a book, and then he became a statesman or a philosopher.

Our old man said the only difference between him and a lot of distinguished citizens of the world in the matter of windiness was that he had wasted his vocal breezes on desert air instead of wafting them into the ears of voters or readers.

He said if had had dopted the dostrum he might have achieved the reputation of being a tremendous thinker like a fellow he knew back in Kansas. Our old man said this fellow used to stand on street corners shooting off his mouth on every subject under the sun until everybody agreed that he was the biggest windbag in the State. He never worked if he could help it, so it was also agrred that he was a bum.

The fellow finally got into politics in a small way and from public platforms said identically the same things he had said on street corners but what has passed for wind presently became regarded by the voters as the greatest wisdom they had ever heard, though the fellow merely raised his voice slightly above his street corner tone.

He got elected to office and for years held the deepest respect of his constituency as a wise man, and when he died he was mourned by all, yet our old man said his fellow never once said anything different from what he had said in the days when he was considered a windbag and a bum. Our old man said said the fellow lived quite comfortably most of his life off the public treasury just by transferring his wind from street corners to the rostrum.

Our old man claimed that it was who you were, not what what you said, that represented the difference between a windbag and a wise man in this country, with some reference to where you said it. He once made something of a test of his theory right there in our old home town of Pueblo.

There was a wealthy merchant who often dropped into the Arkansas hall beer emporium where our old man hung out a great deal and this merchant liked to spout his ideas on public questions of all kinds and he had qupite re reputation as a thinker and always had an audience around him.

Our old man aserted that it was the fellow's money not his ideas that made people listen to him. Our old man said the merchant worth two cents, Mexican money, never had a thought that was One night our old man loaded himself up with wisdom from the works of thinkers like Thomas Paine, and Voltaire, and Rousseau and went to the Arkansas hall and started giving off quotations at one of the bar.

He got a little attention for a few minutes but when the merchant came in and took his stand at the other end of the bar and called for drinks for the house, all but one auditor deserted our old

Capital Transit Profit $17,084 For February

Net Compares With $7,592 Deficit for February a Year Ago

Capital Transit Co. reported yesterday to the Public Utilities Commission that its net income in February was $17,084, which compares with a deficit of $7,592 in February last year.

Operating revenues totaled $875,238, compared with $848,713 a year ago; operating expenses called for $625,304, against $630 856 last year; taxes took $67,978, in comparison with $68,888, and depreciation amounted to $105.474, against $101,108 in February 1938.

Deduction of these different expenses left a net operating income of $75,502, as compared with $47,861 in the like period in 1938. Gross made an excellent showing, standing at $76,689, against $50,720 a year ago. Interest on bonds and notes required $59,614, slightly above the $58,312 in 1938.

Revenue passengers increased in February, 12,605,731, comparing with 12,307,447 a year ago a gain of 2.5 per cent the report stated.

The Capital Transit Co. also included the earnings for the first two months of the year showing a net income of $29,845, against a deficit of $7,425 a year ago. This means an upturn so far this year of $37,260.

Gross income amounted to $153,740, against the much lower figure in 1938 of $111,442. Interest charges were $123,895, against $118,867, the report said.

Columbia Bank Dividend

Directors of the Columbia National Bank yesterday declared a dividend of $3 per share, payable as follows: $1.50 April 1 to stockholders of record March 25, and $1.50 July 1 to holders of record June 24.

Canadian Utility Registers Issue Of $62,500,000

By the Associated Press.

Gatineau Power Co., of Montreal, filed yesterday with the Securities Commission a registration statement covering the intended issue and sale of $62,500,000 of first mortgage 3¾ per cent bonds.

The bonds, designated series "A" and "B" are due April 1, 1969. The series "A" bonds are payable only in the United States and the series "B" bonds are payable only in Canada.

The registration statement said the company proposed to borrow $7,300,000 against promissory notes under a bank loan agreement, and would sell through certain Canadian underwriters 35,000 shares of 5½ per cent cumulative preferred stock, all of which would be offered outside the United States.

The proceeds to be received by the company from the sale of the bonds, the promissory notes and the preferred stock will be applied to the redemption, on June 1, 1939, of $68,014,500 of the company's first mortgage 5 per cent gold bonds, series due 1956, at $104 per $100 unit.

The First Boston Corporation, of New York City, will head the underwriting group.

Wheat Prices Rally at Close After Decline

Buying Orders Put in By Elevators, Mills And Exporters

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 24.—A drop of ¾ cent in wheat prices at the opening today attracted enough commercial purchasing to rally the market and wipe out the early losses. Wheat closed unchanged to ¾ lower compared with yesterday's finish, with May 67½-⅝ and July 67⅝-¾.

Although trading volume was not large, the opening dip encouraged commercial interest, with much of the buying credited to elevators, millers and exporters. Pit brokers expressed belief some of these orders may have been for lifting hedges on grain or flour sold for export under the subsidy plan.

No daily figures are available on the volume of export business but the recent rate of sales indicate approximately 1,200,000 bushels are being sold abroad weekly either as wheat or flour, while actual shipments have been running around 2,750,000 bushels weekly.

Chicago prices followed the action at Liverpool, where quotations closed ⅝-¾ lower, only temporarily. Winnipeg wheat, however, sagged ½-¾ and showed only fractional recovery at the close. Scattered rains in the Southwest and favorable crop reports from regions where wheat is growing together with the easing political situation in Europe were factors in the early selling.

Corn closed unchanged, regaining early losses of as much as ⅝ cent, and at the finish May was 47½-⅝ and July 49¼. Oats wound up unchanged to ⅛ off, rye ¼-⅜ down and lard 5 cents lower.

Stocks Continue Advance With Relaxing Of Critical Situation in Central Europe; Bonds Higher, Italian Issues a Feature

New York, March 14.—It was possible to describe the war news today in one and two column headlines instead of the customary four-to six-column streamers, and while this lull was on, the Administration dusted off the appeasement program for business and brought it forth again. Some weeks ago there was a man named Hopkins down in Washington who was appointed Secretary of Commerce and he was going to take all the grass out of the streets and find out what had happened to the car that used to be in the garage.

But about the time he got his bag packed business was sent from the ground floor, where it was beginning to feel at home, down to the basement. At least it went as far as the first landing. Threats of war and the week-end excursions of the German army to gather in a little more territory that Mr. Hitler thought should be granted the protection of the Reich, convinced business men that this was no time to expand operations. Steel operations dropped, largely because of the foreign disturbance, and the same influence had its depressing effect upon other major lines of American endeavor.—

Appeasement

Now all of this is to be changed. There have been similar periods in our history of the last six years, under the name of breathing spells or business appeasement. They have not been as numerous as the national emergencies that have crowded each other at the rate of about one every two months and have called for the granting of greater powers to the executive, but there have been plenty. And now we are led to believe we are to get it again.

Wall Street took heart and for the second consecutive day prices advanced. Gains of 1 and 2 points were fairly well distributed among the pivotal stocks and the market averaged up about half a point.

It is true that trading dwindled almost out of sight on this rally, which the technicians say is very bad. Only 645,330 shares changed hands on the big board and while 521 issues advanced against only 85 to show minus signs, there were only 5 new highs for the year compared with 21 new lows. The Government bond list did well and the domestic corporate bond list was nicely spattered with gains. Prices were higher at the opening and the gains were well held.

News that helped bring about this situation, other than the above mentioned quiet abroad, included Secretary Morgenthau's suggestion at the present stage of recovery it might be well to change the pay roll tax schedule to keep the levies lower than had been scheduled for the next three years. President Roosevelt backed the Secretary of the Treasury and said the Administration was working on a change in the social security reserve provision. All of which holds out a promise to business of a reduced tax rate.

Eccles and Economy

This followed the previous lip service given the cause of Government economy by Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board and high priest of spending. He admitted that a majority of business men and members of Congress are opposed to the New Deal's spending policy and he even talked of balancing the budget, which was a live subject some years ago, but is not even expected by the conservatives at this time. The business community realizes it will not be done until the executive branch of the Government takes the lead.

These were straws in the wind, however, which spread some cheer among investors today. If appeasement continues at this rate it may even be that the President will not name Robert M. Hutchins to the vacancy on the SEC. The President likes a joke, but possibly the Amlie appointment to the ICC has satisfied this desire.

Treasury Bonds Gain

Advancing tendencies were the rule in a quiet listed bond session today. United States Treasury issues led the upswing in best grade investment media. Most domestic corporate bonds of the speculative varieties were in quiet demand. The foreign department also had a few orders to execute, but here and there evidences of uneasiness regarding the European situation still were apparent. Turnover in all bonds was only $5,190,000, which is a poverty figure for the bond brokers.

The tendency of banks to accumulate long term Treasury bonds, because they have nothing else to do with their enormous reserves, was reflected in gains of 1-32 to 13-32 point. The 2⅛ per cent issue managed to establish a fresh high on these gains. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations also were firm. Telephone debentures were marked upward and one of the 3¼ per cent issues attained a record level. Best grade power and light, railroad and utility liens also were firm.

Rail Issues Higher

Railroad bonds that have fairly good ratings were marked a little higher in the corporate section. Southern Pacific and New York Central bonds were leaders of this trend. Borderline and default rails were of lesser interest to investors. Alleghany Corp. bonds were good, and small gains appeared in utility holding issues. Industrial convertibles were marked upward with related equities. Communications and local traction bonds took the road upward.

Italian bonds moved briskly forward in the foreign department, on expectations that Italian aspirations may be satisfied through discussions with France. The German group was firm, and Hungarians also advanced. The Scandinavian issues merely held to former levels, and changes also were minor in Australians and Canadians. Latin-American dollar bonds were higher where changed.

Italy Reports Big Output Gain

Rome, Italy, March 24.—Italy's effort for self-sufficiency has resulted in an increase of 10 per cent in employment and step-ups to 57 per cent in production of basic industries during the past 10 years, it is revealed today by statistics compiled by the Association of Italian Corporations.

The biggest increase is in the production of electric power brought about through utilization of natural resources, including the capping of 200 wells of live steam at Larderello and turning them to the production of 32,800,000 kilowatt hours of electricity daily. Larderello has become the country's sixth largest producer of electric power.

Only two basic industries, textiles and building, have failed to rise above 1929 peaks during the last ten years, the figures show. Textile production is 83 per cent of 1929 and building is 90 per cent.

West Says East Rules National Rail Association

Chicago, March 24 (AP).—The Western Association of Railway Executives locked the doors for their monthly meeting today without commenting on reports that the session would bring forth a criticism of the Association of American Railroads. The Chicago Tribune said there was a growing resentment among Chicago railroad executives against the association, several prominent Western officials sharing the opinion that the Eastern roads exerted too much domination in the organization.

C. E. Johnston, chairman of the Western Association, described the meeting as routine, but said some new business might be brought up. He announced that R. V. Fletcher, who heads the legal department of the national association, had been invited to be present to discuss the railroad legislative program.

The Tribune reported that Fletcher was coming to Chicago to try to persuade the Western roads to support the railroad relief program worked out by President Roosevelt's committee of six. Also on the agenda, the Tribune said, was a discussion of proposals made by Luther M. Walter, co-trustee of the Chicago Great Western Railroad, for the handling of labor and other rail problems.

Walter presented his recommendations in Washington Tuesday before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. He remarked that there was "something fundamentally wrong" with the Association of American Railroads, and that it was run by "the rich roads for the rich roads."

Sound Dollar Held Basis of Social Security

Fostering of Industry And Commerce Also Seen as Vital Factor

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser,
International News Service Economic Commentator.

Ogden, Utah (en route to California), March 24.—The House Ways and Means Committee has been developing an authoritative body of expert opinion on how to make social security more secure by revising the present law.

However, even if such sound advice as has recently been given is accepted, Congress can't hope to dispose of this subject once for all. The experience of other countries operating in the realm of social insurance is that the estimates of actuaries must be reviewed every few years in the light of actual experience. The current record makes several basic principles crystal clear.

First, economic security cannot be magically created by passing a law. It is part and parcel of a healthily functioning national economy, which through the years will turn

Redskin Chief in Powow With Sioux Brothers

Lodge Marks 100th Birthday At Alexandria

Senator Johnson Chief Speaker at Odd Fellows' Fete

The Washington Post Bureau,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Temple 2767
Delivery Service, Phone Alex. 1400.

Senator Johnson, of Colorado, who is the grand marshal of the Sovereign Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows, spoke at the banquet last night given by Potomac Lodge of Alexandria in celebration of the 100th anniversary of the lodge. His talk was on the principles of the order and praise of the local lodge for 100 years of continuous service to the community and adherence to the teachings of the order. He paid tribute to the founders of the lodge and officers who have followed throughout the years, keeping alive the traditions of the pioneers.

Members of the lodge met at 6 p. m. for a short business session, the banquet starting at 7 o'clock, with W. Clifton Cunningham as general chairman, and the welcome by the city manager, Carl L. Budwesky. More than 200 members of the order and their families attended.

Among special guests were past grand sires William A. Pettenger, of Minnesota, and Park P. Deans, of Virginia; Edward G. Ludvigsen, of Maryland, secretary of the Sovereign Grand Lodge; past grand masters Wilburn Cartwright, of Oklahoma, Thomas B. Morton, O. V. Hanger and C. V. Robinson, of Virginia; Grand Master Hiram Johnson, of Washington, D. C.; Representatives Howard W. Smith and Colgate W. Darden, of Virginia; Guy Glossbrenner, grand representative of the Grand Lodge; Gen. William F. Becker, department commander of the District of Columbia, and Maj. Charles Lampe, of the District of Columbia.

Idle Claims Decline

Announcement was made yesterday that the Alexandria office of the Virginia State Employment Service had reported a decline in claims for jobless benefits for February. Approximately 160 workers made initial claims for unemployment during February, as against 260 in January.

Payments to unemployed workers who made claims through the Alexandria office reached a total of $8,854.17 for the month. The local office serves Alexandria City, Fairfax, Prince William and Arlington counties.

Dr. Cousins to Talk

Dr. Solon B. Cousins, of Richmond, who is conducting revival meetings each night in the First Baptist Church, will talk to the adult department of the Sunday school tomorrow morning, when the young people's department is invited to join in the service. The revivals will continue through Wednesday.

Junior Choir Sings at New Woodside Church

Extra! Browns' Pilot Happy Over Outlook

Frad Haney Expects Big Things From His Scrappy Club

San Antonio, Tex., March 24 (AP).—It's spring again and the St. Louis Browns are at the top of their rare shadow boxing form.

Most amazing bunch of gym fighters in the business, the Brownies, entangled in sort of an "always a bridesmaid but never a bride" complex, are again winning exhibition games every time they tee off.

Only last spring they took 18 straight games to top the Grapefruit League, breezing. Then they risked their marbles in a "keeps" game up in the American League and finished a comfortable seventh.

True it is that the opposition, to date, hasn't been anything more serious than the gasping Philadelphia Phillies, but the Brown hitting and pitching has Manager Fred Haney in a fairly jovial mood—and Brown managers in jovial mods don't come on bargain counters.

Two Rookies Strive

Haney, an intelligent gent who left a perfectly good job at Toledo to give the Browns a transfusion, thus becoming the third St. Louis manager in as many seasons, may carry his shadow boxers right on into a good fight this year.

Two rookie pitchers, one a left-hander and the other normal, have come out of the Browns' present winning spree as potential assets. Southpaw Louis Tost, whose record of 11 won and 16 lost with Hollywood last season wouldn't exactly compete with a three-alarm fire, has loked great.

Big Bill Trotter, a hefty boy who won 22 and lost 9 with San Antonio, the Browns' prize Texas League farm, is the other hurler who may jump square into the Brownie staff. That isn't too big a job for a climber, for Haney admits he could use a better mound staff.

McQuinn on First

First base belongs to George McQuinn, a .324 bomber who is tearing the hide off the ball in spring games and third base is definitely Harlond Clift's property.

Two rookies making hay while Don Heffner and Red Kress, the double-play combination of last year, still remain holdouts, are looking so good that Heffner and Kress had better start weakening. Johnny Berardino and Sig Gryska, San Antonio's second sacker and shortstop, who can field like velvet and hit over .300—in the Texas League—are sensations of the exhibition games.

Beau Bell, Mel Almada and Myril Hoag are the most prominent fly shaggers on hand, but Ed Silber, still another San Antonio ball buster, and Joe Grace, a neat package from Memphis, who batted in more than 100 runs last year, are pushing them.

Ix-Boosters, Blues Vie for Cage Title

Richmond, Va., March 24 (AP).—Ix-Boosters of Charlottesville, and St. Joseph's Villa of Richmond, meet in the Blues Armory here tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. for the State Girls basketball "championship trophy" awarded by the Richmond Basketball Commission.

Both teams have good records in their respective sections. The Villa team lost only three games in the last three seasons.

The probable line-ups are: Ix-Boosters—Capt. Olive Pickering, Jeanette Sieler, Carolyn Shippe, forwards; Louise Reese, Ruth Davis and Ada Houchens, guards. Villa—Mary Gordon, Gertrude Stevens and Gertrude McGuire, forwards; Regina Maguire, Mary Powell and Veronica Tiller, guards.

Dupre Blasts N.B.A. for Failure To Recognize Him in Its Ratings

Tony, Who Meets Dell 'Orto Here Monday, to Demand Ranking With Top-Flight Fighters

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Tony Dupre, the blond Italian belter from the fridgid fastness of Manchester, N. H., pointed an accusing finger at the National Boxing Association yesterday—according to Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, and said the boys were playing politics and currying favor when they forgot to mention Tony's name in ratings released last week.

Herr Ahearn, whose sudden interest in Dupre can be traced to Monday night's program at the Arena, which will feature Toney in a ten-round bout against Vincent Dell 'Orto, waxed frothy at the N. B. A.'s refusal to recognize Dupre's fistic talents. He had his minister of propaganda strike off a turgid piece excoriating the N. B. A. for its laxity, and setting forth Dupre's mitten merits.

The charge is that Joey Archibald and Al Mancini were rated by the N. B. A., and Dupre ignored, because Ed Foster, a member of the ratings committee, lives in Providence. Since Rrchibald and Mancini hail from Providence that automatically prejudices Foster in their favor, according to the indictment, and naturally makes him the sworn foe of Dupre, who comes from far away Manchester.

". . . ust don't forget," reads the Ahearn—Dupre—Minister of Propaganda tome, "That I beat Scalzo, and Scalzo stopped Archibald in two rounds in New York. I shall demand a high ratting if I beat Dell 'Orto Monday. Just why Dupre will demand a higher rating for beating Dell 'Orto the epistle does not exactly make clear, but you can bet they have a good reason.

In another paragraph the Ahearn—Dupre—Minister of Propaganda document states, "With a record like I have I cannot see why the National Boxing Association would not give me a ranking with Scalzo, Archibald and Rodak. Incidentally, I am fighting in Dell 'Orto a better fighter than Scalzo, Archibald, and Rodak, and I've never refused to meet any fighter. In Washington I would take no soft touch." The implication is that he'd take a soft touch in any other town—but not here.

Dupre, quoth Herr Ahearn, grim determination dripping from every syllable, will demand a showdown on the ratings when he weighs in Monday at the District Boxing Commission. He'll lay his cards on the table, and if the National Boxing Association is up to par, pick 'em up—still unranked.

The supporting card for the show includes Vic Finazzo versus Frankie Wills in a six-rounder; and fours involving Billy Hatcher versus Syd Silver; Bob Robey versus Vince Manfredo, nd Pete Carringe versus Mickey Hines.

man and gathered about the merchant and listened eagerly to what he had to say. Our old man went on quoting from Paine, and Voltaire and Rousseau in opposition and that was when the fellow called him a windbag.

Our old man said the chap who stuck to him was a fellow who never had anything whatever to say and for that reason most people thought him an introvert. Our old man said he had noticed that if you did not talk at all, people thought there was something wrong with you, and if you talked too much you were a windbag. He said the reason this chap never said anything was because he could scarcely read or write and was generally ignorant and did not want to expose his deficiencies any more than necessary.

Afterwards the chap kicked up a gold mine over around Telluride and as a rich man he took to talking quite a bit. Our old man said nobody called him a windbag, however. In fact, when he went traveling newspaper reporters would interview him at length and quite seriously on matters of public moment. Our old man always got a great biff out of reading these interviews.

Our old man said he had listened to a lot of speeches in his time and had done a lot of reading and he had come to the conclusion that about 75 per cent of what passed for profound thought was nothing but wind. He said he once took the trouble of reading an issue of the Congressional Record from cover to cover and tried to analyze what was reported therein of the utterances of men who were paid nice salaries to do the thinking for the country and that he had discovered that the utterances were mainly wind.

He said if you read any speech or proclamation by any public official and analyzed it, you would find that it was mostly wind and usually borrowed from the windiness of someone else. He said he admitted to being a windbag, all right, but one thing about him he was not costing the taxpayers anything and that was more than a lot of other windbags could say.

Sportsmen's Dinner At Hagerstown, Mar. 30

Hagerstown, March 24.—Buffalo, elk and antelope meat will be served to each of the guests at the annual dinner of the Conococheague Sportsman's Club here on March 30, E. Aldine Lakin, president, announced today. Mr. Lakin is supplying meat from the buffalo he shot last fall, while Roger Q. Cook and William Danzer, members of the club, are providing antelope and elk which they shot in Wyoming last fall. The State Conservation Department is sending the chef from its yacht, Dupont, to prepare 500 pounds of rock fish for the dinner.

Hagerstown Plans New Archery Range

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, March 24.—A range where the Old Dominion Arechery Tournament can be held this year will be built probably on the City Farm under the supervision of the Antietam Archery Club and Miss Jean Tenney, of Clearspring, Md., national woman's archery champion for the last two years.

Every since Miss Tenney, an instructor in the Hagerstown High School, won the national championship at Lancaster, Pa., in 1937 and defended it successfully at Los Angeles, Calif., last summer, archery has become one of the leading sports here.

D. C. Boy Honored

Manlius, N. Y., March 24.—John K. Jouett, son of Col. and Mrs. J. H. Jouett, formerly of Hagerstown, Md., and now a resident of Washington, has been awarded the Manlius School minor M for skiing by the student athletic council, Col. Guido F. Verbeck, headmaster, announced today.

W.-L. Has Veteran Lacrosse Team

Lexington, Va., March 24 (AP).—Washington and Lee's strongest lacross squad in the two years the Generals have engaged in the sport will send a veteran team into competition in the newly-formed Dixie Lacross League this spring.

The Generals are coached by Dr. Larkin Farinholt, former International star. Johnny Alnutt, of Baltimore, is team captain.

Last year the Generals had one of the Nation's high scorers in Sherman Henderson, center, of Roanoke. Henderson was named on the All-Dixie squad.

The schedule:

April 1, Navy at Annapolis; 13, Virginia at Charlottesville; 22, Swarthmore at Swarthmore, Pa.; 29, Duke at Lexington; May 5, Duke at Durham; 6, North Cadolina at Chapel Hill; 13, Virginia at Lexington; 18, Loyola of Baltimore at Lexington; 19, North Carolina at Lexington.

Jasper Legion Post Sets Baseball Tryouts

Sargeant Jasper Legion Post baseball team, 1938 champion of the District Legion Junior League, will hold practice and tryouts tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. on the Reservoir Diamond, Sixteenth and Kennedy streets northwest. Any candidates unable to report for the first workout should call Mark Jackson at CH. 1392 after 6 p. m. to learn future practice dates.

Holt Named

Cumberland, Md., March 24.—Lawrence C. Holt has been named fleet captain of the Deep Creek Yacht Club, which will hold its first races Memorial Day. Cyrus Bowers was selected chairman of the race committee, and John Mordock chairman of the protest committee.

Patrons to Meet To Map Self-Help College's Projects

Oakland, Md., March 24 (AP).—The Patrons Association of the self-help college at Mountain Lake Park, striving to put the school on a self-sustaining basis, will meet here Tuesday to discuss means of raising money.

Farm and garden projects already have been arranged, and plans to manufacture and sell mops have been discussed.

Students attend the college on a work-your-way basis, contributing so many hours of work for tuition. The garden and farm projects, it is hoped, will help keep the kitchen stocked, while other projects will be designed to raise cash.

The Patrons Association sponsored the reopening of the school March 6.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase Recreation Center Dedicated Before Crowd of 400, Mostly Children

9213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone SHepherd 4200.

Bethesda. — In the presence of about 400 persons, mostly children, the new Bethesda-Chevy Chase recreational center, on an 18-acre tract on Norwood drive west of Wisconsin avenue, was formally dedicated yesterday afternoon by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Keys to the community house, which will house the center, were turned over by Park Commissioner Lacy Shaw to Thomas Earle Hampton, president of the board of county commissioners, who accepted them on behalf of the people of Montgomery County. Other speakers included Emory H. Bogley, member of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, who presided; Irving C. Root, chief engineer of the park and planning commission; Frederic P. Lee, former member of the commission; Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission; Mrs. John H. Werner, chairman of the Bethesda Youth Research Council, and the Rev. Henry J. Whiting, member of the council.

Root made the principal talk and gave a history of the park site from 1794. The land formerly was owned by the United States Department of Agriculture and was operated as an animal husbandry farm until 1930 when these activities were moved to Beltsville. The tract was deeded to the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission for park purposes April 26, 1937, by an act of Congress.

Plan Facilities for All

Root said the commission planned to develop the center into a meeting place for civic organizations and into a recreational center with facilities for everyone "from babies to grandparents." Present plans, he said, call for headquarters for Boy and Girl Scout troops, tennis courts, athletic fields, football, baseball, softball, handball, basketball and volley bill courts, picnic groves and, eventually a, swimming pool. The present administration building has been renovated and remodeled for use as a clubhouse and community center.

The new community center was described by Settle as "a monument to co-operative effort." He said the efforts of Bogley and his associates had secured for the Bethesda-Chevy Chase communities a park center of incalculable value.

Both Shaw and Hampton pledged the services of their boards to the people of the community of the new recreational center. Whiting said he envisioned the new center as becoming "a little corner of heaven for boys and girls."

Fifth Bill Enacted

Called upon by Root to pay a tribute to Bogley for his activities in securing the park for the county, Lee said the chairman had drafted no less than five bills which he presented to Senator Tydings and other Maryland representatives in Congress giving the Government authority to deed the land to the Park and Planning Commission. The fifth bill finally was enacted in 1936, he said, and as a result Bogley was awarded the cup given annually by the Montgomery County Civic Federation.

Mrs. Werner read a list of local civic organizations and individuals who had contributed furniture, articles and equipment for the building.

Mrs. Milliken Leads Singing

The program was rounded out with group singing led by Mrs. Julia Milliken, and selections by the combined school bands of Bethesda and Chevy Chase, under the direction of Raymond A. Hart.

Arrangements were handled by a committe consisting of Mrs. George W. Bryan, chairman; Miss Maud Duvall, Emory H. Bogley, Hackett H. Downes, Mrs. W. Kempton Crosby, W. Bradford Bayliss, Mrs. Preston C. Alexander, John L. Imirie, Mrs. John H. Werner, Mrs. Arthur Hilland, J. William Mohler, the Rev. Henry J. Whiting, Mrs. William N. Morrell and Mrs. Howard B. Richardson.

Sanctuary Planned

Brookmont—Establishment of a bird sanctuary in Cabin John Parkway is planned by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the Brookmont Garden Club was notified this week. The club made a plea for the sanctuary last month, after hearing a talk by Dr. Paul Bartsch of the Smithsonian Institute.

The club will judge entries in the bird-house building contest being held for students in the Glen Echo-Cabin John elementary school at 7:30 p. m. Monday. The prize-winning birdhouses will be installed in the new sanctuary.

Citizens Candidates

Chevy Chase.—Residnets of Chevy hase View have nominated T. S. Jackson R. E. Engel and C. P. Powell as candidates for election to the Citizens Committee, the governing body of the village, which will be held April 11. John W. Self, George W. Ashworth and Lawrence Smoot are the members whose terms are expiring. Self Ashworth declined to stand for re-election.

Clubs Install Officers

Kenwood.—Newly-elected officers of the Venture Club were installed by Miss Mary Burke, of the Washington Soroptimist Club, at a meeting at the Kenwood Golf and Country Club. Talks also were given by Mrs. Mary Catherine Lewis, National Venture Club chairman, nad Mrs. Anna Peck, president of the Soroptimist Club of Montgomery County, who presided.

New officers are Hazel Zoerner, president; Diantha Bowie, vice president; Margaret Graves, secretary; Mary Frances Trader, treasurer, and Aria McGinniss, historian. Membership in the club is limited to young professional nad business women of the counyt.

Takoma Park Jubilee

Takoma Park.—Days when a group of commuters met at the Takoma Park railroad station and formed the Takoma Park Citizens' Association 50 years ago, will be recalled tonight when the group celebrates its golden jubilee at the Takoma library, Fifth and Cedar street northwest at 8 p. m.

Speakers on the program arranged by Dr. William Hooker will include John B. Kinnear, former mayor of the town; L. R. Grabill, engineer and former councilman, and Mrs. Mary Lamond White, vice president, who will show pictures taken in the community 50 years ago. Dr. Guy Clinton, president, will be toastmaster. The Mandoleers, led by Herman von Bernewitz will be on the musical entertainment with Leonard W. Kephart as soloist.

Urge Referendums

Takoma Park—Proposed legislation to change the municipal election laws was opposed at a special meeting of the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce here yesterday. A telegram was sent to the Montgomery and Prince Georges delegations in the State Legislature stating that "as a matter of principal, vital amendments to the town charter should be submitted to the voters of the town for referendum." O. W. Youngblood, president, presided.

Parish Restoration Nears Completion

Williamsburg, Va., March 24 (AP). The $100,000 restoration of Bruton Parish Episcopal Church, one of the show places of this history-laden city, will be completed within the next two months, restoration officials said today.

Funds for the project, the largest under way in Williamsburg at the present, were raised by Dr. W. A. R. Goodwin, rector emeritus of the church, and Colonial Williamsburg, Inc., the Rockefeller organization engaged in restoring the city's colonial areas.

My client is erecting five 3-bedroom houses, two of which will have bedroom and bath on first floor with 2 large bedrooms and bath on second floor. They are placed on large wooded lots located within 2 blocks from 2 bus lines near high school and grade school. You may select your own plans and incorporate in your home many refinements not found in speculative houses. To the right type of people these houses will be sold on terms of $500 cash and $62.50 per month; which will be reduced in 3 years to $37.50 per month. Federal Housing not necessary but houses will be committed. The price range will be slightly above $8,000. Occupancy early summer.

Private Lives Gives Low-Down on Clark Gable in Sunday's Post

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Today's hand is contributed by D. S. in which he vindicates wildly optimistic bidding by making the most of favorable location of honors and executing a Vienna Coup double squeeze to win a grand slam, at no trump.

He explains his play as follows:

"Here is a hand I played in a duplicate in Boston, which is a truly lucky one. We had had tough breaks and decided to shoot for tops.

"The opening lead was the diamond nine which I took. Then I laid down the spade ace, and finessed the jack. I next tried the heart finesse, which was successful, and cashed the heart ace, discarding a club from dummy. I entered the North hand with a diamond, laid down the spade king and ran three more diamonds.

"The last diamond forced East to part with the club nine, I threw the heart ten. West threw the club seven, I took the last two tricks with the ace-jack of clubs making a grand slam on two finesses, Vienna Coup, and a double squeeze. This is the luckiest hand I have ever played or seen."

"Vienna Coup" is simply the name for one of the plays sometimes necessary to develop a squeeze. It is to deliberately cash a high card, setting up a winner for the adversary, to later squeeze him out of it. If the declarer's high card were not first removed, it would block the squeeze.

In the hand contributed by D. S., actually two Vienna Coups were made; one when South took the king of spades, establishing the queen in the West hand, leaving the spade eight as a menace card; the other when South took the ace of hearts, setting up the king in the East hand, leaving the ten as a second menace card.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

More Dilution?

A GROUP of employes in the Interior Department, who entertain some rare opinions on the various Federal employe unions, are organizing a body to be known as the Public Service Association, which would look to "an informed public opinion" as its guide-star in all action.

A public debut is soon to be made. Its hope is for a Nation-wide organization of Federal employes. It does not believe that the interests of labor and Government employes are the same. Sandwiched in a stout declaration of principles—which this column has read—are lines that twinkle, like this:

"The C. I. O. divided the A. F. of L. and also set up a rival Government employe affiliation known as the United Federal Workers. A third Federal organization, known as the National Federation of Federal Employes, further divides and dilutes the numerical persuasiveness of Government employes. It is conceivable that one might encounter on the same spring morning in the halls of Congress, white-vested lobbyists for all three of these groups with conflicting panaceas in their separate brief cases . . ."

FROM ITS BEDROCK of a program based on following "an informed public opinion," the newcomer to the personnel field believes it can "secure most effective conduct of public personnel affairs without sending a single pussyfoot in spats to bob in and out of Congressmen's offices with trivial troubles . . . this is a group that would enhance its own careers by lifting the public service, who would dignify the public service in the estimation of the people." For further information on the organization, Joseph Bly, of the Interior Department, may be consulted.

NOTATIONS: Washington's best cocktail parties—those given in honor of Gov. Blanton Winship by the Puerto Rican Trade Council—comes up again Tuesday afternoon at the Mayflower Hotel. The Governor will be in town that day and one of the P. R. T. C.'s functions, which have become a tradition now, is happily in the offing . . . A bill to revise the apportionment quotas on the basis of present population figures (H. R. 3997), has been introduced by Representative Boren, of Oklahoma . . . The famed office management department of the Tennessee Valley Authority has come through with some general layout qualifications for Federal offices, and some of the points emphasized should interest the stenographer who complained to this column that her desk faces the glare of a window while her requests for its removal to a more likely spot falls on deaf ears. Some of the TVA's qualifications are: Employes should not face the light; those employes who do the closest work should be located nearest the light; aisles should be at least 3 feet wide; individuals having frequent visitors should be near exists, etc . . .

THE IMPORTANT Society for Personnel Administration makes note of another innovation toward bringing the Federal personnel nearer to efficiency. The innovation comes from the classification section of the U. S. Housing personnel division. It is a position description questionnaire which on the back side presents a list of 33 qualifying comments or phrases, some of which would apply to any given position. After the employe has written out a statement of his duties on the front of the sheet, the immediate supervisor checks the pertinent items in the list, thus providing the classification investigator with a more clear-cut picture of the job. This questionnaire is supplemented by a six-page statement designed to assist the employe and the supervisor in describing the duties of a position.

Whew! The question is, what will it all amount to after such a tedious process has been finished?

Bob Burns Says—

Imagine a man who builds himself a new house out in Richmond, Calif., an' is jes' about ready to move in when somebody orders a wreckin' crew, represents that he's the owner, an' orders the house torn down! The crew goes to work an' when the real owner appears, he finds his home in ruins; "I guess somebody didn't like the looks of my new home," he says, which is puttin' it mild.

Makes me think back to the time that Grandpa Snazzy wanted to jack up his house an' move it to a vacant lot in another part of town. The movers got mixed up in the address an' moved the people's house next door. They was away for a two weeks' visit an' Grandpa Snazzy was called out of town himself—so nobody knew anythin' was wrong till he an' all of 'em got back, as it happened—the same day! An' then—what fireworks! The people next door liked the new location of their house so well on Grandpa Snazzy's lot that they wanted it to stay there. "All right," says Grandpa Snazzy," you trade me the lot where your house was, an' it's a deal! If you like to know the truth, I was movin' my house to git away from you people anyhow!"

Va. Mortality Rate Dip Laid to Three Factors

Richmond, Va., March 24 (AP).—Virginia's decline in deaths from 31,312 in 1937 to 29,422 last year, as well as its generally improved public health record, is attributed by Dr. I. C. Riggin, State health commissioner, to "improved water supply, improved sanitation systems and increased public knowledge of proper food values that tend to prolong life."

Memorial Rites Slated

Williamsburg, Va., March 24 (AP).—Memorial services are planned for April 3 to honor Dr. Thomas Roderick Dew, thirteenth president of the College of William and Mary.

Litchford, Ashby Put On Conservation Board

Richmond, Va., March 24 (AP).—Mayor L. E. Litchford of Lynchburg, and James Ashby, clerk of the Stafford County Circuit Court, were appointed today to the State conservation commission.

Mayor Litchford succeeds C. S. Carter, of Bristol, and Ashby takes the place of Braden Vandeventer, of Norfolk, whose terms expire December 31. The terms of the new appointees will expire December 31, 1942.

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Peter Rabbit Watches

All that Danny and Nanny Meadow had seen of the fancy flying of Harrier the Marsh Hawk high over the Green Meadows had been seen from the dear Old Briarpatch by Peter Rabbit and little Mrs. Peter. They had watched and had understood from the first what it meant.

Harrier circled around Mrs. Harrier high above them. Suddenly he dropped as if he had lost the use of his wings. Over he went in a somersault, shot up a little way, dropped, turned over two or three times, then again climbed up to where Mrs. Harrier was circling about.

"He's crazy," declared Peter.

"I've seen you just as crazy when you were trying to show off for my benefit, jumping around and kicking up your heels in the silliest manner. I don't like those Marsh Hawks, but just the same I will say that the way that fellow can tumble about in the air yet not fall is wonderful. It may be silly but it is wonderful and that is more than can be said of your foolishness, Peter," retorted Mrs. Peter.

It was true. Peter knew it. So wisely he said no more about that particular subject. "I don't like the signs," said he.

"What signs?" demanded little Mrs. Peter at once becoming anxious.

"Have you forgotten already?" asked Peter.

"I don't know what you are talking about. Do talk sense," retorted Mrs. Peter.

"I am talking sense," protested Peter. "We've seen Harrier perform this way before and I noticed, if you didn't, that every time he went through all that foolishness over the Green Meadows he and Mrs. Harrier later had their nest on the Green Meadows. So I'm sort of guessing that the same thing will happen this year."

"I hope you are guessing wrong," snapped Mrs. Peter. She spoke sharply because she was beginning to worry, and worry often makes people speak sharply.

"So do I," agreed Peter. "But it does sort of look as if they decided where they will build a nest and the Harrier does his showing off above the place. Of course I haven't anything to worry about. Neither have you. They won't try to catch us."

"I don't suppose it has entered that foolish head of yours that even if we aren't in any special danger from them the babies will be. Neither one of that pair would miss an opportunity to catch a young Rabbit. I don't like them for neighbors. So there!" said Mrs. Peter.

"No more do I," replied Peter. "Perhaps I'm wrong and they will go off somewhere else to nest, but I doubt it. If you are wise you will make the nursery in the Old Briarpatch instead of out in the open on the Green Meadows as you so often have done."

"They are both coming down now. Do you suppose they are coming down on the ground?" Mrs. Peter retreated close to the entrance to one of their private little paths through the brambles of the dear Old Briar-patch.

Peter held his ground. Harrier and Mrs. Harrier came down in the grass just a little way off. They paid no attention to Peter. The truth is they had eyes for no one but each other just then. Peter sat up very straight the better to watch them. Mrs. Harrier stretched her wings then settled them in place carefully. Then she began to preen her feathers. She was quite particular about them.

Meanwhile Harrier was walking around her, bowing before her and doing his best to win her attention and approval. Now and then he would take to his wings and fly around her only to alight again and resume his bobbing and bowing. To this she seemed to give little attention.

Peter had seen that performance before also, and it made him sure that he was right. "We are going to have them for neighbors. I know it," said he to Mrs. Peter a little later. Peter was right.

Offutt Quits, Lodge Named ABC Head

Citizens' Federation President Succeeds Ailing Chairman

Thomas Ellis Lodge, past president of the Federation of Citizens' Associations, was appointed chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday shortly after the commissioners accepted with regret the resignation of George W. Offutt.

LODGE

The new chairman, prominent in civic affairs for many years, will be sworn into office Tuesday for a 4-year term.

Seriously ill for several months, Offutt informed the commissioners that his doctors believe "it is impossible to tell when I can return to my duties with the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, if ever."

National U. Graduate

A graduate of National University, Lodge, who is 41, will be the youngest member of the board. He came to Washington in 1917 to work in the office of Senator Wolcott, later working for Senator Ball.

Lodge was appointed an assistant district attorney in 1922 and served until 1926, when he resigned to enter private practice.

The other members of the board are Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, whose term expires February 1, 1941, and Isaac Gans, whose term expires February 1, 1940.

Offutt was appointed chairman of the board in 1934 for a four-year term and last year was reappointed for a similar term. Salary for this office is $5,000 a year.

In his letter of resignation, offutt said:

"My doctors advise me that it is impossible to tell when I can return to my duties with the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, if ever. As you know, I already have this year been obliged to be absent on account of my physical condition during the last two years.

Offutt Commended

"Under these circumstances, it seems to me to be only fair to the public, to the commissioners and to the other members of the board that I resign my position, which I do to take effect forthwith.

"I cannot pass the opportunity without expressing to you my thanks for the many courtesies which you have always extended to me, and the help which you have always given.

The commissioners commended Offutt for his ability and integrity in serving the interests of the publice and the city on the beverage board.

Boy Gets $500 Reward for Pearls HeForgotHeFound

White Plains, N. Y., March 24 (INS).—Dick McGowan, 19, Westchester High School student, learned today the pearl necklace he had been carrying his pocked for two days was worth $10,000.

The boy was more amazed when he returned the gems to their owner, Mrs. Clarenda G. Friend, after reading her advertisement in a newspaper, and received $500 reward.

Dick found the pearls on a street corner and asked a woman passerby if she had dropped them. When she said "No," the youth put the pearls in his pocket and forgot them until he read Mrs. Friend's ad.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Just get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a reliable "WOMAN'S" tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and those disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life.

Pinkham's is WELL WORTH trying.

Thrifty Garageman Killed As Home-Made Gas Explodes

Henderson Freeman, of Upper Marlboro, Mangled to Death, Helper Injured and Establishment Wrecked by Blast

Henderson Freeman, 47-year-old garageman, of Upper Marlboro, Md., paid with his life yesterday for trying to be thrifty. He was killed instantly, and the front of his establishment, near Upper Marlboro, was wrecked, when a drum of home-made acetylene exploded.

With calcium carbide and water, Freeman made his own gas for an acetylene welding torch. He believed, according to friends, it was less costly to make than to purchase the gas.

Shortly after 8 a. m. yesterday, Freeman and his helper, Arthur Buck, 17, finished mixing enough carbide and water to last several months. They poured the mixture into a 100-gallon tank and moved it across the garage floor. Then a gasoline truck drove up and Buck went out to supervise the filling of his pumps.

He had just reached the door, when the carbide tank exploded with a detonation heard over a radius of 7 miles. Splintered wood and glass were showered over an area of more than a block from the garage.

Young Buck, although struck on the back with a piece of tin roofing, escaped serious injury.

Investigators said they believed that pressure inside the carbide drum was built to explosion point by jostling as the tank was dragged across the garage floor.

Freeman's garage was about a mile from Upper Marlboro on the Crane Highway.
